TRIBUNE WRITER OUSTED BY DUCE TELLS HIS STORY

Expelled for Baring Truth About Italy.

Goes to Ethiopia

Will Barber, assistant correspondent for The Chicago Tribune in London, is en route to Ethiopia to report events in the Italian-Ethiopian dispute. Mr. Barber arrived at Suez Thursday after a fast airplane trip from London and sailed immediately for Ethiopia.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 14.—Premier Mussolini is drawing the curtains of secrecy closer about what he fears to be the collapsing fortunes of Italy's Fascist dictatorship.

No one can now remain in Italy and tell the truth about Italian finances or about Mussolini's African adventure, which has grown to vaster proportions than he thought it would when he started trouble with Ethiopia over a trivial incident.

Ousted for Telling Truth.

I have just arrived in the free air of France after having spent 24 hours in the hands of Italian police because I attempted to convey to the American public a truthful account of Italian conditions.

By special order of the ministry of interior, of which Mussolini personally holds the portfolio, I was expelled from Italy. No causes or explanations were given. Three hours after a plain clothes agent of Sig. Pedace, chief of the section for foreigners of the Rome prefecture of police, placed me under arrest I was put on a train for Turin and conducted to the French frontier by two armed guards.

My request to be allowed to go on a direct train was refused. My request to communicate with American authorities was refused. My request to be allowed at least to go home for clothes was refused.

Five Others Expelled.

It is customary to grant at least 48 hours in ejecting foreigners. Five newspaper men have been expelled from Italy since March under similar circumstances—for sending out news displeasing to Mussolini's press and propaganda bureau, which is run by his son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano.

The brutal abruptness and dispatch with which I was ejected from the country was not according to police wishes, but on the direct orders of the ministry of interior and perhaps of Mussolini himself. When I asked for permission to leave the next day, Pedace tried to obtain this permission. He telephoned to the ministry of interior. The reply was: "No, get him out of the country immediately."

I had lived in Italy 7 years. I have household property there and personal affairs which require liquidation.

Held Incommunicado 24 Hours.

The reason for this precipitate expulsion was to prevent my communicating with any one. I was held incommunicado throughout the 24 hours I was in the hands of the police, except for being allowed to phone my wife and request her to pack a few clothes. I was ordered by Pedace to speak to her only in Italian.

My expulsion took place four days after Mussolini had proclaimed his defiance of what he termed "so-called public opinion" in his Sardinian speech. He was fretting under the statement which had just been publicly made by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin of Great Britain that Italy was a dictatorship and that public opinion did not exist there.

Some of the episodes in my 24 hours in the hands of Mussolini's police were farcical, and I am constrained not to mention them for the obvious reason of not making more victims of Mussolini's ire. It is no secret that the police in Italy have their hands full taking care of Mussolini's political victims, and that they thoroughly dislike it.

Facts of the Expulsion.

The facts of my expulsion follow: Last Saturday I telephoned two articles to London, for transmission to Chicago, the censorship in Rome making it impossible to send them directly by cable. One article dealt with economic facts about Italy and was printed in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. For all the facts in the article I have documentation. In fact, I quoted most of my sources.

Another article dealt with the unpopularity of the African campaign. Documentation on that could not be revealed without sending many people to jail.

On Saturday night I cabled also a story of Mussolini's trip to Sardinia

OMAHA POLICE FIRE ON MOB; TROOPS DENIED

Five Street Cars Are Burned.

Coal Strike Delayed

Giving tacit support to the Guffey coal control bill that is to come before congress next week, President Roosevelt yesterday induced mine union leaders to hold off a threatened strike to June 30. Page 10.

Omaha, Neb., June 14.—(AP)—Rioting in sympathy with striking organized street car employés was subsided late tonight in South Omaha after one unidentified man was killed and 42 persons, including three policemen, were injured.

Two Omaha hospitals were jammed with the injured. A majority were wounded by shotgun fire while three policemen were beaten by the crowd.

The dead man, shot in the head, was not immediately identified.

The most seriously injured were Dewey McCoy and William Hutter Jr., both shot by police.

The riot was the third to occur in South Omaha in the last three nights. Five street cars were burned and two overturned.

As a result of tonight's fighting Chief of Police Robert Samardick requested Acting Governor Jurgensen to call out the National Guard to aid police, but he declined to do so.

Boy Trampled by Rioters.

An 11 year old boy, Frank Smith, was trampled on by the crowd as the massed rioters surged and struggled to hold their lines against the onslaught of veteran policemen and rookies, who were hastily sworn in late today in anticipation of further trouble.

One woman, Mrs. Harry Yaffee of Omaha, was among the wounded. She was shot in the arm and leg.

The first police volley was fired when a massed mob of strike sympathizers refused to disperse at 32d and K streets. The second was fired at 24th and L streets a short time later.

Both volleys achieved their purpose of scattering the massed rioters after they had resisted efforts of police to break up the fighting with tear gas bombs.

75 Policemen on Street.

In firing the policemen followed orders issued by Capt. Robert Heller to "shoot if necessary." More than 75 policemen were on the streets when the trouble started and they were immediately augmented by a flying squadron of 26 officers when the riot call was received at headquarters.

Shortly after police had gained the upper hand in South Omaha and had succeeded in quieting the crowd to some extent a report was received at headquarters that two street cars at the end of the Albright line at the extreme southern limit of the city had been overturned by strike sympathizers.

The car crews had been permitted to leave the cars safely, with the exception of a motorman who was reported knocked unconscious with a brick. He was not seriously hurt, it was reported.

Two Policemen Injured.

The street car strike began April 20, and within a week the first riot had been staged. This fighting was in uptown Omaha and followed a parade of strike sympathizers. Minor disturbances cropped up nearly every day from then on until Wednesday night when the disturbances reached the riot stage in South Omaha, a section of the city populated mostly by stock yards workers.

TROOPS AT FREEPORT

Freeport, Ill., June 14.—[Special.]—Four companies of National Guardsmen were encamped in this city tonight to check violence which flared briefly here today in a pitched battle between 200 strikers and 25 deputy sheriffs outside the plant of the Stover Manufacturing and Machine company.

The strikers confronted the deputy sheriffs, who were accompanied by Sheriff Lee Aurand of Stephenson county, as they attempted to enter the plant which has been shut down for six weeks when the company refused to grant wage increases. Apparently the pickets who surrounded the building were angered because several of the deputies were shop foremen for the Stover company.

As the strikers made a threatening movement toward the smaller party the deputies fired a dozen rounds of tear gas cartridges into the first ranks. The officers then retreated into the plant, entering through a rear door.

The pickets showered them with

THE BEAST OF MANY NAMES

Starts Court Battle to Get His Job Back

Robert M. Sweitzer, ousted county treasurer, started action yesterday by quo warranto to challenge the right of Joseph L. Gill to hold the treasurership. Attorney I. Harvey Levinson, attorney for Sweitzer, will attempt by these proceedings to undo the action of the Cook county board, which fired Sweitzer from the county treasury because of a shortage of $414,129 in his accounts during his 24 years as county clerk, and which elected Gill to the vacancy.

Attorney General Otto Kerner of Illinois signed the petition for quo warranto, at the same time announcing that his action was necessitated by the law and that in lending his name to the move he was not passing on the claim or indicating any belief in the justice of Sweitzer's position.

Ousted Nine Days Ago.

Sweitzer was ousted on June 6 and since then his attorney has sought legal means of restoring him to office. He decided on quo warranto proceedings against Gill, in preference to asking either an injunction or a mandamus, and in order to file such a petition he had to have it signed with the name of the state's attorney or attorney general.

When Attorney General Kerner signed the petition, after giving an explanation of why he did so, Attorney Levinson went before Chief Justice Joseph Burke of the Circuit court and asked leave to file it. After a brief hearing Chief Justice Burke granted leave and set the date for a hearing on the case for June 24 at 10 a. m. Treasurer Gill, through his attorney, who in this case will be State's Attorney Courtney, acting in the capacity of county attorney, must either answer or demur.

Ouster Petition Bulky.

Attorney Levinson's petition was a bulky document containing photostatic copies of the papers relating to Sweitzer's $3,000,000 bond as county treasurer.

Attorney General Kerner explained that counsel for Sweitzer had presented to him for his signature a petition for leave to file an information in the nature of quo warranto. Such a petition seeks to determine by what right the person named holds a public office. He said he had considered it and had come to the conclusion it was his duty to sign it.

"This is a matter of wide public interest," Kerner declared, "and in order that the public may be duly informed I desire at this time to make clear the nature of the proceedings.

Kerner Explains Action.

"Quo warranto is the name of a writ issued in the name of the people or government against any person that usurps any office, commanding the sheriff to summon the defendant to appear in court to show by what warant or right he claims the office.

"By signing the petition I neither pass upon the sufficiency nor the insufficiency of the facts that may be presented, nor do I indicate my belief in the justice of the claim."

Silent on Promise to Pay.

Attorney Levinson had nothing to say concerning Sweitzer's oft given promises to repay the $414,129 which an audit showed he had taken from the tax redemption fund of the county clerk's office.

State's Attorney Courtney said the quo warranto petition would in no way interfere with the grand jury hearing now in progress and through which he expects an indictment to be voted against Sweitzer.

He will defend Gill's right to the office, Courtney said, and will press both the civil action to recover the money from Sweitzer and any criminal action that may result from the grand jury inquiry.

INSULL IS FREED BY U. S. JUDGE AT LAST OF TRIALS

Son and Stuart Also Acquitted.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Samuel Insull's courtroom troubles are over.

Federal Judge John C. Knox of New York, sitting in Judge James H. Wilkerson's court, yesterday directed the jury in the second federal prosecution of Mr. Insull and his associates to return a verdict of not guilty. The charge was criminal violation of the bankruptcy act in transferring assets of Corporation Securities company of Chicago to favored creditors.

This verdict was signed willingly by the jury. William Jensen of Batavia, constable, said as he signed:

"I never considered that the government had a case. The rest of the jurors had the same opinion."

Dramatic End of Trial.

The trial was ended suddenly and dramatically at 12:30 p. m., when Judge Knox announced his decision on the motion of Defense Attorneys Floyd E. Thompson, Harry D. Ichburne, and Charles E. Lounsbury for a directed verdict of not guilty for their clients, Insull Sr., Samuel Jr., and Harold L. Stuart, president of Halsey, Stuart & Co. The motion came after the government had completed its presentation of evidence.

While the court stated several times in the course of the arguments over the motion that he had "grave doubts" about letting these defendants take the hazard of a jury decision, even the defense attorneys were prepared for a denial of the motion and the Insulls were ready to go on the witness stand again and tell of their motives for their financial acts during the dark days of 1931, when millions a day in market values of their securities went crashing into the void of the depression market.

"I make no comment as to the acts of the defendants," said the court. "I stand neutral there. It is not my function to judge acts. I merely pass on the question of law.

Questions Quality of Proof.

"That is, that in my judgment the proof offered by the government is not of a quality which, if the case were submitted, would enable you to find the defendants guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

"We must have in mind the practical situation. The proof has shown that the defendants did not benefit personally, that they openly disclosed all their acts, that their acts were not attended by those characteristics usually found in cases of this character. We must consider the peculiar situation and conditions of 1931-'32 when these transactions took place. Many persons who thought they were exercising good judgment then later found they were wrong.

"Upon the proof here it is my opinion that the hypothesis of the defendants' innocence is as easy to accept, and as consistent, as the hypothesis of guilt. I feel that I must take the responsibility rather than pass it to your shoulders. I direct you to find a verdict of not guilty."

Insull Happy Over Outcome.

The elder Insull was greatly relieved at the outcome.

"It is over now and I am happy," was his only comment. He had been acquitted twice before on charges growing out of the failure of his companies. This was his last hurdle.

At 75, without any money, he declares, he faces life anew, perhaps to take a job, perhaps to travel a bit. His little black haired wife was by his side, the first to congratulate him.

"He has been a great sport through it all," she said. "It is character that counts, not money."

Early in the afternoon United States Attorney Michael L. Igoe appeared before Judge Knox and nol prossed the case against Martin Insull, who was indicted on the same charge. Both brothers have been acquitted in the state courts. The extradition proceedings against Martin, who is in Canada, will be dropped. Mr. Igoe, who was not appointed to his post until this case was on its way to trial, had nothing to say.

Mr. Insull met Mr. Igoe in the corridor and said:

"Now that I am no longer a criminal, I can congratulate you on your appointment."

Martin Insull was notified of the court's action and the decision to drop his extradition case as he was returning to his home at Orillia, Ont., last evening from a day of fishing. He smiled, but had nothing to say except

MERCURY HITS 84° A 2D TIME; WARM TODAY

A high temperature of 84 degrees at 4:15 p. m. yesterday equaled the previous maximum for 1935, set late in April. The official forecast said that today would be generally fair and continued warm, with gentle variable winds, and that showers probably would occur tomorrow.

Beaches under the jurisdiction of the city will be opened to the public under lifeguard protection today. The Chicago park district has postponed the opening of its beaches until next Thursday or Friday. The park officials said that the water, now at 60 degrees, was too cold and they wanted the temperature to reach 70 or 72 degrees.

Walter Wright, director of parks and recreation for the city, said that the three major city beaches, Touhy avenue, 75th street, and 79th street, along with twenty-one street end bathing spots would be guarded by a force of 150 men.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the Chicago board of health, issued a warning to bathers to guard against swallowing water while swimming near to the shore because of a rise in meningitis cases.

Mother Watches Girl, 4, Fall Two Floors to Death

Evelyn Walker, 4 years old, was killed yesterday when she fell from the second story window of an apartment building at 925 Marianna street, while her mother, Mrs. Eva Keyes, watched helplessly from below. Evelyn was playing in the second floor hallway while Mrs. Keyes stood on the sidewalk below, talking with two friends. Mrs. Keyes turned as she heard the little girl call to her. She was about to warn her to be more careful when Evelyn lost her balance and fell, striking her head on the concrete.

Gen. Hugh Johnson Escapes When His Auto Smashes

Sioux City, Ia., June 14.—(AP)—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and his secretary, Miss Frances Robinson, were viewing Sioux City with Eugene Kelly, editor and publisher of the Sioux City Tribune today. Their car collided head on with another, smashed into the porch of a house, and was badly damaged. Miss Robinson was shaken up, but neither Johnson, Kelly, nor the occupants of the second car were hurt.

Hode Changes His Mind and Goes Away Content

Cunning Hode, 49 years old, leaped into the lake from the east end of the Navy pier yesterday. When police arrived in answer to a summons from witnesses they met Hode coming out of the lake. "Too cold," he told them and strode away.

Coroner's investigators and the police were striving last night to determine whether the death of Mrs. Margarette Ford McGivney, 28 years old, 25 East Delaware place, was caused by heart disease or by an overdose of a drug taken at the end of a drinking party.

Mrs. McGivney, who was the wife of Walter McGivney, importer of millinery goods with offices at 65 East South Water street, became ill at dawn yesterday in a room at the Lincoln Park Arms hotel, 2738 Pine Grove avenue. She died as she was being taken to the Grant hospital.

Police Hold Two Companions.

In the room when she became ill were Mrs. Lucille Fleigelman, 27 years old, 626 O'Brien street, an admitted narcotic addict, and Lissell Leix, 31 years old, of the Belair hotel, 420 Diversey parkway, a shoe salesman. Both were held by Capt. Thomas Duffy of the Sheffield avenue police for the inquest after they had told their stories of the death and the party that preceded it. The account of Mrs. Fleigelman was the clearer.

"I had been a friend of Mrs. McGivney for ten years," she said. "Thursday night she called me and said her husband was gone on a trip to Kansas City and asked me to meet her in the Lincoln Park Arms. We got together there and called Lissell, who came around.

"Had a Lot of Drinks."

"We went out and had a lot of drinks and got back to the room at about 2 p. m. Lissell was very drunk and after he put on some pajamas he fell asleep. I had my needle and some heroin with me and I went into the bathroom and shot myself. I forgot the stuff and left it on the washstand.

"When I went out into the room Margarette was crying. 'My boy friend has gone to sleep on me,' she said. 'I am feeling low and disgusted.' Then she went into the bathroom. She came out and said she had taken a shot of heroin. Margarette was never an addict and I was scared. I told her it would make her awful sick. She said she didn't care.

"About 5 o'clock she fell over in a stupor. I shook Lissell up and we called the house doctor."

The physician, Dr. David Holstein, found that Mrs. McGivney had no pulse. He ordered her sent to the hospital at once. A physician there, unaware of the supposed drug taking, notified the coroner's office that she was dead. There was no indication that death was due to other than a natural cause and the coroner's office did not notify the police until 11:45 a. m.

Policemen John Lefevour, Walter Marian, and James Kelly went to the hotel and found Mrs. Fleigelman and Leix, the latter asleep, in the room. At about this time Elmer Glover and Stanley Golbus, who said they were employés of Walter McGivney, visited Capt. Duffy and asked him to "keep this out of the papers." McGivney, they added, had been told of the tragedy by telephone and was returning from Kansas City, Mo.

The captain, suspecting that Mrs. McGivney had not died a natural death, then ordered the two witnesses in the room taken to the station for questioning. His investigators also took possesion of the hypodermic needle and the supply of heroin Mrs. Fleigelman carried.

Woman Waiting U. S. Trial.

Later Capt. Duffy learned that Mrs. Fleigelman was arrested two months ago by government agents as a seller of narcotics and is awaiting trial.

According to Mrs. Fleigelman, Mrs. McGivney formerly was a student at Northwestern university under the name Margarette Ford. No record of her attendance could be found at the university.

An element of mystery under investigation was the fact that Mrs. McGivney's rings were missing.

What's New in Books?

● To keep well informed of the latest books, read the Tribune book section, edited by Fanny Butcher, and published every Saturday.

Among the books reviewed today are "The Wolf At The Door" by Robert Francis, and "Cat Across The Path" by Ruth Feiner.

The government's case was closed at 10:45 a. m. by Forest Harness, special assistant to the United States attorney general. Attorney Thompson at once filed his motion for a directed verdict and the jurors were sent out during the arguments.

"This motion is not a mere formality," said Mr. Thompson. "I did not make such a motion in the first trial [the Insull mail fraud case of last year], but here I am convinced that the government has failed completely to prove crime. Further, if the law is construed in support of the government's case it is clearly unconstitutional. Mere, naked transfer of assets is the only proof here. The government confesses there was no fraud or concealment."

Question of Good Faith.

Seeking to avoid the financial whirlwind could not be called contemplation of bankruptcy, the attorney argued.

"In the last analysis," questioned the court, "does it not resolve itself into a question of good faith?"

"If the defendants should be convicted under this statute," replied Thompson, "every railroad executive in the country should be on trial. They are putting on their last burst of steam and making improvements. Yet there isn't a railroad in the country that is solvent."

Defense Attorney Ditchburne told the court that the defendants ought not to be required to take a jury hazard again. The only reason they were in this position, he said, was because of a "stubborn, unwilling attitude on the part of some one in Washington."

Special Prosecutor Replies.

Daniel V. Cahill, special prosecutor, answered for the government. The open transfer of assets, he argued, was quite as effective as concealment, so far as the unpreferred creditors of Corporation Securities company were concerned. The court directed attention to what he termed a realistic view of the situation confronted by the defendants in 1931.

"Is not what was done here consistent with innocence as well as with guilt?" he asked. "Did not men think they could go along on even keel until things righted themselves? If the defendants thought so, was not the payment of dividends the pouring of oil on the waters? Is it not possible that what they did was to save and restore assets?"

"No," answered Cahill. "Practically all their assets were pledged. There was no reasonable expectation of recovery."

"Hope Springs Eternal."

"I am not prepared to say that," commented the court. "Hope springs eternal. I have grave doubts as to whether, if a verdict should be returned against the defendants, it should be permitted to stand."

Samuel E. Whitaker, the chief prosecutor, stepped into the breach here and argued that congress had intended in this act to stop just such acts as the defendants had done here.

"Should they have allowed the banks to step in and stop operations or should they have taken a gambler's chance?" asked the court.

"That is the point," said Mr. Whitaker, "but with whose money were they gambling?"

"Is it the duty of an executive to retire when business is bad and make no effort?" asked the court. "Suppose they are honest and hopeful men, acting in good faith. Should they stop the minute they get fear?"

Prosecutor Answers Plea.

Mr. Whitaker replied that where there was reasonable ground to believe that bankruptcy would result, as in this case, and that what they did was in contemplation of bankruptcy and even though they were trying to divert bankruptcy it was not enough to take them out of the operation of the statute.

At the conclusion of the trial Mr. Whitaker made this statement:

"A federal grand jury returned an indictment against Samuel Insull and others in the orderly process of the administration of justice. The government presented all the facts available in support of the allegation in the indictment. An able, experienced, and impartial judge held that the verdict should be directed for the defendant. The department of justice has performed its full duty in thus presenting the evidence, and, of course, abides by the decision."

In addition to the two trials in federal court Insull and his associates were acquitted on embezzlement charges in the Cook county Criminal court.

LEAGUE PLEDGES FIGHT TO DEFEND SUPREME COURT

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The American Liberty League, a nonpartisan agency founded by Democrats and Republicans of national prominence, last night pledged itself to fight to the last ditch any New Deal amendments to the constitution to curtail state's rights or to limit the powers of the Supreme court.

In resolutions which did not mention President Roosevelt by name, the league condemned the suggestion made by the President in his recent press conference concerning a radical constitutional change directed toward centralization of government.

Demands Congress Wake Up.

With the recent decisions of the Supreme court killing the NRA in mind, the league called on members of congress to remember their oath to defend the constitution. It demanded that congress abandon the practice of "abdicating" and of turning its exclusive law making power over to the President and the bureocrats "in contravention of the Supreme court."

The league's declaration was the outcome of day and evening sessions of its executive committee and advisory council at the Drake hotel.

Prominent among the eighty-five in attendance were Alfred E. Smith, Democratic nominee for the presidency in 1928, and James W. Wadsworth, former Republican senator from New York, who is now a member of the house at Washington. He is one of the Republican possibilities for presidential nomination. Smith and Wadsworth were chief speakers at a dinner last night which was closed to the public.

"Give Country a Chance."

In his talk, Mr. Smith said:

"If congress would only go home and give the country a chance it would help a lot. The President is not alone to blame; congress is likewise to blame for abdicating and delegating its powers, conferred by the constitution, to another branch of the government, the executive."

The resolutions, adoption of which followed a discussion of national affairs in the light of the recent Supreme court decisions, had for their underlying theme the league's first aim—"Defend the constitution." They concluded with several planks taken from the last Democratic national platform. The declaration read as follows:

"The American Liberty league, appreciative of the great public benefit resulting from the recent decisions of the United States Supreme court holding unconstitutional the provisions of the national industrial recovery act and the Frazier-Lemke act and the removal by the President of Commissioner Humphrey of the federal trade commission, expresses the hope for the continuance everywhere of the tendency to return to constitutional safeguards and principles.

Hasty Legislation Deplored.

"The league deplores and condemns the hasty and ill considered enactment by the congress of legislation which is in violation of the constitution and urges upon the congress the importance of returning to the wise practice of giving due and deliberate consideration by its appropriate committees to the constitutionality of all proposed legislation.

"The league strongly condemns the suggestions recently made by high officials of the federal government to amend the constitution so as to vest in the federal government power to regulate intrastate commerce and to concentrate in Washington powers which now rest in the several states or to deprive the Supreme court of the power to determine whether acts of congress come within the powers delegated to it by the constitution.

"The retention of such power in the Supreme court is essential to the maintenance of a written constitution, and affords the last bulwark of protection against the encroachment by passion-swept monetary majorities of the inalienable rights and liberties of the American people.

Defend Rights of States.

"The league pledges itself to the maintenance unimpaired of the fundamental principles of our form of government and will vigorously resist any amendments to the constitution which directly or indirectly further limit the sovereign rights of the states or curtail the powers of the Supreme court.

"The league reasserts its opposition to government competition with private business. It advocates:

"A sound currency to be preserved at all hazards.

"The maintenance of the national credit by a federal budget annually balanced.

"Drastic reduction in government expenditures by consolidation of scattered activities and prevention of duplication and overlapping of functions.

"The abolition of the rapidly and ever increasing number of federal bureaus and commissions which are destructive of our liberties."

Organization to Be Expanded.

The league at its sessions took steps toward expanding its organization into every state and congressional district. It is nonpartisan, not concerned in candidacies, and it will seek hearings before both Republican and Democratic conventions next year. It will urge a plank for the preservation of America's constitution and form of government in the platforms of both parties. It was indicated the league will operate much as did the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment until repeal was accomplished.

Ex-Gov. Smith, who was hailed with cries of "Hello, Al" which echoed through the La Salle street station as he stepped off the train from New York yesterday morning, declined to discuss politics when he reached the hotel.

General views expressed by members outside the conference rooms were that the recent Supreme court decisions killing the NRA serve to uphold the doctrin which the league was formed to advance last year. The press conference of President Roosevelt and his utterances for radical changes in America's form of government and for curtailment of state's rights to build up a centralized government were viewed as drawing the issue definitly.

Cite Grass Roots Meeting.

The Grass Roots Republican roundup of ten midwest states at Springfield, th Lincoln shrine, last Monday and Tuesday was regarded as showing a rising tide of sentiment in the west, both in rural and urban sections.

At the dinner last night, Ralph M. Shaw, chairman of the Illinois division, presided. At the afternoon conference Sewell L. Avery, president and chairman of Montgomery Ward & Co., was in the chair.

Among those present were John J. Raskob, former Democratic national chairman; Irenee du Pont and Jouett Shouse, former chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, and chairman of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Shouse is president of the American Liberty league.

EX-MARINE ENGINEER SURRENDERS TO FACE SEA MURDER CHARGE

New York, June 14.—(AP)—Martin J. De Mott Jr., former chief engineer of The American export liner Exchange, today walked into the office of the U. S. district attorney and surrendered to be held on a charge of "murder on the high seas."

The prosecutor's office said details of the case would not be made known until the trial. It was learned, however, that De Mott is alleged to have slain First Mate Frederick Roberts of Minonk, Ill., when the vessel was in the harbor of Messina, Sicily, last November.

It also was said De Mott was acquitted of murder by an Italian court in Messina. He waived examination today when arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter and was ordered held in $500 bail for the federal grand jury.

WALGREEN URGES BETTER TEACHING OF GOVERNMENT

Praises U. of C. as "Great Institution."

Speaking before a Flag day luncheon of the Illinois Society of the Sons of the American Revolution yesterday, Charles R. Walgreen, drug store chain owner, praised the University of Chicago as "a great institution" but reiterated his stand that colleges in general fail to present American government and institutions in a favorable light.

Mr. Walgreen refused to comment on the decision reached on Thursday by a majority of the state senate committee which has been investigating alleged radical teaching in tax exempt or tax supported colleges. The majority, led by Senator James J. Barbour [Rep., Evanston], announced at Springfield that no further hearings would be held and that a report absolving the University of Chicago would be prepared.

Mr. Walgreen's assertion that he had withdrawn his niece, Miss Lucille Norton, from the university because she was subjected to subversive propaganda in her classes precipitated the investigation.

For American Government Course.

"I have no opposition to colleges teaching anything that is decent, but there are two things that I think should be done," said Mr. Walgreen in his talk at the luncheon, which was held in the Wedgwood room of Marshall Field & Co.

"There should be a good course in American government that would give students an understanding of the constitution. They do not do this in many places. [It was Mr. Walgreen's contention before the senatorial committee that alien forms of government were taught to the virtual exclusion of American.]

"Teachers, I believe, should sign a pledge to support the constitution. That is not too much to ask. If these two things were done we would have an answer to communism. The University of Chicago is a great institution. Certain influences, however, I still believe should be eradicated."

Senator Baker Plans Action.

At Rockford Senator Charles W. Baker [Rep., Monroe Center], a member of the senate committee and the author of the resolution under which the committee operated, conferred with his attorney, Roy F. Hall, and began the preparation of a minority report which, he said, would "blow the roof off the statehouse." Senator Baker on Thursday charged that Senator Barbour had forced a complete "whitewash" of the University of Chicago.

This charge was denied last night by Senator Richey V. Graham [Dem., Cicero], chairman of the committee. According to Senator Graham, Senator Baker has been invited to attend the sessions at which the committee report will be drafted.

WIFE DIVORCES WM. E. GRAHAM; WAIVES ALIMONY

Mrs. Jane Lee Graham, daughter of the late T. George Lee, former president of Armour & Co., won an uncontested divorce yesterday from William Edward Graham, son of Ernest R. Graham, architect, in the Superior court of Judge Francis B. Allegretti. She charged cruelty. Alimony was waived, and details of a financial settlement were not divulged.

The Grahams were married in June, 1931, and separated in September, 1934. Martha Lee, a sister of Mrs. Graham and a debutante last year, appeared as a witness to support the charge of cruelty. Paul Godehn, counsel for Mrs. Graham, said Graham struck his wife on several occasions.

CHICAGO CELEBRATES 158TH BIRTHDAY OF STARS AND STRIPES

Chicago celebrated the 158th anniversary of the American flag yesterday with ceremonies throughout the city.

An impressive program commemorating Flag day and honoring the memory of David Kennison, revolutionary war hero who died in Chicago in 1852 at the age of 115 years, was held at the foot of Wisconsin avenue in Lincoln park during the afternoon. Kennison was the last survivor of the "Boston Tea Party."

Another ceremony was held in the Lincoln park bandshell by the American Flag Day association.

The Palmer post of the American Legion held an open meeting at Standlaus hall, 2330 North Lorel avenue, last night, and the Elks held a Flag day observance in their quarters at 174 West Washington street. The Veterans of Foreign Wars held exercises at their annual state encampment in Kankakee.

GERMANY'S WAR VETERANS INVITE BRITISH TO BERLIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 14.—The prince of Wales' approval of a proposal that British war veterans send a deputation to Germany to establish contact and cooperation with German war veterans has brought speedy results.

The prince announced his support of the suggestion at a conference of the British Legion on Tuesday. Tonight the legion received an official invitation from the principal German war veterans' organization to send a delegation to Berlin July 13 to examine the question of inviting representatives from former enemy countries to a legion conference in England next year.

The British delegation will include Maj. F. W. Featherston Godley, chairman of the legion, and Col G. R. Crosfield, former chairman.

Norma Shearer, Film Star, Is Mother of 8 Pound Girl

Hollywood, Cal., June 14.—[Special.]—An eight pound girl was born to Norma Shearer, motion picture star, in Cedars of Lebanon hospital tonight. "I'm so happy, a little girl is just what we wanted," the actress whispered. Her husband is Irving Thalberg, film studio executive. The Thalbergs have one other child, a boy, Irving Jr., 5.

CONDUCTED TOUR MOVES TOO FAST FOR THE DOCTOR

Dr. Elvin L. Clark, 6811 Stony Island avenue, agreed yesterday with a stranger that Chicagoans ought to see more of their own city.

The stranger, who said he was from Texas, and the physician met by chance in a cafeteria at Clark and Madison streets.

"I want to see Chicago in a big way," announced the Texan. "I've got $200 to spend. Suppose you and I each put up the same amount and we'll be able to go the whole route."

Another stranger—to the doctor—heard the conversation and declared that he, too, would join the party, but had to go to a bookmaker to borrow his $200. The Texan was appointed treasurer and Dr. Clark handed him $200. Then the second stranger and the doctor went to find the handbook place.

Much difficulty was experienced in the search and the second stranger gave up and announced that he guessed he couldn't go. Dr. Clark returned to the cafeteria, expecting the Texan would be there. He wasn't. And neither was the $200.

INDICT "POINTER" FOR THREAT TO BOMB ROOSEVELT

Washington, D. C., June 14.—(AP)—Charged with a written threat to bomb the White House, Ira Bashein, who resigned his commission as a second lieutenant in the army a year ago "for the good of the service," was indicted today by the District of Columbia grand jury.

Alienists who examined Basheim, resident of Brooklyn, N. Y., and now held in the district jail, have pronounced him insane. It was understood the indictment was made to facilitate his commitment to an institution.

On May 30 Bashein was charged with having addressed a threatening letter to President Roosevelt.

Bashein was born in New York on Aug. 30, 1907, and was enlisted as a private in the air corps on March 26, 1928, serving until June 30, 1929, when he was appointed to West Point. He graduated from the military academy in June, 1933.

Roosevelt Busy; Abandons Week-end Fishing Jaunt

Washington, D. C., June 14.—(AP)—President Roosevelt tonight abandoned plans for a week-end visit to the Jefferson club in Chesapeake bay for some fishing. A heavy business schedule was the cause. If the congressional situation permits, he is hopeful of going next week-end to the Harvard-Yale crew races at New London, Conn.

Alabama Senate Passes Bill Barring Balm Suits

Montgomery, Ala., June 14.—(AP)—The Alabama senate by an 18 to 11 vote today passed a bill to outlaw civil suits for breach of promise, seduction and alienation of affections. The bill was sent to the house.

TERRY DRUGGAN'S MOTHER SUES TO GET LAND DEED

Mrs. Elizabeth Druggan, 44 years old, filed suit in the Superior court yesterday to enforce a contract she made in 1923 with Hugo Pick, to purchase a 240 acre estate near Lake Zurich for which Pick was trustee.

Mrs. Druggan is the mother of Terry Druggan, who was a beer runner during prohibition with Frankie Lake, and who several months ago finished a term in federal prison for income tax violation. She sets forth in her bill that she has fulfilled her part of the contract, but that Pick refuses to deliver a waranty deed to the property.

Mrs. Druggan declares that she has paid $70,899 in principal and interest on the purchase price of $80,000 and has made more than $40,000 in improvements on the property. When the contract was made, Mrs. Druggan alleges, Pick agreed to deliver a deed after $20,000 had been paid. Pick contends that more than $41,000 is owing under the contract.

CRONIN BLAMES WIFE IN TELLING SLAYING STORY

Union Official on Stand at Murder Trial.

CRIMINAL COURT.

RAY KLEIS and ALBERT BEST, conspiracy, sentenced to 1 year each in the penitentiary by Judge Harry B. Miller.

WALTER HAHN, embezzlement, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the penitentiary by Judge Michael Feinberg.

Thomas Cronin, 27 years old, union labor official, told a jury yesterday how he shot and killed William Bahnfleth on April 5 because the latter was "fooling around" with his wife.

The wife, Mae, attired in a colorful spring outfit, sat stolidly in the Criminal court of Judge E. I. Frankhauser and listened to the testimony with no apparent show of emotion. Mrs. Cronin has refused to speak to her husband during the trial and scarcely glanced at him as he took the witness stand. She sat with the slain man's mother, Mrs. Anna Bahnfleth.

Tells of Marital Troubles.

Cronin, who is president of the International Brotherhood of Coal Drivers, Helpers, and Handlers, local 704, testified that things were "hazy" at the time of the fatal quarrel in the Cronin apartment at 4656 North Kenneth avenue. He said that he did not remember pulling the trigger.

The defendant told a story of a stormy marital life spotted by frequent separations and reconciliations. He had begged his wife to stop seeing Bahnfleth for more than a year, Cronin said.

After detailing his early married life and telling of the birth of his son, Tommy, in 1927, Cronin, questioned by his attorney, Cameron Latter, told of the night before the shooting.

Scene on Arrival Home.

"I went to my mother's on the night of April 4 and returned at 12:30 in the morning," Cronin told the jury.

"What did you see when you entered your home?" Attorney Latter asked.

"I saw my wife, who was attired in pajamas, sitting in the parlor with Bahnfleth. By her condition I saw she had been drinking. I went to the bathroom and found a broken glass on the floor. Several empty glasses were strewn about the dining room table, upon which some wine had been spilled.

"The kitchen and the kitchen sink were littered with dishes and bottles. I returned to the parlor and ordered Bahnfleth to get out. He put on his coat and hat and left. I went to bed and soon my wife came into the bedroom and threatened me with a revolver. She told me that she was going to save Bahnfleth the trouble of killing me.

Brings In Name of Son.

"She said that she loved Bahnfleth. Tommy and I begged her not to shoot me. When Tommy said, 'Please don't shoot daddy,' she put down the gun. The next morning at the breakfast table she told me she was sorry; that Bahnfleth meant nothing to her."

That night he came home to find Bahnfleth with his wife again, Cronin testified, and a quarrel ensued in which his wife ordered him to leave. He packed a suitcase, the witness said, but returned to the apartment when he found that he had forgotten a pair of shoes.

"As I started to reënter my home I heard loud laughter," Cronin said as his wife glanced at him briefly. "I walked around to the rear and listened at the open kitchen window.

"I heard my wife say, 'That food will be back here and cause trouble.' Bahnfleth said, "I'll take care of that chump.'

"I don't remember much of what happened after that. I recall going in the front door and my little boy shouting, 'Diggers, here comes daddy.'

Remembers Striking His Victim.

"Things are not clear to me, but I remember that Bahnfleth picked up a chair and held it over his head. I remember striking him. Things are very hazy then. I do not remember shooting Bahnfleth. The next thing I remember I was laying the revolver on the radio."

Mrs. Cronin leaned over to comfort Bahnfleth's mother as Cronin explained that he carried the revolver "for protection during the teamsters' strike." He concluded his testimony with the statement that Bahnfleth had never given money for support of his family.

On cross-examination Assistant State's Attorney Morris G. Meyers sought to show that Cronin remembered all the details of the shooting when he was questioned by police immediately afterward.

Cronin denied that he had refused to furnish medical care for his wife or that he had left her on numerous occasions.

SMASH AUTO RING HEADED BY GRAND JURY FOREMAN

Kane County Official, Four Others Held.

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.
Automobiles stolen, 13; recovered, 14; stripped, 2 [from police records for 24 hours ending at midnight Thursday.]

John Jurs, 49 years old, who had been chosen foreman of the Kane county grand jury which is to convene on Monday in Geneva, confessed yesterday to police of the Cook county state's attorney's office that he has been carrying on a lucrative business in stolen automobiles in his home town of Gilberts, 10 miles northwest of Elgin.

Jurs, a member of the school board in Gilberts and an automobile dealer, is under arrest with his son, Marvin, 27 years old, and four alleged automobile thieves. The four are Edward Magoon, 24 years old; Alfred Kelen, 22 years old, of Elgin; Francis Tantone, 22 years old, of Melrose Park, and Nick Waselevitch.

Shot Stealing Car.

All except Waselevitch, who was shot by police and captured as he attempted to steal a car, have confessed to their part in the conspiracy to steal and dispose of automobiles. Gus Bartels, chief of the automobile investigation division of State's Attorney Courtney's office, refused to disclose details of the wounding of Waselevitch or how police uncovered the theft ring.

Investigator Bartels said the gang stole automobiles in Chicago and drove them to Jurs' garage in Gilberts, where they were sold as second hand cars for $30 to $40 each. When Jurs and his son were arrested on Wednesday, four stolen automobiles were found in their salesroom.

Son Acts as Intermediary.

The younger Jurs acted as intermediary for the purchase of the automobiles, according to Bartels, but did not participate in the actual thefts. Magoon has admitted stealing two cars and was arrested as he attempted to take a third.

The elder Jurs told police that he was hit by the depression and drifted into the stolen automobile plot as a means of acquiring money quickly. Investigator Bartels said that early indictments would be sought against members of the gang.

SON OF KING HALTS SUBWAY TRAIN AND PREVENTS ACCIDENT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 14.—The duke of Kent, youngest son of King George, provided a thrill for hundreds of passengers on a subway train today by dealing promptly with an unexpected emergency.

Speeding merrily underground between Waterloo and Goodge streets stations, the duke, who was undergoing his first experience as a subway driver, suddenly spotted a danger signal ahead. He applied the brakes and brought the train to an abrupt standstill while the passengers, many of whom were aware of the identity of the driver, wondered what was wrong. A defective train blocked the line ahead and the duke's presence of mind avoided a possible accident.

Under instructions from a professional driver, the duke then eased the train slowly forward and pushed the defective train into the station. Service was delayed 13 minutes pending repairs.

Altogether the duke had a hectic day, for earlier in the afternoon he overshot the platform at Waterloo and the passengers had to hustle to the back coach in order to get out.

WIDOW'S PLANS FOR COMMON LAW CEREMONY TOLD

Sister-in-Law on Stand in $650,000 Suit.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

A pink silk nightgown embroidered in matching silk was described meticulously from the witness stand in the federal court of Judge John P. Barnes yesterday in the suit of 43 year old Lionel R. Barbour of Detroit to set aside the will of Mrs. Fannie Bishop Henderson, wealthy Aurora widow who died in 1931 at the age of 77 years. The bulk of her $650,000 estate was left to establish a home for elderly married couples.

Barbour claims that he and Mrs. Henderson were married in a common law ceremonial in Detroit in 1925. The suit is directed against William George, retired Aurora banker and executor of the estate, who, Barbour charges, obtained a probating order fraudulently and has failed to account for $185,000 of the estate.

Other Lingerie Shown.

Fannie, as she is alluded to by the plaintiff's witnesses and lawyers [to avoid calling her Mrs. Henderson], displayed the pink nightgown and "various other pieces of lingerie" early in August, 1925, in her Aurora home, as part of her trousseau, Mrs. Marie Henderson of Aurora testified yesterday. This was about three weeks before the common law ceremonial, the defense contends.

The witness at that time was engaged to Dr. Alex Henderson, brother of Mrs. Fannie Henderson's late husband, W. W. Henderson. On the day mentioned, she declared yesterday, Fannie telephoned, asking that she "come over" that evening. The witness went, accompanied by Dr. Henderson.

"Fannie told us that she also was to be married," Mrs. Henderson testified. "She said she was to marry L. R., and later referred to him as Mr. Barbour. She showed us her trousseau and we congratulated her and wished her happiness."

The Trip to Cuba.

Under cross-examination Attorney John K. Newhall, former judge of the Circuit court of Kane county, who, with Attorney Cassius Poust, is defending George, brought out that Alex Henderson had accompanied his sister-in-law, Fannie, on a trip to Cuba the preceding February. Some of his questions and Mrs. Henderson's replies were:

Q.—Didn't Mrs. Henderson object to your going with Alex? A.—Not that I ever heard of.

Q.—You know of the episode of Aug. 22, 1925, when your husband had the controversy with Mr. Barbour? A.—I know what he's accused of, but he was with me.

Q.—The night Mr. Barbour was thrown over the stone wall? A.—Yes.

Mrs. Christine Staedler of Detroit, sister of Mrs. Sadie McIntosh, who testified the previous day in the hearing, substantiated her sister's testimony regarding the "wedding."

"Fannie was very well dressed," Mrs. Staedler said, eying Judge Barnes earnestly. "She wore a black lace dress, diamond earrings, several diamond rings, and a very unusual diamond lavalier in the shape of a pansy. She also had on a diamond bar pin."

"After the ceremony what occurred?" purred Attorney Harold Shapero of Detroit, who with Attorney Harry G. Hershenson of Chicago is counsel for Barbour.

"Don't Hug Too Tight."

"Well, Fannie—er, Mrs. Barbour—sat down and played a second wedding piece," said Mrs. Staedler. "But before that we congratulated them. When Sadie, my sister, went to embrace Lionel, Fannie said to her:

"'Now look out there; he belongs to me; don't hug him too tight.'"

It was all in jest, though, Mrs. Staedler explained seriously to the court.

Describing a legal document displayed by Fannie the wedding night, Mrs. Staedler said: "Fannie read it to us. As I remember it, it said a common law marriage in Michigan was legal, and if consummated—I think that was the word—in Michigan, it would be recognized all over the civilized world, and could be dissolved only through divorce procedure."

Attorney Newhall asked her if, when she first met Fannie in July, 1925, she heard anything about a marriage discussed. "No," replied Mrs. Staedler, "but she was very loving with Mr. Barbour."

Bernard Forester, a Detroit policeman, testified during the morning session that in the spring of 1926, at a dance in the Elks temple, Detroit, Barbour introduced him to a woman, saying, "I want you to meet my wife." Forester identified a photograph of Fannie as the woman.

ELEANOR HUNT, FILM ACTRESS, DIVORCED FROM RICH DOCTOR

JUAREZ, Mexico, June 14.—(AP)—Eleanor Hunt, film actress, was divorced today from Dr. Frank G. Nolan, wealthy physician.

Recently in Los Angeles she announced she would divorce her husband and marry George A. Hirliman, production head of Consolidated Pictures. Mrs. Hirliman also obtained a divorce in Juarez today. Both women alleged incompatibility, nondetailed allegation permitted under Chihuahua divorce laws. Neither divorce was contested.

Miss Hunt arrived in El Paso by plane Wednesday and Mrs. Hirliman motored from Yonkers, N. Y., her home. Friends said they met in El Paso and during their stay here were friendly.

Miss Hunt's attorney said she and Hirliman may be married tomorrow in Los Angeles. The actress' first husband was Rex Lease, screen actor. They were divorced in September, 1931. She was married to Nolan in November, 1933.

OAK PARK WARNS OTHER POLICE TO KEEP HANDS OFF

Arrest Is Threatened as Sequel to Sluggings.

Oak Park officials acted yesterday to prevent a repetition of such violence as Wednesday's slugging of two florists, which was followed by the intervention of Chicago policemen in behalf of six union officials arrested for the assaults.

Acting on the instructions of James A. Howe, village president of Oak Park, Chief of Police Benjamin Barsema directed his men to arrest and book any policeman from another city or town who attempts to interfere with the operation of the Oak Park department.

Expecting reprisals against Peter Jarvaras and Gus Poulos, the florists who were slugged, special police vigilance was ordered to protect Jarvaras' home at 1145 North Harlem avenue, Oak Park, where the two men conduct a small cash and carry floral business. It was for their refusal to join the Florist Drivers' union that Jarvaras and Poulos were beaten.

Attorney General May Act.

Howe said yesterday that he had not yet received a reply to a letter he sent Thursday to Otto Kerner, attorney general of Illinois, asking an investigation of "Chicago police protection of union sluggers." At the attorney general's office, however, it was indicated that Kerner will send a representative to the police court in Oak Park Tuesday when the six union officials are arraigned.

The men arrested are Edward J. Rogers, secretary, and Fred Bohlman and Larry Monahan, business agents, of the Excavating, Grading and Asphalt Teamsters' union; E. J. Price, secretary of the Florist Drivers' union; E. H. Gale, business agent of the Liveried Chauffeurs' union, and William Bibby, business agent of the Garage Helpers' union.

Rogers, Monahan, Bohlman, and Gale are charged with assault upon Jarvaras, who was slugged with blackjacks in downtown Oak Park after the men had followed him from his home. The four union officials were arrested on the scene by Oak Park policemen who drove up as the slugging was going on.

Chicago Police Intercede.

A Chicago police squad appeared at the Oak Park station to intercede for the prisoners, Chief Barsema said. Later, as the patrol wagon was returning to the station with five pickets arrested in front of Jarvaras' home, the same Chicago squad unsuccessfully demanded the release of the prisoners, according to Oak Park policemen.

The Chicago policemen are Sergt. Andrew Carroll and Patrolmen Norman Sims and Frank McCullough. They are members of the labor detail of Lieut. Charles Egan, operating under orders of Capt. Daniel Gilbert, head of the Chicago uniformed police.

Both Mayor Kelly and Police Commissioner Allman said yesterday that they are still awaiting reports from the policemen and commanding officers concerned before taking action in the case.

Arrest Two at Home.

Price and Bibby were arrested near Jarvaras' home several hours after the downtown slugging. Poulos charged that the men appeared there and abused him for not joining the union and for being partly the cause of the trouble in which four union men had become involved.

Wednesday's attack was not the first trouble the Oak Park florists have had with the union men, Jarvaras and Poulos revealed yesterday. Last Sunday members of the Florist drivers' union, who have several times asked the two florists to join, threatened violence unless they complied, the victims said.

Later that day pickets were stationed in front of Jarvaras' home. Two days later, Jarvaras said, several automobiles loaded with men drew up in front of the home, blocking the floral displays from the view of passersby. The men warned customers against patronizing Jarvaras, he and his partner said.

Find Bohlman Police Record.

At the bureau of identification it was learned that Bohlman possesses a police record dating to Sept. 10, 1915. On that date he was charged with larceny, but the grand jury returned a no bill.

The remainder of the record: Oct. 9, 1915, probation for one year on larceny charge; March 15, 1916, sentenced to eight months in the House of Correction and fined $1, after a robbery charge was changed to one of petty larceny; March 27, 1916, warrant issued for violation of probation; Oct. 27, 1916, released on his own recognizance; Jan. 13, 1917, discharged from probation; Feb. 19, 1935, picked up on suspicion, and released.

Monahan, who, Jarvaras charges was the first to strike him in the slugging, has no Chicago record, but is one of eight Chicago men who was arrested on a charge of trying to vote in Joliet on Feb. 26. Disorderly conduct charges were continued once, then apparently dropped.

U. of C. Anthropologist Is Divorced by Wife

Mrs. Robert Zingg, 1447 East 55th street, yesterday was granted a divorce from her husband, a research associate in anthropology at the University of Chicago. The decree was approved by Circuit Judge Philip J. Finnegan. Mrs. Zingg charged her husband with desertion. Zingg, who spent most of 1934 in the study of an Indian tribe at Jalisco, Mexico, is teaching at the University of Colorado for the summer. He was ordered to pay $42 a month for the support of the couple's daughter, Juanita, 5 years old.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN KNIGHT.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 14.—[Special.]—Barbara Vandenberg Knight, daughter of United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, today was granted a divorce from John Knight on grounds of "extreme and repeated cruelty."

Mr. and Mrs. Knight were married in Washington, Feb. 7, 1931, and have one child, John Knight Jr., born Dec. 6, 1931. Mrs. Knight was given custody of the child, who will be permitted to spend six weeks each summer with his father.

Mrs. Knight alleged her husband caused her "humiliation and embarrassment by refusing to go out socially with her friends and frequently expressing dislike for them." She also alleged he brought his friends to their home "to drink intoxicating liquors and to play cards without any consideration for the plaintiff's wishes."

Knight is to pay alimony of $50 a month until Sept. 1, after which payment will be $200 a month until June 1, 1936. Thereafter he will pay Mrs. Knight $25 a month unless she remarries, and $50 a month for the child's support. In addition he is to establish a $5,000 trust fund for the child.

8 DROWN WHEN TEXAS STREAMS OVERFLOW BANKS

Uvalde, Tex., June 14.—[Special.]—Eight persons drowned in this area today in flood waters which swept down a dozen usually dry creek and river beds, overflowed many acres of farm and range land, and inundated at least four small towns near here.

Five of the dead, all unidentified Mexicans, drowned at Del Rio, where 6.43 inches of rain fell in four hours. More than 100 persons there fled to high ground. Rain, heavier even than the cloudbursts which caused floods in this section two weeks ago, continued to fall.

Three others reported dead were trapped by rising water in a creek bed near Kenedy. One was C. C. Tober, 65, farmer. The others were unidentified Negroes.

At Leakey a telephone operator reported this morning she was the only person left in town. Surrounding creeks, she said, had risen rapidly, driving other residents to nearby hills.

Residents of Regan Wells were forced to flee when a twenty foot wall of water thundered down the ordinarily dry Frio river. A telegraph operator there said the rainfall had reached 10 inches and still was "coming down hard."

Campwood, twenty miles east of here, was flooded according to last reports.

Bankruptcy Suit Filed Against British Duke

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 14.—The issue of a receiving order in bankruptcy against the duke of Manchester, was published in the London Gazette tonight. The order is dated June 6 and is made on a debtor's petition. The first meeting has been fixed for June 24 and the public examination for Aug. 6. About a week ago the duke was released from prison when the lord chief justice of England allowed his appeal against a sentence of nine months' imprisonment for fraud in pawning jewelry and quashed the conviction.

TRAFIC TO NORTH SIDE READY FOR NINE DAY DETOUR

Work on Tunnel Blocks Drive Tomorrow.

BY HAL FOUST.

North side motorists, with a month's experience in the eccentric traffic control system that has broken rush hour bottlenecks on the lake front route, tomorrow will begin nine days' experience with a novel detour system.

At 6 o'clock tomorrow morning, workmen will crash into the pavement of Michigan avenue at Oak street in the construction of a pedestrian tunnel and comfort station under the boulevard to serve the beach. The contractor, under the terms of his agreement with the state and with the Chicago park district, has 200 hours in which to finish this part of his job and to replace the pavement. He will be penalized $25 for each hour of tardiness and will receive a bonus of $25 for each hour less than 200 that he keeps the thoroughfare closed.

Temporary Road Laid.

During these eight days and eight hours, more or less, Michigan avenue and Lake Shore drive north of Delaware place will be used by northbound traffic only. A temporary 42 foot plank roadway has been laid in the park just east of the drive and north of the Drake hotel for northbound traffic.

Southbound traffic will enter Dearborn street from Lincoln park and then turn east in Delaware place to Michigan avenue. The pavement used for the detour will be for one way traffic only and city police announce they will enforce a temporary parking prohibition.

This is the most thorough plan ever made for a detour in Chicago's motor traffic history. Otto K. Jelinek, engineer for the park district, pointed out that a traffic volume of 50,000 cars a day justifies expense and labor in minimizing temporary inconveniences.

Praises New System.

While discussing the detour plans Jelinek also reported favorably on the first month's operation of the so-called staggered control system between Byron street and North avenue. It is the only system of its type in the world.

Between 7:30 and 8:30 in the morning, 7,413 southbound automobiles are saved an average of six minutes between Byron street and North avenue. At the same time, 784 northbound cars are penalized an average of 41 seconds, speed tests have shown.

A weakness in the new system which might be corrected is in handling southbound traffic in the evening rush hour, especially when there is a ball game at Wrigley field on Addison street. The three lanes of Lake Shore drive for southbound traffic are not sufficient to carry the emergency load.

TRAFIC REROUTING

BRAKELESS AUTO AROUSES JUDGE IN TRAFIC COURT

Judge John Gutknecht of the Traffic court announced yesterday that he was in favor of a law to prevent dealers selling used automobiles so dilapidated they are unsafe.

When Joseph Rouch, 55 years old, 648 Madison street, was arraigned on a charge of driving a car without brakes and crashing into another automobile, he told the judge it was true the brakes were defective, but that he had just purchased the car from the Kaplan Auto Parts company, 1306 South State street.

The judge, to satisfy himself of the condition of the vehicle, left the bench and made a test with himself as driver. The car, he found, had no brakes at all, and had to coast to a stop. After criticizing the sale of such cars, he continued the case and ordered that officials of the Kaplan company appear in court Tuesday to explain.

DRIVER IS KILLED AS I. C. ELECTRIC TRAIN HITS AUTO

Struck at 121st Street and Lowe Avenue.

William McKay, 13 years old, 12219 Emerald avenue, was fatally injured yesterday when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by an Illinois Central railroad electric train at 121st street and Lowe avenue. He died in the Roseland Community hospital.

Frank Butcher, 7347 Evans avenue, motorman of the train, which was laden with homeward bound commuters, told police that McKay drove his automobile upon the tracks apparently unaware of the train's approach.

Other Deaths in County.

Four other deaths yesterday increased the Cook county motor toll for 1935 to 406. Up to 4 p. m. yesterday 325 persons had been killed in automobile accidents within the Chicago city limits and 6,878 had been injured. Other victims yesterday:

Mrs. Nora Clark, 66 years old, 7927 South Hermitage avenue, mother of Policeman John Clark, secretary to Capt. Dennis Malloy of the Gresham station. Killed when struck by an automobile while crossing 73d street at Marshfield avenue. A receipt in her pocket gave a clew to her identity, and Policeman Clark was called to view the body. The driver of the car, W. G. McKnight, 1660 West 104th place, was released after police were convinced the accident was unavoidable.

Albert Kellner, 65 years old, 666 Madison street. Killed when struck in front of 938 Irving Park boulevard by the automobile of Alphonse Biasetti, cook of the U. S. S. Wilmette, naval training ship, who lives at 1431 Sherwin avenue.

John Shamet, 43 years old, 3938 South Talman avenue. Fatally injured when the automobile he was driving struck an abutment of the Chicago and Alton railroad subway at California avenue and 37th street.

Mrs. Mary Roberti, 75 years old, 1108 Polk street. Died in the Mother Cabrini hospital, apparently of injuries incurred when she was struck by a hit and run motor car near the entrance of Mount Carmel cemetery in Hillside on Memorial day.

Woman Killed in Wisconsin.

Mrs. Egill Anderson, 36 years old, 6605 South Mozart street, was killed yesterday and four women companions with whom she was driving to the Norwegian Lutheran church convention in Madison, Wis., were injured when their automobile went into a ditch on Route 12, just outside of Madison. The injured are Mrs. Anderson's mother, J. E. Rovik, River Grove; Mrs. Anderson's daughter, Norma; Mrs. Ben Lindal, River Grove, and her daughter, Ruth. Mrs. Rovik was the most seriously hurt.

FORCE NRA BILL THROUGH HOUSE; SIGNED INTO LAW

Rail Czar Gets Life by Gag Rule, Too.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—Humbly the house bowed today to the will of President Roosevelt and passed resolutions prolonging the life of two New Deal organizations.

Under a unique gag rule, the second of its type ever to be enforced in the lower body, the representatives debated only thirty-eight minutes before approving the senate's amendments to the resolution maintaining the form but not the substance of the NRA until April 1, 1936. It was promptly signed by President Roosevelt.

An hour later, likewise after tepid discussion, a resolution was approved which extends the effective period of the Emergency Railroad Transportation act and the office of Federal Coordinator of Transportation Joseph B. Eastman until June 17, 1936. This also was signed by the President.

Both setups would have expired Sunday midnight.

Hold Session Today.

As if to impress the President with its sincere repentance for previous dallying, the house also decided to hold a session tomorrow, a remarkable gesture inasmuch as the congressmen view working on Saturday with sound horror. Tomorrow's session will clear the way for work Monday on the AAA amendments, also included in the President's list of "must" legislation.

Democratic leaders lost no time in pushing through the NRA resolution. The Borah amendment, which deprives the President of any authority which he might have under the act to relax the anti-trust laws as a reward for industries entering into voluntary agreements approved by him, was described as harmless.

Amazed by Change.

Several Republican members expressed some amazement, recalling the determined stand taken by the Democrats against an identical amendment in the house last week. The voice from the White House, they commented, seemed to have changed the position of the majority.

However, Representative Thomas A. Jenkins [Rep., Ohio] said he considered the amendment a good one, as a safeguard against any misunderstanding of the President's powers under NRA.

There was considerable complaining from the minority about the manner in which the resolution and its senate amendment had been brought before the house.

"With one exception, no rule like this has ever been enforced in the house before," said Representative Earl C. Michener [Rep., Mich.]. "It is a rarefied type of gag rule. Adoption of this rule means adoption of the resolution."

Discusses Stand on Court.

In his remarks Jenkins discussed the reports that President Roosevelt would seek a constitutional amendment to clarify the right of the Supreme court to declare acts of congress unconstitutional.

"I think the reaction has already been so great," he declared, "that the President, if he had the chance, would quickly withdraw the statements made by him in his spectacular interview with the press."

Only twenty Republicans and eleven Democrats voted against the amendment. The final count was 336 to 31 in favor of adoption and the resolution was automatically approved.

Rail Debate One Hour.

Debate on the extension of the emergency railroad transportation act was limited to one hour. The interstate commerce committee had reported out the resolution with a recommendation that the clause be struck out which assesses each railroad $2 per operating mile to pay for the expenses of Coördinator Eastman and his staf. This cost the railroads $530,000 last year.

Representative B. Carroll Reece [Rep., Tenn.] argued that it was unfair to the railroads to make them bear the expense of an organization to which they were opposed. He also expressed doubts concerning the legality of the assessment in view of the Supreme court's recent decisions.

The Democratic leaders, however, were in favor of restoring the assessment. It was pointed out that if the assessment were eliminated the resolution would necessarily go back to the senate and failure to act before Sunday would result in the death of the organization.

AAA Amendments Reported.

The AAA amendments were reported to the house by the committee on agriculture today. The latest alteration in the amendments was to confine Secretary Wallace's powers of prescribing minimum prices under "orders" to milk and its products. Wallace had wanted the power to prescribe such prices for milk, fruit, vegetables, nuts, and tobacco. The committee also recommended extension of the Jones-Costigan sugar act for one year.

When the house debates the AAA amendments Monday, little opposition is expected to them. They are much restricted in scope from the recommendations put forward by the department of agriculture before the Supreme court decision in the Schecter case threw New Deal legislation into confusion.

L'A BUY ELECTED CHIEF JUSTICE BY CIRCUIT JUDGES

Judge Walter J. La Buy was elected chief justice of the Circuit court for the ensuing year at the annual meeting of the Circuit judges in the county building yesterday. He will take office when the new court term opens Sept. 15, succeeding Judge Joseph Burke.

Judge D. J. Normcyle was elected alternate chief justice for the next term. Judge Frank H. Bicek was reappointed to the Juvenile court. Judges George Fred Rush, Stanley H. Klarkowski, Benjamin A. Epstein, and John Prystalski were reappointed to the Chancery division.

Action on recommending a new chief justice for the Criminal court was deferred by the judges until next Friday.

UNION LEAGUE CLUB PETITIONS TO REORGANIZE

Files Under 77-B to Ease Mortgage Load.

A petition for a voluntary reorganization of the financial structure of the Union League club under section 77-B of the amended federal bankruptcy law was filed yesterday in the United States District court. The club, which was founded in 1880 and includes many prominent Chicagoans in its membership, owns its building at 65 West Jackson boulevard.

The petition was filed by Edwin C. Austin, president of the club, who is a member of the law firm of Cutting, Moore, and Sidley. The liabilities of the club are listed as a $2,350,000 defaulted first mortgage held by an insurance company and $1,457,000 of general mortgage bonds held by the public.

Assets Exceed $5,000,000.

The assets, according to the petition, are $5,123,379, including the land and building. The current assets included in the total consist of $75,000 in cash, $93,000 in accounts receivable, and $105,000 in inventories.

Austin said that the plan of reorganization has already been approved by the insurance company and by 72 per cent of the holders of the general mortgage bonds. The plan, included in the petition, provides for the waiver by the insurance company of $269,000 in defaulted interest since 1933 and a reduction of the regular interest on the first mortgage note from 5½ per cent to 3½ per cent annually. The interest rate will increase gradually until the maturity of the note, which is extended from 1945 to 1949.

Expect Action in Six Weeks.

The general mortgage bondholders, according to the plan, are to receive no interest until a major part of the first lien bonds are retired. Many of these general mortgage bondholders are members of the club.

The petition was assigned to Federal Judge Charles Woodward, but in his absence will be heard by Judge William H. Holly. Austin said that an early hearing would be asked. He expects to have the plan accepted by the court within the next six weeks.

The Union League club has about 1,900 resident members and 800 nonresident members. The organization has long been a factor in civic affairs.

Mrs. Lyddane Tells Jury They Blackmailed Her.

Rockville, Md., June 14.—[Special.]—Pretty Mrs. Anne Lyddane today denied from the witness stand that she bargained with gangsters to have her husband and Mrs. Josephine Beall slain so she could continue her friendship with the latter's husband, Arthur. Instead, she insisted, she was the victim of a blackmail scheme.

The defendant in this strange case admitted that she kept many trysts with Arthur Beall, garage owner. She also admitted paying $200 on last Dec. 11 to two men she believed to be gunmen. The money, however, was paid to insure their silence. The men, she said, had "threatened to expose certain things about me and Mr. Beall."

Named as Co-respondent.

"I know Arthur Beall," she replied to questions by her attorney, State Senator Stedman Prescott. "Yes, his wife did file a divorce suit in which I was named co-respondent about two years ago. It was withdrawn the next day. But after that suit was withdrawn I began seeing Beall again."

It was after several of these later meetings that John [Googy] Carnell, ex-convict and Rockville bartender, two of his former prison mates and a Washington gambler "began bothering me about exposing me and Mr. Beall," she related.

"Early in December a man phoned and said he had some pictures and wanted hush money for them. When I went out at lunch the next day I took the money and met two men in a car with Ohio license tags. One got out and stopped me. I paid him the money.

"I paid the money because I knew the divorce had been filed and was on record. After I began seeing Arthur again—well, I had been warned at the bank where I worked as a secretary that if it began again they couldn't keep me. I didn't want the publicity and I didn't want another divorce suit filed," she said.

Carnell and his associates, all of whom were seized with Mrs. Lyddane on April 1, also are on trial.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Beall was on the stand. She told between sobs how the night before her youngest son was born she found her husband and Mrs. Lyddane together in an automobile near her home. Mrs. Lyddane "laughed in my face while my husband held me," she said.

Husband Stands by Her.

Francis Lyddane, the defendant's husband, who with Mrs. Arthur Beall, was the supposed victim of the poison plot, testified he never suspected his wife's behavior and that even after she had been arrested and indicted he had continued to live with her.

The trial adjourned until tomorrow morning, when each side will be allowed an hour and 45 minutes for arguments.

2:45 p. m.—Ox team pulling demonstration.

3:00 p. m.—Elephant pulling demonstration.

3:15 p. m.—Dog team pulling demonstration.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE horse and mule pulling contest, the largest ever held in the United States, will start at 8 o'clock this morning, daylight saving time, on the Wheaton experimental farm. Tests of the pulling strength of 78 horses and mules from eight states will begin at 9:30 a. m. The program is to continue until the judges announce their decisions about 2:30 p. m. Cash prizes totaling $500 will be paid to the fourteen winners.

The contest is to take place in a meadow on THE TRIBUNE experimental farm at Weisbrook station, a mile and a half southwest of Wheaton. The competition grounds may be reached over highways leading to the farm from all directions or over the Aurora and Elgin electric railway. Nine fast trains will leave the loop terminal of the Aurora and Elgin in Chicago during the day. Round trip contest excursion tickets are 70 cents, children 35c. The trip from Chicago to the Weisbrook station is made in 55 minutes.

There will be no admission charge.

Outstanding Teams to Compete.

Many of the finest teams in the country are to compete in today's contest, which is under the general supervision of Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse and Mule Association of America. Teams are here from Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, and Ohio.

THE TRIBUNE has three principal purposes in holding the contest. They are:

1. To aid farmers and city team owners in recognizing and developing economic horse and mule power through better breeding, feeding, conditioning, training, and driving.

2. To demonstrate the value of proper harnessing and efficient driving.

3. To assist in building good will and to aid in a better understanding between city and country. THE TRIBUNE Experimental farms at Wheaton and Yorkville are themselves conducted largely to foster this good will and understanding.

How the Contest Is to Be Run.

The pulling competition is to take place under the trained eyes of three judges who will follow the national "uniform regulations" of the horse association. The teams do not actually pull against each other. Each team will be hitched to a dynamometer furnished by the University of Illinois. This apparatus indicates with scientific accuracy the pulling strength of each pair of animals. The teams are required to pull a distance of 27½ feet. The pull will be made over a course 50 by 100 feet.

Horses began arriving as early as 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning, as well as other "power animals" which are to give pulling demonstrations. Only horses and mules regularly entered in the contest will take part in the competition itself.

A Wisconsin ox team arrived at the farm about noon yesterday. Judy, the five ton elephant from the Chicago Zoological park at Brookfield, will ride to the farm on a trailer this morning.

Power Parade at 11:30 A. M.

All of the animals in the contest and in the demonstrations will be in the big power parade which starts on the contest grounds at 11:30 o'clock this morning.

Early this morning members of the American Legion of Wheaton will set up an open air kitchen on the contest grounds. They are prepared to serve chicken dinners, country style, to the thousands of visitors. One hundred men and women from the Wheaton community will cook and serve the food under the general direction of H. C. Rasmussen.

Jack Conley, a scout executive of Du Page county, has been busy for weeks training 1,000 Boy Scouts to handle their various duties at the contest, including messenger and first aid service, and the parking of cars. The scouts and the West Chicago High school will furnish bands. They will form a single mass band of 150 pieces in the power parade.

Dr. Harry Caldwell of Wheaton has been appointed as official veterinarian.

Weather to Be Warm.

Joseph A. Schmitz, weighmaster of the Chicago Board of Trade, will have charge of the live stock scales used in officially weighing the competing teams.

J. R. Lloyd, Chicago weather forecaster, predicted yesterday that the weather today would continue to be warmer and prospects were favorable for generally fair weather. The contest will proceed, however, regardless of weather.

Amplifiers will broadcast the program to the crowd assembled on the hill along the contest area.

Pictures of the teams in action and the crowds on the contest grounds will be taken from an airplane at 11:30 a. m. and again at 1:30 p. m. Moving pictures also will be taken.

Officials of the contest, in addition to Mr. Dinsmore, are: E. T. Robbins, University of Illinois; R. B. Cooley, Purdue university; Harry F. Moxley, Michigan State college; Clarence Thurow, manager, and Louis Thurow of THE TRIBUNE experimental farm, Yorkville; Carl Henderson, manager, TRIBUNE experimental farm, Wheaton; Joseph A. Schmitz, Chicago, and Dr. Harry Caldwell, Wheaton.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Ready for Big Day.

TODAY is the big day on the experimental farm near Wheaton. After weeks of preparation the horse and mule pulling contest is going to start this morning. The farm workers have been busy for weeks preparing for this interesting event, which will get under way at 9:30 this morning and continue through the afternoon. The public is invited to watch the teams of powerful sleek horses compete against each other in tests to determine which team can pull the strongest against the dynamometer. There is no admission charge to watch the contest.

When I was on the farm yesterday the boys were hustling around on a few last minute details of the contest. Signs which will direct the public to the natural amphitheater in which the contest will be staged are in position. Last night it was possible to look over some of the competing teams because they were already on the farm so as to be ready for the call of the judges early this morning when the horses are weighed.

Two bantam hens moved to the farm yesterday right in the middle of all the excitement that prevails on the eve of the contest. The two bantams were shown their new quarters on the farm, given clutches of eggs to hatch, and now are at work, far removed from the noise and crowds of this day.

One of the hens is going to see what kind of a job she can do with a clutch of Chukar partridge eggs. Right near this hen a Japanese silky is mighty busy with a bunch of mutant pheasant chicks which hatched a few days ago. In another pen near by a fussy little bantam is looking over four ducklings [English call ducks]. But our wood duck eggs are not going to produce any ducklings. They are long overdue.

The two Egyptian geese on the farm have grown so big that their foster mother, a Barred Rock hen, has trouble nestling them.

Women Sue to Keep Police from Their Card Parties

The Auburn Women's Sewing club, 8018 South Halsted street, sued in the Superior court yesterday to enjoin the police department from interfering with the club's card parties. The bill, filed in behalf of Mrs. Gladys Livingstone, sets forth that the club was organized for social purposes by 30 women, but that on June 12 the police entered and forbade the members to play cards. A Gresham police report indicates that police visited the clubroom on that day and halted a bunco game, in accordance with a police order to stop such games.

JAIL WAUKEGAN DENTIST IN ROW OVER JUDGMENT

Dr. Harry J. McKean, 40 years old, 907 North Sheridan road, Waukegan, a dental surgeon, was locked up in the Lake county jail yesterday on a body execution. The order of imprisonment was issued by Circuit Judge Ralph J. Dady on the ground that Dr. McKean had failed to pay a judgment of $12,905 in favor of the Waukegan National bank.

Melvin E. Ericson, receiver of the bank, set up the claim that the dentist is concealing his assets. Ericson paid $10.50 for a week's jail board for the prisoner.

Among other things, the receiver's petition asserted that Dr. McKean had transferred five pieces of real estate to his mother-in-law, Mrs. Catherine Lott, and had had a sham judgment for $5,700 given against himself in favor of the Security Industrial Finance company, all with the design of evading the bank's judgment.

Dr. McKean, who is secretary treasurer of the finance company, and his attorney, Herman Litchfield, asserted that the transfer of the real estate was made to settle a debt to Mrs. Lott and that the finance company judgment also was legitimate.

Attorney Litchfield filed a petition in federal court here asking that Dr. McKean be adjudged a bankrupt, and obtained from Federal Judge John P. Barnes a writ of habeas corpus, made returnable at 10 a. m. today.

DERN VINDICATES FOULOIS IN ARMY AIR MAIL FIASCO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, the first man in the United States army to learn to fly and the administration's scapegoat in the army air mail fiasco of a year ago, was vindicated today by Secretary of War George H. Dern.

Secretary Dern found the man who learned to fly from Wilbur Wright and who was for many years the entire army air force not guilty of two serious charges of misconduct brought against him by a house committee which investigated the army conduct of the mails. Foulois was held guilty of a minor committee charge and will be reprimanded on this count.

Clean Bill on Two Counts.

Foulois was found not guilty of violation of existing laws in the purchase of airplanes and aircraft materials when the army began to fly the mails early in 1934. He was also found not guilty of making unsound estimates to the postoffice department as to the condition of readiness of the army air corps to take over the mails.

The third count was that he had made "incorrect, unfair, and misleading statements to a congressional committee." These statements consisted largely of criticism of the army general staff for ignorance of air matters.

Censure on the third charge was not unexpected by Foulois' friends in the service because the army high command is notoriously touchy. Foulois has several times in the past lost opportunity for promotion through his outspokenness.

Yield to Nation's Demand.

Foulois was in command of the air force when the administration abrogated existing air mail contracts with private companies and turned the mails over to the army. In a few weeks a dozen army pilots lost their lives and the administration yielded to the country's demand to spare further slaughter by putting the mails back into the hands of commercial flyers.

A subcommittee of the house military affairs committee launched an investigation. From the outset observers saw the committee as being more interested in finding a scapegoat in the army than in politics.

Seen as Logical Victim.

Foulois was seen as the logical victim. The committee called upon Secretary Dern for his ouster as head of the air mails last August. As Dern was about to yield to their demand, according to reliable sources, the general staff saw in such surrender a dangerous precedent under which congress might dictate military affairs.

Hastily the army high command decided to take the air force out of Foulois' hands and place it under the chief of staff as the general headquarters air force. This move was approved last Oct. 2 by Secretary Dern.

Secretary Dern had previously refused to remove Foulois in response to the committee recommendation. But in setting up the GHQ force and relieving Foulois of command of the air combat force he was seen as virtually yielding to the committee program of finding a scapegoat for the administration.

The committee charges against Foulois were then turned over to the inspector general of the army. These findings were made public and approved by Secretary Dern today.

MEETING IN 9TH WARD PROTESTS BIDWILL OUSTER

A resolution of protest against hte "un-American action of the state senate in disregarding the votes of the citizens of the 7th senatorial district and depriving Senator Arthur J. Bidwill of his seat," was adopted last night in a 9th ward meeting at 11039 South Michigan avenue, which was attended by representatives of a number of organizations.

John W. Maloney, chairman of the political action committee of the Hamilton club, told the meeting that Bidwill, a Republican, was declared elected in the 7th district last November by 149 votes and was duly seated. Then, he said, the Democratic majority in the senate acted on a petition of the defeated Democratic candidate, Charles F. Baumrucker, and, without opening the ballot boxes for a recount, seated Baumrucker in place of Bidwill.

H. Wallace Caldwell, county commissioner, was another speaker at the meeting.

CONVICTION IS REVERSED.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday reversed the conviction of Samuel Cherry, 50 years old, a grocer at 3717 Chicago avenue, who was recently sentenced to five years in federal prison on charges of receiving hijacked merchandise. The appeals courts held a directed verdict of not guilty should have been granted.

3 ARCHBISHOPS PUNISHED; POLICE ROUT FOLLOWERS

ATHENS, June 14.—(AP)—Prayers of thousands gathered under the courtroom windows today failed to save three archbishops of the Greek Orthodox church from sentence of five years' confinement in lonely monasteries for resisting changes in the Greek church calendar.

Adherents of the archbishops, who were arrested Wednesday, withstood police and firemen who, using fire hose and later force, tried in vain to halt their singing, shouting, and praying. The church leaders, who refused to appear for trial, were sentenced in Absentia. In addition to confinement they were demoted in rank.

The archbishops had severed their connection with the church and urged the clergy to side with them, asserting Archbishop Chrysostomos had betrayed the church's interests in accepting the Gregorian calendar instead of the Julian calendar. At the time of their arrest, authorities announced the step in precaution against possible violence.

Pope Gregory XIII abolished the Julian calendar in 1582 because of its errors, and most Christian countries now use the Gregorian. Greece abandoned the Julian calendar in May, 1923, although an opposition faction has been celebrating church feasts by that calendar since.

CHINA FETES NEW JAPANESE ENVOY AS CRISIS GROWS

Honors Him with Wine and Nipponese Anthem.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, June 14.—Despite conditions approaching a state of war between Japan and China as a result of drastic Nipponese demands for a friendly and pliable administration in the northern provinces, the Chinese government at Nanking staged a first class show today when Akira Ariyoshi, first Japanese ambassador to China, presented his credentials. Ariyoshi recently was elevated from ministerial to ambassadorial rank.

Wearing a full dress, gold braided uniform with a white plumed hat, Ariyoshi and other high Japanese diplomatic, consular, military, and naval officials proceeded in gayly decorated automobiles through streets heavily lined with soldiers. A Chinese military band played the "Kimigayo," Japanese national anthem.

Drink Champagne Toasts.

Lin Sen, venerable president of the Nanking government, stood on a raised dais of the rotunda of the government building, flanked by Premier Wang Ching-wei and other high Chinese officials.

After the formalities the Japanese and Chinese officials went to an adjoining room, where champagne was served. Following this Lin Sen was host at a luncheon.

Ariyoshi, in his speech, said the exchange of ambassadors marked the "crystalization of mutual respect and good will between the two countries, since the positive establishment of cooperation between the two countries is the only key to peace in the far east.

"The fact that we have been able to put aside temporary differences in order to exchange ambassadors constitutes the basis for a new era of peace and good will."

Envoy Plans Warning.

Ariyoshi is scheduled later to visit the Chinese foreign office. According to Japanese press reports here, he will present a memorandum containing a further warning to China to suppress rigorously anti-Japanese boycott movements, agree to the immediate establishment of radio, telegraph, telephone, and aviation lines between the two nations, agree to the establishment of a cotton cultivation program, which Japan hopes will enable its cotton mills to become independent of purchases of American cotton, and to reduce immediately Chinese tarif rates on Japanese goods.

The situation in the northern provinces, meanwhile, neared a climax with the presentation to the Chinese authorities of a series of new Japanese demands. These demands included:

1. Cessation of anti-Japanese activities in Chahar province.

2. The arrest and punishment of persons responsible for the detention and questioning of four Japanese at Changpei last Wednesday.

3. An apology and assurance against repetition of this incident.

Lieut. Col. Bungi Matsui, Japanese resident officer at Kalgan, denied that Gen. Sung Cheh-Yuan, governor of Chakar, had been ordered to evacuate the province with his troops. The Japanese claim Sung has an army of 70,000, but this is thought to be an exaggeration.

Urgent Protest Reported.

LONDON, June 14.—(AP)—Certain diplomatic quarters here reported today that China was making urgent representations to the western powers against Japanese moves after Quo Tai-Chi, the Chinese ambassador, called at the foreign office to discuss the situation. It was reported that China claims Japan's action is a flagrant violation of the nine power treaty.

It was said that Ambassador Quo informed Great Britain that China wishes to force Japan to adhere to the provisions of the treaty, to which the United States and Great Britain as well as other nations are signatories, and that China is unable to make further concessions to Japan.

Grass Grows Long in Lincoln Park

A view in Lincoln park yesterday showing how the grass has been allowed to grow. Park district officials announced that they have been promised 1,200 men from the relief rolls to cut the grass.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

1,200 to Get Work

Officials of the Chicago park district announced yesterday that they had been promised 1,200 men from the Illinois Emergency Relief commission next week to attack the grass and weeds that are growing rank throughout the system.

James Gallagher, head of the park landscaping division, conceded that the grass needed attention. He gave two reasons for the unkempt condition, one that direct relief labor was withdrawn during the recent fight over the relief situation in the Illinois legislature and the other that heavy spring rains had made the grass spring up faster than it has for 15 years.

A trip through Lincoln park yesterday disclosed stands of grass in some of the park plots at knee height. The grass was growing especially high around the zoo and just west of the lagoon. It was noticed that weeds and grass were also choking up the black earth beds of shrubbery and bewhiskering the trunks of trees.

In explaining the landscaping situation, Gallagher said that throughout the entire park district only 359 men were employed in cutting and improving the greensward. He added that the park district budget had been prepared under the assumption that the force would be greatly augmented by relief labor and when the men were withdrawn several weeks ago the parks had gone ahead as best they could with the skeleton force.

CHACO WAR ENDS; 90,000 SOLDIERS LAY DOWN ARMS

Cease Firing on 500 Mile Battle Front.

BUENOS AIRES, June 14.—(AP)—Ninety thousand Paraguayan and Bolivian soldiers stacked arms at noon today after three years of grueling jungle warfare that took 100,000 lives.

A "cease firing" order sent out by radio, telephone and telegraph along the thinly drawn 500 mile front reaching from the Pilcomayo river to the Brazilian frontier put an end—temporarily at least—to 50 years of bitter, intermittently bloody international dispute over "El Gran Chaco," South America's "green hell."

South America Jubilant.

The silence that fell upon blood drenched battlefields where rifles rattled and machine guns roared only yesterday was the signal for unrestrained, almost delirious rejoicing in La Paz and Asuncion, capitals of the war weary belligerent nations. All South America, in holiday, echoed their jubilance.

Virtually every country held solemn masses of thanksgiving, Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Peru declared official holidays, Argentines paused in one minute's silence to honor the many dead and Paraguayans and Bolivians alike danced and sang in the streets for joy.

U. S. Officer at Front.

A neutral military commission on which Capt. Frederick Sharp, military attache here, represented the United States, arrived this morning at the Bolivian and Paraguayan headquarters, Villa Montes and Comancho, to supervise cessation of hostilities.

Ten days of truce went into effect at mid-day, during which time legislators of the belligerents are expected to ratify the peace protocol drawn up at Buenos Aires by representatives of six neutral American nations, including the United States, and signed by the warring nations' foreign ministers this week.

A second, formal 12 day truce begins with ratification. Simultaneously the mediators here will start working out details of demobolization and demilitarization preparatory to discussion of the ancient territorial dispute. Failing agreement here, the question goes to the world court.

Deserts, Jungles, and Swamps.

The battle line, curving northward to the Parapiti river, traverses deserts, jungles, and swamps. It includes many quiet sectors and impassable regions where the opposing troops have not seen each other for weeks or months, this in contrast to the modern trenches and forts in front of Villa Montes.

John D. Rockefeller Sr. Arrives Home from Florida

Lakewood, N. J., June 14.—(AP)—John D. Rockefeller Sr. arrived at Lakewood at 5:32 p. m. [Chicago daylight saving time] today and went immediately by automobile to his estate. He spent the winter in Florida.

BOY CONFRONTS KIDNAP SUSPECTS IN OLYMPIA JAIL

U. S. Prosecutors Seek to Clinch Case.

Olympia, Wash., June 14.—[Special.]—George Weyerhaeuser, accompanied by two department of justice agents, entered the county jail here at noon today to see Harman M. Waley and his wife, Margaret, and attempt to identify them as his kidnapers.

An hour and a half after the boy entered the jail he left with his guards. All three stepped into the front seat of a sedan and drove rapidly away.

Questions Are Guarded.

In the jail officials said they did not know whether the boy had identified the Waleys or not. They said Waley and then his wife were brought before the boy and the agents and questioned. They refused to disclose the questions asked or the answers given.

The Waleys, held here since they pleaded not guilty to violations of the Lindbergh kidnap law and to charges of extortion in a federal court at Tacoma last week, have, according to federal agents, confessed abducting the 9 year old heir to a lumber fortune and receiving a share of the $200,000 ransom paid by his parents for his freedom.

Seek to "Clinch Case."

Prosecutors in Tacoma, where they will be tried, have said that identification of the couple by young George would virtually clinch the government's case against them. The boy's trip here today undoubtedly was made for this purpose, observers said. Jail officials refused to comment upon this.

Meanwhile near Butte, Mont., other agents and local police were engaged in examining a lonely cabin, high on the continental divide and isolated in a canyon three miles east of the city, that is believed to have been the hiding place of William [Scar Face] Mahan, ex-convict who was, according to the Waleys, the brains of the kidnap gang.

The place was raided early today after the owner, a rancher, reported that he had gone to the cabin to clean it that afternoon. When he walked in the front door a man fled through the rear and ran into the nearby forest.

The rancher said that he had known of no one using the cabin since the melting of snows recently, and police immediately conjectured that Mahan had been secretly living in the place since last Sunday when he abandoned an automobile and $15,155 of the Weyerhaeuser ransom money in Butte.

STEAMER AGROUND OFF ALASKA.

DUTCH HARBOR, Alaska, June 14.—(AP)—The steamship Arthus J. Baldwin was aground in Dutch Harbor today, with a receding tide and high winds making efforts of the naval vessel Gannet and the coast guard cutters Alert and Calypso to haul her off apparently unavailing until the weather abates.

Find Indian Hammer

A ten inch Indian hammer head of granite was discovered approximately 15 feet below the surface of the ground on the point of land between the Chicago river and Ogden slip, east of Michigan avenue, yesterday by excavators working on the new west side intercepting sewer of the sanitary district. Walter Faget, principal construction engineer for the district, said that no rock similar to the hammer head is to be found in this community. The hammer may have been brought here, possibly 150 years ago, by Indians from northern Wisconsin, he said. It was turned over to Paul V. Colianni, sanitary district trustee.

STEAL 62 REELS OF COMEDY.

Max Levy, owner of the Exclusive Film Service at 732 South Wabash avenue, reported to the Central police yesterday that burglars had entered his storeroom and carried away 62 reels of comedy films, each 400 feet long. A value of $1,720 was placed on the property.

CUTTING PLANE CRASH BLAMED ON BAD WEATHER

Five Rule Violations Also Cited in Report.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—Bad weather was blamed today by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper for the airplane crash May 6 in which Senator Bronson Cutting of New Mexico and four other persons were killed and eight were injured. In an official report the secretary listed inaccurate weather forecasts and improper clearance at Albuquerque, N. M.

"I am convinced the accident was due chiefly to bad weather conditions," Secretary Roper said. "The two pilots, Bolton and Greeson, made every possible effort to land their passengers safely, but were unable to do so because of the prevailing fog and darkness.

Forecasts Are Blamed.

"Contributory causes undoubtedly were inaccurate weather forecasts, from both the United States weather bureau and the company meteorologist, given the Sky Chief crew at Albuquerque and improper clearance by the T. W. A. ground personnel of the plane from Albuquerque."

The secretary also reported that the crew proceeded in violation of department laws when its radio became defective and that the TWA ground personnel should have dispatched the plane to a field where a safe landing might be made when bad weather developed. The report also stated that the plane had an insufficient gasoline supply.

Cites Five Violations.

Five air bureau regulation violations, discovered in investigation of the crash, will be filed against the company, Secretary Roper said. These are failure of the pilot to obtain approval from the bureau when he had been absent from the division for six months, failure of the pilot to take his last regular three month physical examination, the co-pilot did not hold a scheduled air transport rating, failure to carry sufficient fuel, and failure to have two-way radio commission in proper order.

DIVORCE SUIT FILED AT SANTA ANA, CAL., BY WALTER K. HILL

Santa Ana, Cal., June 14.—(AP)—Walter K. Hill, son of the late J. J. Hill, head of the Great Northern railroad, has filed suit for divorce in Superior court here from Mrs. Mildred Richardson Hill, it was learned today.

In addition to a divorce, Hill asked for the return from the First Trust company of St. Paul, Minn., of two agreements whereby he gave his wife a monthly income of $1,250, and created a $65,000 trust fund to be paid to Mrs. Hill in event they were living as man and wife at the end of five years.

The Hills were married in Livingston, Mont., May 18, 1921, and separated June 25, 1930, the same day the agreements were made.

The plaintif alleges that as soon as the agreements were made, Mrs. Hill moved to Seattle where she lived "with a man known as Roland Buckley."

Residents of the neighborhood referred to Mrs. Hill as the "scandal of Broadmoor," Hill related.

JUDGE GRANTS DIVORCE, THEN TIES NEW KNOT

A few minutes after William H. Kremer, special representative for the American Steel & Wire Co., 208 South La Salle street, was divorced in the Superior court by his first wife, Estelle, yesterday, he was remarried to his second wife, Edith Mae. The marriage ceremony was performed by Judge Rudolph F. Desort, who also had granted the divorce.

The strange situation developed in this manner:

Kremer married his first wife in 1897 and divorced her last April 2 in Walnut Ridge, Ark. On the same day he was married to Edith Mae Angell.

Kremer's first wife contested the Arkansas divorce on the ground that she had not been served with papers in the case and filed a separate maintenance suit here. Yesterday she changed the bill to one for divorce, upon Kremer's agreement to pay $100 a month alimony. The remarriage ceremony was performed in recognition of the Chicago divorce, according to Attorney Harry X. Cole for Kremer.

PRESIDENT MAPS WAYS TO SPREAD WORKS RELIEF

Expects Jobs Will Reach Peak by Nov. 1.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt today redefined his 4 billion dollar works relief program as a measure to put 3,500,000 employables on relief rolls to work as rapidly as possible. In his definition he said large scale public works and land developments will be cut to the core for projects which will give a maximum of employment at a minimum of expense.

The President curtly stated he is "cutting the sail to fit the cloth." In this expression the President was seen as settling the sharp conflict which has arisen within the administration on the conduct of the program.

Supports Hopkins' Plan.

By declaring himself for placing 3,500,000 men to work the President supported the position of Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, head of the works progress division. Hopkins was opposed by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, head of the works allotment board, who favored large scale public works at the expense of reducing the number of men to be put to work on the ground such projects would bring about indirect employment.

Mr. Roosevelt said there had been no change in his policy, and he made no reference to the Ickes-Hopkins dispute. He declared it is his desire that all projects average an outlay of $1,200 per man, including materials.

He declared, however, that in recent weeks many hopes have been destroyed —the hopes of cities and municipalities for large grants for public works. It had been hoped from the beginning, he said, that requests for allotments from cities and states would be well within the $1,200 limitation.

Seeks to Strike Balance.

The President characterized his redefinition as the dictation of simple mathematics. The number of workers which he hopes to put to work, divided into the 4 billion dollar fund, gives a per man expense of about $1,200.

From this, he said, it is obvious that if five projects have a per man cost of $1,500, five others must strike the balance by not exceeding $900. He declared himself most anxious to strike such a balance.

The President held CCC work to be within the $1,200 limitation. Roads will cost about $2,500 per man, he estimated, and PWA work about $2,000 per man.

In the present allocations, the President said, are a number of expensive projects which are being carried over from the PWA or have been morally obligated in the last two years. Among the "morally obligated" projects he included power plants, dams and the like.

Mentions Tidal Project.

He specifically mentioned the Passamaquoddy tidal control project in Maine, which was a political football in the last election. Republicans charged that Ickes was holding out the project to harness the moon as bait for Democratic votes.

The President said the "morally obligated projects" were relatively insignificant when measured against the 4 billion fund. He estimated them at between 150 and 160 million dollars.

Mr. Roosevelt said he still believed the peak of work will be reached about Nov. 1. He told newspaper men he selected 4 billion dollars for his fund as against any other sum because he did not want to overrun the budget, and he estimated that sum would put 3,500,000 men to work.

Pressed to list projects which could be carried on at a cost below the $1,200 average, the President said there were a great many. He cited but one, the building of wooden bridges over creeks in Alabama.

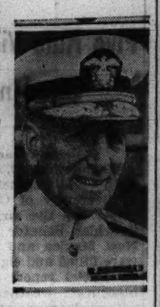
WOMAN HANGS HERSELF.

Mrs. Mary Saukus, 54 years old, 5206 South Kilbourn avenue, hanged herself yesterday in a chicken coop at the rear of her home.

INQUIRY IS CONDUCTED INTO ANTI-COMMUNIST ARTICLE BY ADMIRAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt today disclosed that a joint investigation is being conducted by Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson and Secretary of State Cordell Hull into an article written by Rear Admiral Yates Stirling suggesting an alliance against communism.



ADMIRAL YATES STIRLING.

The President said he had not read the article, which was interpreted as a threat against Russia. He added that he had received no official report on the subject, but one might come jointly from the two secretaries, although he said that matter was strictly within the province of Secretary Swanson.

Earlier in the day Secretary Swanson informed the house naval affairs committee Admiral Stirling required no superior authorization before writing the article. The secretary sent a letter to the committee which read:

"The newspaper article by Rear Admiral Yates Stirling appearing in the Washington Herald June 9, 1935, was not authorized by the secretary of the navy or anybody delegated by him. It is not necessary for a naval officer to obtain advance authority to publish an article."

The committee at the suggestion of Chairman Carl Vinson [Dem., Ga.] voted to report unfavorably a resolution by Representative Vito Marcantonio [Rep., N. Y.], which brought the letter from the secretary. Representative Marcantonio had asked that the secretary be required to state whether the article had been authorized and how much Stirling had received for it.

PARADES TODAY WILL HERALD 'USED CAR WEEK'

Heralding Chicagoland Used Car week, which will begin tomorrow morning and in which used car dealers of Chicago are to participate, two parades, each a mile long, are to take place in the city today. At 11:30 o'clock motor concerns of Automobile row on South Michigan avenue will take part in a procession along Michigan from Ohio street to 14th street. At 3 o'clock a similar pageant of automobiles, under the auspices of the Stony Island Avenue Auto Dealers' association, will start from 71st street and Stony Island avenue and move through the South Shore and contiguous districts.

In the two parades will ride Miss Marybeth Kemp, recently chosen queen of the Michigan blossom festival. Thirty-two girls from the Chicago park district, dressed in recreational costumes, and the four Nelson sisters, skating stars, will add color to the parade.

The Board of Trade band, led by Armin Hand, and the champion Chicago Boy Scout Drum and Bugle corps, Troop 860, will march in the Michigan avenue parade. A feature of the procession will be the appearance of old time cars which have been tuned up and dusted off especially for this occasion, and the official white safety car of the Keep Chicago Safe committee. William Lundmark will be marshal for the Michigan avenue parade, and Joseph T. Healy of the South Shore event.

Mrs. E. Russell Palmer Gets Divorce and Cash

A cash settlement of $10,000, to be paid over a period of five years to Mrs. Madge Palmer, 854 North Sheridan road, Highland Park, has been agreed upon, Judge Ralph J. Dady in the Lake county Circuit court at Waukegan was told yesterday as he granted Mrs. Palmer a divorce from E. Russell Palmer, Chicago advertising man. It also was stipulated that Palmer was to have custody of the child, E. Russell Jr., 14 years old, but his mother may see him at any and all times. The Palmers were married Sept. 18, 1915. She charged cruelty.

RELIEF SHELTERS MAKE MEN BUMS, SURVEY REVEALS

U. of C. Scholars Study Chicago Conditions.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

Chicago relief shelters for nonfamily men were described as institutions which make "bums" of their inmates in a report given yesterday before the Society for Social Research at the University of Chicago.

The report, by Dr. Harvey J. Locke, presented part of the findings of a two year survey which has been conducted by Prof. Edwin Sutherland of the university's sociology department. In addition to statistical studies of relief records, an important portion of the survey consisted of interviews with about a thousand shelter residents by investigators who lived with them for periods ranging from six weeks to six months.

Some Characters Bear Up.

That a few, at least, of the inmates escape the deteriorating influence of the shelters was indicated by the fact that one of these investigators had lived in a shelter for four years before he found employment in the survey. Dr. Locke's report, on the process of "shelterization" dealt with the psychological reactions of the shelter residents to their environment.

About 75 per cent of the shelter inmates are classified as Hobohemians, this class consisting of outright bums, "home guard floaters," who were casual workers about the city from time to time in better days, and seasonal laborers, such as harvest hands and railroad laborers. The remaining 25 per cent is made up of men who had steady work as common laborers before the depression, with a smaller number of skilled workmen, white collar workers, and a very few professional men. Few professional panhandlers live in shelters, Dr. Locke said. The hours interfere with their work, and their profits are such that they can afford better quarters.

The Discouraging Aspects.

"The total situation," Dr. Locke said of the shelter inmate, "includes being unemployed and dependent upon public relief; living in a slum area; being isolated from former social and economic contacts; having disheartening experiences with employment agencies and business concerns; and either being or approaching the age when reemployment in industry is unlikely.

"The decision to enter a shelter was in many cases a surrender of a man's highest values and was simply accepted as a last resort.

"One man described his feelings as follows: 'Here privacy is a forgotten word. On a cold or rainy day, or during the evenings, men are crowded into the basement or assembly room—German, colored, Pole, Greek, Mexican, American, Irish, Russian, and every nationality which goes to make up a cosmopolitan city.

"'Here also are degenerates, drunks, working men, bums, clerks, old men with all ambition gone, young men whose every ideal has been crushed, all herded together. One almost tastes the stench of unclean bodies, and the sulphur odor from fumigated clothes. For quite a while this lack of privacy nearly drove me nuts.'

The Moral Breakdown.

"Generally the new client is industrious in looking for work. When his efforts end in failure and when he sees that most of the men have given up the struggle, he tends to adopt the attitude common to the group. There is a tendency to lose all personal sense of responsibility for getting out of the shelters, to become insensible to the element of time, to lose ambition, pride, self-respect, to develop a general lack of confidence, to avoid former friends, and to identify himself with the shelter group.

"As a result of the loss of physical and psychological 'front' and the engaging in the behavior characteristics of the bum, clients tend to adopt the attitude, 'There is no use for me to try, for I look like a bum and act like a bum, and probably the public is right in thinking that I am only a bum.'"

All of the papers presented before the society yesterday gave facets of a broad study of the entire social character of the Chicago metropolitan area, consisting of nine counties in northeastern Illinois and three each in Wisconsin and Indiana, which the University of Chicago sociology department is carrying on.

Gabriel Almond presented a preliminary report on a survey of the trend of political, business, religious, academic, philanthropic and "society" leadership in the city. The survey covers three periods, 1835 to 1850, 1880 to 1885, and the present.

Change in Leadership.

Political leaders in the earliest period, he found, included 25 business leaders, 29 attorneys, eight physicians and two journalists. At present only five politicians were classified as leaders in other fields—one as an attorney and four in "society" because of national public or party office.

Confidential questioning of some 1,800 leaders in various fields established the following "ratings" of Chicago clubs: Among business leaders, the Chicago university, Chicago Athletic association, Union league and Saddle and Cycle clubs, in the order named; in "society," Chicago university, Saddle and Cycle, Onwentsia; and among philanthropists, the same ratings as for "society." This, Mr. Almond pointed out, indicates a close relation between leaders in business, philanthropy and society which is absent in present day politics in Chicago.

Big Church Membership.

Church membership in the Chicago area of fifteen counties is proportionately higher than in the United States as a whole, Forrest Weller stated in a preliminary report on religion. The percentage of church members in the area is 49.89, against 46.83 in the nation.

Chicago has 109 denominations represented, more than any other city. Roman Catholics constitute 49.52 per cent of the church members, followed in order by Jews, various Lutheran denominations taken together, colored Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians.

TRANSIENT LOAD FALLS OFF AT STATIONS HERE

Inmates Down to 8,700 and Still Departing.

The population of Cook county's relief shelters has fallen to 8,735, the lowest point in three years, Leo M. Lyons, Cook county relief administrator, revealed yesterday at a meeting of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission. Five shelters are now being closed, and officials expect that the number of men in shelters will be down to 5,000 within the next few months.

From a peak of 22,000, the number of nonfamily men on relief has decreased to an estimated 14,000. Of these more than 5,000 are now being supported outside the shelters.

Aside from the factor of increased private employment absorbing many of the men, Mr. Lyons said that about 3,000 left Illinois during the recent financial crisis of the IERC when food supplies were not up to standard.

Prepare for Works Program.

To avoid tying up the IERC with contracts for projects which may be taken over later by the federal government under the 4 billion dollar work relief program, the IERC decided yesterday to include a five day cancellation clause in future contracts.

Robert J. Dunham, a member of the commission and the federal works progress administrator for Illinois, is to depart today for a three day conference in Washington with works officials. With him will go Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the IERC, and Maj. Arthur R. Lord, IERC director of work and rehabilitation.

Fifty-eight "pairs" of lesser employés received notice yesterday that they would have to comply with the IERC rule denying employment to more than one member of a family. Many cases of violation resulted from marriages among staf members.

Start Raising Gardens.

The commission approved yesterday the allocation of $335,921 for its 1935 canning program. Simultaneously, 800 relief clients were beginning the cultivation of plots at Irving park boulevard and Cumberland avenue lent to the IERC by the forest preserve board.

The IERC expects 16,000 Cook county residents to supply themselves with fresh vegetables at its relief gardens during the summer and to lay up some stores for the winter.

FINES FATHER OF 7 FOR USING RELIEF ORDER FOR LIQUOR

Charged with selling his family's relief grocery orders and buying whisky with the money, James Convery, 53 years old, 13358 Avenue L, father of seven children, was fined $200 by Judge Thomas A. Green in the South Chicago court yesterday. Convery was arraigned on a disorderly conduct charge on complaint of his daughter, Lorraine, 14 years old. The girl testified that her mother, Clara, has been confined in the South Chicago hospital since the birth of her seventh child ten weeks ago. Lorraine testified her father sold the relief orders while the rest of the family went hungry. The family has been on relief for four years, she said.

When George Lapping, 29 years old, 3757 Arthington street, was arrested recently in Oak Park, charged with embezzling $400 from an insurance company that employed him, he began to ponder. First he reasoned that if he repaid the $400 he might escape prosecution. Second he decided that he would have to find a scheme to raise the money.

From Lapping's standpoint, however, the scheme had to be lucrative, as he is scheduled to appear before Magistrate Martin H. McGrath on the embezzlement charge Tuesday. So he tried what he thought was a new wrinkle in the robbery racket.

His plan was to knock on the doors of a hotel room and represent himself as the hotel's publicity man. Having gained entrance he would present a pistol, rob the guest, and lock him in his bathroom.

He worked this scheme in the Hotel Sherman and in the Congress. Yesterday, however, he chose as his victim, J. Campbell of Los Angeles, who was taking a bath when Lapping knocked at his door in the Hotel La Salle. Campbell told his visitor to return later. Then he called the desk. When Lapping went back House Detective Arthur C. Reynolds was waiting for him.

COUPLE ROB CAB DRIVER.

SENATE TO PASS SOCIAL SECURITY MONDAY, BELIEF

Measure Already Given House Approval.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—The senate today began consideration of the New Deal's social security measure, providing old age pensions, unemployment insurance, and child welfare grants, and there was no determined opposition in prospect. Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the finance committee and manager of the bill, predicted its passage Monday.

The house already has passed it.

With the exception of a "share the wealth" scheme offered as a substitute by Huey Long, the Louisiana "Kingfish," the only important amendment expected by Harrison was a proposal from Senators Bennett C. Clark of Missouri and Walter F. George of Georgia to exempt companies which have their own pension plans from the federal taxes. This amendment was defeated in the finance committee and is not expected to prevail on the senate floor.

Charge Bill Penalizes Youth.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings [Rep., Delaware] pointed out that the old age annuity plan embraced by the bill would penalize the youth of the nation in favor of the aged, and Senator Harrison did not deny this.

"There was no other way we could do it," Harrison said.

Senator Hastings not only gave figures to prove the discrimination against the young people but also showed that a young man would derive greater benefits from a private insurance company's annuity system, on the basis of the same taxes paid by him, than he would under the federal plan.

Cost Is Explained.

"If a man 60 years old and earning $100 a month goes into the plan Jan. 1, 1937, and pays in until he is 65 and lives out his expectancy of 12 years, he will be entitled to $17.50 a month, or $210 a year," Senator Hastings said. "In 12 years that will amount to something like $2,500. There will have been paid in by him and for him during that time $24 for the first, second and third years, and $36 for the next two years, making $144. Thus it costs, for that individual, something over $2,300.

"If we take a young man who enters employment in 1949, when the full tax of 6 per cent is payable, and he pays for a period of 45 years, he will have earned $54,000, and under the plan will be entitled to $54.75 a month, or $645 a year.

"If he should live out his expectancy he would have paid him $7,740. If the same young man had paid in the same amount to some regular annuity plan he would be entitled to $68.50 a month, or $822 a year, which over a 12 year period would make a total of $9,864. As under the plan proposed he gets only $7,740, he will lose $2,124.

Two Extreme Examples.

"I cite these two extreme illustrations in order that the senate may know that the difference in favor of the elder man is made up by punishing the youth of the nation."

Harrison explained that the finance committee had added an amendment whereby a man will receive his old age annuity only if he retires from employment, making room for some younger person. He also said the committee had adopted an amendment relating to unemployment insurance whereby states will be permitted to adopt the so-called Wisconsin plan allowing employers to build up their own reserves instead of pooling them.

The bill makes appropriations for the fiscal year 1936 of $49,750,000 for grants in aid to states for old age assistance, $24,750,000 for aid to dependent children, $3,800,000 for maternal aid, $2,850,000 for crippled children, $1,500,000 for child welfare, $841,000 for vocational rehabilitation, $8,000,000 for public health, and $3,000,000 for aid to the blind. This makes a total of $94,491,000, and there is an additional appropriation of $4,000,000 to assist states in the administrative costs of their unemployment insurance plans.

Appropriations Get Bigger.

The appropriations for old age assistance, however, will increase year by year, mounting to more than a billion dollars in 1944, and to more than 2 billion dollars in 1980.

The government's contributions for such assistance are to be limited to $15 a month per person.

Employers are to be taxed from 1 per cent starting in 1937, up to 3 per cent starting in 1949, of their pay rolls to meet the cost of the unemployment insurance. The old age annuities are to be paid from taxes levied upon both employers and employés, beginning at 1 per cent and reaching 3 per cent in 1949.

FIRES TOY CANNON AS JOKE; OHIOAN KILLS HIS FRIEND

Cleveland, O., June 14.—(AP)—Renzo M. Kithy, 25, was dead today, the victim of a jest played by a friend with a toy cannon.

Kithy and Robert Roy were working on Kithy's automobile. Kithy was at one end of the car and Roy at the other. Roy told police he thought it would be a good joke to frighten his friend by firing a toy cannon. He said he tugged on a string to discharge the piece and accidentally pointed it at Kithy. The cannon boomed and Kithy fell to the ground about 20 feet away.

At Bedford hospital doctors said Kithy's lung was punctured by the blast of gunshot and a wad of paper. Police listed the shooting as accidental after questioning Roy.

GOVERNORS MEET

GOVERNORS GIVE ROOSEVELT VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Declare Business Has Been Benefited.

Biloxi, Miss., June 14.—(AP)—Voting confidence in President Roosevelt after refusing to go on record opposing federal control of relief spending, the annual conference of governors of the United States closed late today.

They unanimously adopted a resolution saying that "business has been greatly benefited and working conditions vastly improved in the last two years under the wise leadership of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt" and that "it is the sentiment of this governors' conference that these ideals should be encouraged and furthered throughout this nation."

Enhance Purchasing Power.

The resolution affirming confidence in the President's leadership also contained an indorsement of the principles of NRA.

The paragraph referring to the defunct Blue Eagle said:

"Whereas it is essential to our national economic security that a nationwide program providing minimum wages of pay and maximum hours of employment be maintained in the interest of the preservation of amicable relationships between capital and labor and the enhancement of purchasing power of the people of this country to the end that unemployment be reduced. . . ."

McNutt Is Named Chairman.

Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald of Michigan sponsored the resolution opposing federal government control of relief expenditures. It was defeated, 13 to 3.

The governors elected Gov. McNutt chairman and chose a new executive committee consisting of Govs. Harry W. Nice of Maryland, Dave Sholtz of Florida, Henry Horner of Illinois, Alf M. Landon of Kansas, and McNutt of Indiana.

DUNDEE MARKS 100TH YEAR WITH HISTORICAL FETE

More than 8,000 spectators were present yesterday for the parade, historic pageant, and other ceremonies attendant on the Dundee township centennial, commemorating the arrival of the first settlers in that part of Kane county.

In the spring of 1835 Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Newman and Joseph Russell finished their journey by covered wagon from the east, and the first houses were built. The celebration is a joint affair of East Dundee, West Dundee, and Carpentersville.

The parade in Carpentersville featured the covered wagons of pioneer days and modern floats. In the afternoon a historic pageant was staged, depicting the growth of the town. This was followed by an old settlers' reunion at which the speakers were State Senator Arnold J. Benson at Batavia and Attorney Fred B. Shearer of Aurora. In the evening Flag day exercises were held at the Dundee High school.

TWO SHOT WHEN SURPRISED NEAR RAILROAD CARS

Two suspected box car thieves were wounded, one of them perhaps fatally, when they were surprised loitering about cars on a team track of the Chicago and North Western railroad near 15th and Morgan streets last night. They are Cecil Smith, 35 years old, 1649 Jackson boulevard, and Joseph Frank, 57 years old, who said he came from Boston.

They were halted by Harry Brooks, railroad detective, who shot Frank through the chest when the two made a break for freedom. Maxwell street police, answering the alarm of a shooting, saw Smith fleeing and captured him after shooting him in the leg.

Physicians at the Bridewell hospital said Frank probably would die. Smith admitted to police he had been released from Joliet penitentiary only a week ago.

Anonymous Gift Starts a New Charity Fund

Mayor Kelly yesterday announced the establishment of a new charity fund to be known as the Chicago public charity fund. It was started with a $50 anonymous donation given by check made out to such a fund. The check arrived in an envelope addressed in a woman's handwriting. Officials of the bank on which the check was drawn refused to make public the donor's name, saying that she did not wish it to be known.

Sues for Second Divorce from William W. O'Brien

Attorney William W. O'Brien was sued for divorce in the Superior court yesterday by Mrs. Zoe O'Brien, 6842 Paxton avenue, who had previously divorced and remarried him. The O'Briens were first divorced in 1925 but remarried the next year. In her bill filed yesterday, Mrs. O'Brien charged that her husband deserted her in December, 1933. They have one child, William Jr.

TRIBUNE WRITER'S STORY OF OUSTER BY MUSSOLINI

Duce Fears Dictatorship Is Headed for Rocks.

and his speech there, and added that Sardinia was in sore straits economically and that the people were resisting mobilization. As a matter of fact, the troopship at Cagliari, which had been announced in the press as leaving two days earlier, was still there when Mussolini arrived. I have a sound source for my information and it has never been denied.

Telephone Wires Tapped.

On Monday afternoon I called the press and propaganda office to ask the government permission to go to Eritrea with the Italian army. I was received by Sig. Stranio, who summarily refused permission and then said:

"Why did you write those articles about Italy and send them through London?"

The fact that he knew the contents of the stories and that they had been telephoned through London was admission that the press bureau is tapping telephone calls.

"What was the matter with them?" I asked.

"They were not true."

"What facts are not true? You are making a broad statement."

"It doesn't make any difference about the facts. Your stories draw a wrong conclusion."

Charges Hospitality Is "Abused."

He became angrier as he talked and spoke more bullyingly.

"Why did you say the king is opposed to the Ethiopian war, and why do you say the cost of living is rising in Italy?" he demanded.

"Reports that the king is opposed to the war with Ethiopia have been printed in the press throughout Europe for the past two weeks," I replied. "I have lived in Italy for some years and know something personally about the cost of living."

"You are misrepresenting Italy and abusing its hospitality," he said. "I don't know what will happen to you. You must see Grazzi."

Grazzi is the chief of the press bureau and a former consul general in New York.

Stranio walked out of his office and left me sitting there 15 minutes, when an usher told me to go to another room. I waited for another half hour and then insisted on going to my office and returning to see Grazzi later.

At 7:30 p. m. I returned and was told that Grazzi had nothing to say to me and that should he have something to say later he would phone.

Placed Under Arrest.

That was the end of my experience with the propaganda bureau. No call came from Grazzi that night nor on Tuesday.

Wednesday evening, just before 7 o'clock, my phone bell rang. A voice in Italian asked how long I would be there and without saying who was speaking announced he would be over to see me.

At 7 o'clock Pedace's agent came and told me to accompany him to the police station. He told me I had better take my passport and papers.

"Am I arrested?" I asked.

He shrugged his shoulders and indicated that I was.

I waited in an office at the police station for half an hour. Finally a man who had been sitting at a desk near me asked facetiously what my name was and what I had come for.

Given Choice of Frontier.

"Your pal here who brought me over ought to be able to tell you that," I said. Then I asked him why I had been arrested. He said he did not know but that I must see Pedace.

Finally the sleepy cop who had come to my office returned and said Pedace was busy but would see me shortly. Then he asked:

"If you should be leaving Italy, to which frontier would you go? Sig. Pedace will probably have a communication to make to you."

"France," I replied.

At 8:30 o'clock I was shown into Pedace's office. I have known him for several years. He is the man who makes police arrangements for protecting foreign visitors at political conferences. He has charge of all police matters dealing with foreign residents. He is a grim looking, square jawed individual.

Expelled Without Reason.

He motioned me to a chair and said immediately: "You are expelled from the kingdom."

"What for?" I asked.

"I have no reason to give you. I have orders from the ministry of interior to expel you."

"I protest formally at being expelled without reason and demand the right to communicate with the American consul," I said.

"You can't communicate with the consul. You must leave Italy right away. I have already asked the ministry to delay until tomorrow and it was refused."

"But I have a right to know whether I am being expelled as a journalist, as an offender against Italian laws, or what," I insisted.

Pedace was silent awhile and fingered a large folder of papers before him. Finally he said:

"See that? That's your dossier. Those are reports we have about you."

He refused to let me see it. But at last he said:

"You have written some newspaper articles which do not please the government."

Then he took a sheet of paper out of the folder and said:

"My order here to expel you says that you have been hostile to the régime."

Pedace would not give me a copy of this order.

Finally I said:

"Can I speak to my wife?"

"Yes, but only in Italian," he said.

Permitted to See Wife.

In Italian I told my wife to pack a valise and bring it to the railway station. Pedace got on the wire and said she must be there at 9:30. He had looked up the trains and found there was one for Turin at 10:15. He permitted my wife to accompany me to the frontier.

He made me sign a paper acknowledging that he had communicated the order to me. Pedace was courteous.

At 9:15 I left Pedace's office. It was then two hours since I had been arrested. Two policemen took me to the railway station and stood guard over me while I bought the tickets.

In the station I met an Italian friend.

"These fellows here are policemen who have arrested me and they are expelling me from Italy," I said.

One policeman went over and warned my friend not to say anything about this that night.

Train Closely Guarded.

Shortly afterward I passed an American friend and told him the same thing. The policeman was vexed, but said nothing to the American. Two armed plain clothes men were stationed at either end of the coach throughout the trip to Turin from Rome. They were pleasant and unobtrusive, and about midnight one of them, a young man from Abruzzi, came into the compartment where my wife and I were sitting and engaged us in conversation.

"What a mess you have made for me," he said. "I had a date with my lady friend at Porta Pia square tonight at 7:30 and had to call it off to make this trip."

Throughout the night the two policemen stayed awake to see that I did not escape from the train.

In Turin, where I arrived at 10 o'clock in the morning, there was no train to Modane, on the French frontier, until 3:30 p. m. We went to visit the Capucine convent on the hill above Turin. The two policemen followed us everywhere, but did their best to make the guarding as unobtrusive as possible.

They ate luncheon opposite us in the restaurant.

At 3:30 we took the train and two hours later reached Bardonecchia, a small town on the Italian side of the frontier. Here the two policemen made a quick disappearance. My wife went back to Rome to dispose of our residence with a promise that she would not be molested.

I have no way of knowing whether or not the police searched my office or house.

A few minutes after 6 p. m. I reached Modane, on the French side, free of the 20 hours' vigilance of the two policemen. It was just 24 hours since I had been arrested.

Fascists Give False Version.

Fascist authorities in Rome yesterday gave out a version of my expulsion which is an outright tissue of lies. They told the Rome correspondents first that I had been allowed to go home and pack my clothes; second, that I had chosen to go to Vienna when told that I must leave immediately; third, that I had no guard and there was no time limit fixed to my departure, and fourth, that I had been allowed to communicate with the American embassy and that my wife followed me on a later train.

All this is deliberate invention. Such a concoction of falsity illustrates the extent to which the Fascist propaganda office is going to cover up against abuse of the press.

I was not allowed to go home. I was put on a train for Turin three hours after I was arrested under protest. Two guards accompanied me and I was refused a request to communicate with the American embassy. And my wife accompanied me. She did not follow on a later train. The Fascists gave out the version that I had gone to Vienna, knowing that I was en route for Paris, in order to prevent any possible communication from American authorities or friends.

Sees Italy in Dilemma.

New York, June 15.—[Special.]—The Herald-Tribune, in an editorial, "Italy Expels a Correspondent," this morning, says:

"During the world war the parliamentary democracies, like the other belligerents, established rigid press controls, colored and suppressed the news at home and banished intractable foreign correspondents.

"To these precedents Fascist Italy might appeal in explaining its singularly summary ejection of the Rome correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. To do so, however, would be to magnify the Abyssinian brawl into a threat to Italian national existence comparable to that presented by the world war to the nations involved in it. This would be reflecting no credit upon Italian power and prestige.

"If the expulsion is not a war measure, on the other hand, then it can but create the impression abroad that there is enough truth in the correspondent's reports of anti-Fascist agitation in Italy to make them dangerous. Such are the dilemmas in which the press policies of the totalitarian state are bound to involve it.

"The more opinion is managed, the more a government depends upon propaganda. While it is, of course, Italy's privilege to live by whatever governmental philosophy she may think best, others can hardly fail to observe the phenomenon."

Italy Pours Scorn on Britain for Efforts to Prevent War

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 1 [By mail to avoid censor].—Friendship with the British empire, proclaimed by Premier Mussolini as the keystone of Italy's foreign policy, is undergoing a severe strain as a result of unfavorable public opinion in England toward the Fascist campaign against Abyssinia.

The printed abuse which formerly was hurled at the French in the Italian press is now being heaped on the British.

[Premier Mussolini on June 10, nine days after this dispatch was written, ordered the Italian press to soft pedal the attacks on Great Britain.]

Italy had believed Britain would eventually favor an advance of Italian forces into Ethiopia. The recent events at Geneva and the attitude of Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign relations expert, caused great disillusionment. Eden sought to effect a compromise between Rome and Addis Ababa.

Resent "Equality" Status.

Resentment is specially expressed at England's classification of Italy and Abyssinia on an equal basis as members of the league of nations.

Day after day a campaign against "perfidious Albion" was waged in the Italian press. The newspapers were fed with comment from all European papers which reflected a criticism of England, and the editors of the Rome papers dug up British colonial history to find unflattering incidents against the British.

The newspaper Tevere printed cartoons published by the French press during the Boer war showing British troops mistreating Boer women and children.

History was also cited with the purpose of showing that British troops behaved badly in China during the Boxer rebellion. It all reflects the furious Italian susceptibilities to any attempts to thwart Mussolini's aims in Africa.

Tevere also recently printed a long editorial attack on Eden. It said:

"At Geneva the worthy representative of humanitarian England took the part of civilization and the rights of man. It suffices to open two or three history books to learn at what cost of villainy and cruelty the supercolonial empire of the fair English has been built; on what mountain of human bones rests the glory of British colonizers; and of what nature is the red which dyes the Union Jack."

The press, officially inspired, openly put forth the idea that Fascist Italy must make a new appraisal of its friends and base friendship with nations in Europe on the attitude taken by those nations toward the African campaign.

Want Cotton Lands.

Up to the present the two African colonies have cost Italy great sums of money without paying any returns. The Turin newspaper said:

"Europe must be persuaded that the Italian people, rich in energy, cannot keep colonies as luxuries. The work accomplished until the present has been one of civilization, but colonial history teaches that expansion obtains no results unless it is accompanied also with profitable economic activity."

These observations seem to throw light on the real nature and cause of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

Protagonists of the Ethiopian campaign in Italy are saying that Italy will become a great industrial nation if it can get the cotton lands of Abyssinia and produce its own cotton and also make good its lack of minerals with the resources of Abyssinia. And chiefly would Italy obtain an outlet for its increasing population.

COLORED PEOPLE PLAN PARADE ON ETHIOPIAN ISSUE

Plans for a colored parade on the south side on June 23 as a demonstration against Italy's "high handed and aggressive tactics" in regard to Ethiopia were announced yesterday by Robert L. Ephraim, international president general of the Negro World alliance. Group formations and the line of march will be determined tomorrow afternoon at a mass meeting in Grand Boulevard hall, 4654 South Park way, where more than 2,000 colored people are expected to join in a protest against Mussolini's Ethiopian policies.

In the front line of the parade, it is planned, will be the American flag and the flags of Ethiopia and Liberia. Banners and signs will follow, carrying these legends: "Down with Mussolini," "Africa Must Be Free," "Long Live Hailie Selassie, Emperor of Ethiopia" and "N. R. A Means 'Negro, Return to Africa'."

Leaders Will March.

Ephraim said that colored leaders throughout the city are pledging their support to the Ethiopian cause, will be present at the mass meeting tomorrow and will participate in the parade the following week. Ephraim will be the principal speaker at the meeting.

Attorney Henry H. Proctor, formerly an assistant city corporation counsel, who is international attorney general of the Negro alliance, will be another speaker.

"My heart and soul is bent on preserving Ethiopia as a political entity," Proctor declared yesterday. "During the war I served in the army and helped other underprivileged peoples gain their independence.

Plan Protest to Duce.

"There is no reason why I should refuse to support Ethiopia when the war clouds are gathering over the land of our fathers."

Capt. Timothy Dent, international president of the Negro alliance, also will speak tomorrow afternoon. He said he had served in three major engagements in the world war "to make the world safe for democracy and Ethiopia is a component party of the world."

After the mass meeting messages of protest will be sent to Mussolini and the Italian embassy at Washington. Emperor Hailie Selassie will be notified of the American Negroes' confidence in his country's stand against Italy.

ETHIOPIA SPURNS PROTECTORATE OF ANY NATION

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, June 14.—(AP)—Official circles said today that Ethiopia intends to retain every inch of its territory as a sovereign nation and that rumors that the empire was willing to cede Ogaden to Italy were without the slightest foundation. They said that the Ethiopian attitude against accepting the protectorate of any European nation still was unchanged during the forty years since the Italian defeat at Adowa.

St. Petersburg Celebrates Solid Year of Sunshine

St. Petersburg, Fla., June 14.—(AP)—Three hundred and sixty-five days of sunshine was St. Petersburg's record today. Business paused and the city celebrated, marching with bands playing to the office of the St. Petersburg Independent, evening newspaper which is distributed free on days the sun fails to shine before press time.

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt today announced he had won a two week postponement of the nation's 450,000 bituminous coal miners' strike.

By promising leaders of the United Mine Workers that the drastic Guffey coal control bill soon will be given a trial run in congress with at least lukewarm White House backing, Mr. Roosevelt persuaded them to hold up their strike order until June 30. The proposed strike had been set for midnight Sunday.

See Threat as Bluff.

Since the strike threat was precipitated by the mine union and certain pro-Guffey mine owners primarily to force passage of the Guffey bill in congress, the President's action today placated them for the time being. There is serious doubt among anti-Guffey operators if the United Mine Workers dare to attempt a strike.

The nation's 450,000 bituminous coal miners will continue work during the next two weeks under the wage and hour standards set up in the existing contracts between mine operators and the union, although technically these contracts expire at midnight June 16.

Confers with Mine Chiefs.

For almost an hour this noon the President was closeted with Senator Joseph Guffey [Dem., Pa.] and Representative J. Buell Snyder [Dem., Pa.], co-authors of the coal socialization bill; John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers; Duncan U. Kennedy, representing the mine operators, and George L. Beery, NRA deputy administrator.

Postponement of the strike was announced by Lewis at conclusion of the morning conference. Formal ratification of the strike postponement and continuance until June 30 of existing wages and hours will come tomorrow at separate meetings of the operators and miners, but this ratification is considered perfunctory.

President Roosevelt, discussing the morning conference at his semi-weekly press conference this afternoon, revealed how he had won the postponement by pointing out that the Guffey bill, backed by the United Mine Workers as a solution for their strike grievances, soon would be brought out for a trial run in the house and senate. He evidently promised some measure of White House support for the bill.

Senator Guffey, according to the President's account of what happened at the coal conference, said he had reasonable assurance that his bill would be taken up in the senate after the social security bill now under debate. In the house there seems no probability of great delay, Mr. Roosevelt said. He refrained from predicting that the bill would pass either house.

With the assurances from congressional leaders, the President continued, he turned to Lewis and Kennedy and asked them for the general public good if they couldn't see fit to postpone the strike plan and continue for the time being under the existing arrangements.

Lewis and other proponents of the Guffey bill seemed to have understood that the President would do much more for their pet measure than this generalized commendation. He gave no sign of doing so, however.

There is serious doubt if the Guffey bill can be passed.

TOLEDO'S UNION GROUP TO STUDY GENERAL STRIKE

Toledo, O., June 14.—(AP)—Acceptance by the Toledo Edison company of an arbitration proposal took the foreground tonight in the strike of its union electrical workers while leaders of the Central Labor union were preparing to consider a general walkout.

Oliver Myers, business agent of the electrical union, who said he previously had asked the department of labor to send a mediator here.

Myers said the union is willing to enter "open negotiations for settlement," but "we are not negotiating on the earnings of Cities Service; we want to negotiate on the earnings of Toledo Edison." The Toledo company is a subsidiary of Cities Service.

cobblestones and clubs and continued the barrage of rocks for some time. Meanwhile, barricaded inside the plant, the deputized workmen were engaged in crating a quantity of farm machinery.

From within the plant Sherif Aurand telephoned to Acting Governor Thomas F. Donovan, chief executive in the state in the absence of Gov. Horner who is attending a governors' conference at Biloxi, Miss., and to Adjt. Gen. Carlos Black. He reported to each that he would be unable to prevent further violence and asked for troops. Companies here are the headquarters company of the Second battalion of Rockport, Company K of Rockford, Company M of Sterling, and Company A of Dixon.

Troops Booed on Arrival.

Boos and cries of "tin soldier" greeted the troops as their trucks drove up in front of the Stover plant early tonight. Strikers and spectators made up a crowd of more than 2,000 on the streets near the plant. The guardsmen ignored the crowd's remarks, but Maj. Warren K. Aldrich of Rockford, who is in command of troops, cautioned the strikers and their friends against violence. He ordered pickets to keep moving.

Seven striking employés of the Stover company and two union organizers were arrested as a result of the disturbance during the morning. All were released under bonds of $500 and their cases continued for ten days.

The clash of the morning left six strikers suffering from minor injuries. All the men were slightly burned by the tear gas and one, Charles Reedy, 55 years old, was treated for a flesh wound.

Pickets at the plant said a total of 400 mechanics and molders had walked out six weeks ago after the company refused to recognize a newly organized union and ignored demands that a 20 per cent pay cut given the men during 1933 be restored.

CABINET OF MEXICO RESIGNS; SPLIT OVER ECONOMIC POLICIES

A statement from the presidential palace asserted the ministers had resigned to give President Cardenas a free hand in designating the collaborators he desires to help him carry out his policies.

It was understood a new cabinet would be named Monday unless there are unexpected developments. The political split resulted from a statement by Calles, "strong man of Mexican politics," criticizing economic and political conditions in Mexico, and a reply yesterday from Cardenas.

Acquit Woman Who Slew Ex-Husband's Second Wife

Stanford, Ky., June 14.—(AP)—Eva Cooper Wilson was acquitted tonight of killing her divorced husband's second wife, whom she shot in a movie lobby Feb. 24. She pleaded insanity. Mrs. Eva Wilson killed Mrs. Marie Dutton Wilson, wife of Truesdale Wilson of Somerset. She followed the couple out of a Sunday movie and shot Marie. Wilson married Marie following his divorce from Eva. Before the divorce Eva shot Marie, but prosecution was dropped at the victim's request. The former Mrs. Wilson testified that Marie Wilson broke up her home and that her mind was a blank about the killing.

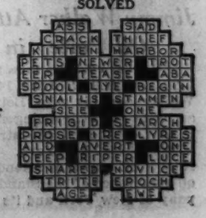
YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED



TRIBUNE COOLING PLANT IS TURNED ON FOR SUMMER

Spring Stays On in Tower as Mercury Rises.

The air cooling system in The Tribune Tower, installed last year at a cost of a half million dollars, was turned on yesterday for the first time this year. As the mercury mounted in one of the first warm spells of the year, employés and tenants in the tower enjoyed temperatures 10 to 15 degrees cooler than the air outside.

While the cooling system was used yesterday for the first time, the conditioning mechanism has been at work throughout the winter and spring months washing and treating the air.

System Is World's Largest.

The cooling system, which won unanimous commendation of Tribune Tower workers when the temperature hovered around 100 last summer, is the largest of its kind in the world. It has a cooling capacity of 600 tons a day, which means that its effect is the same as though 600 tons of ice were melted daily in the building.

During the sweltering drouth weather of last summer the system produced 16,295 tons of refrigeration at a cost of approximately 83 cents a ton. The coal used in cooling, instead of heating the tower and plant, cost $4,100 and the water $9,400.

Controls Building's Climate.

"The conditioning system, which has exceeded the fondest hopes of the management, controls in every respect the climate of the building," Holmes Onderdonk, manager of Tribune Tower, explained yesterday. "It regulates the humidity and cleans the air—so far as is practical—of dust, noxious gases, and of bacteria.

"Air on Chicago street levels on a windy summer day frequently contains more than 50,000 particles of dust to the cubic foot. After it is washed by water sprays in The Tribune's conditioning system it contains less than 5,000 particles to the cubic foot.

Cuts Bacteria to One-tenth.

This automatically cuts down to one-tenth the bacteria in the air—both the disease bearers and the harmless ones—and theoretically gives Tribune Tower folk a tenfold better chance of dodging air borne disease."

Dr. Irving S. Cutter, editor of The Tribune's How to Keep Well column, stressed the health standpoint in discussing the conditioning system.

"The Newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and lead public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."—Chicago Tribune.

IL DUCE GROWS PANICKY.

David Darrah, THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent at Rome, has been summarily expelled from Italy by order of the Fascist government.

Mr. Darrah's dispatches, published in Chicago last Sunday and Monday, described the financial and administrative difficulties now confronting Mussolini. Mr. Darrah showed on Sunday how seriously Italian credit abroad and at home has been undermined by Fascist finance. He told on Monday how unpopular the Ethiopian adventure was proving with large sections of the Italian people.

The financial report was coldly factual. There can be no question of its accuracy. The account of the state of public opinion was written calmly and judiciously. Mr. Darrah intimated that Mussolini's position is becoming increasingly precarious, but he was careful to give the evidence on both sides. There was no attempt to sensationalize. Readers of THE TRIBUNE who have followed his dispatches from Italy for many years will have no doubt that Mr. Darrah has a keen sense of his responsibility as a reporter.

Mussolini, like many a dictator before him, is finding his problems becoming steadily more involved. To hold his following he has had to spend public money in huge amounts, and he has therefore incurred a succession of budget deficits. Despite crushing taxation, the revenues have not begun to catch up with the expenditures. The cost of living in Italy is rising. Naturally popular discontent is growing. Naturally, too, Italy's credit abroad is weakening.

Possibly to quiet popular discontent, Mussolini embarked upon his Ethiopian adventure. Whatever his purpose, he has only deepened the unrest and still further weakened Italian credit abroad. He has done so precisely at the moment when Italy must have foreign credit if she is to fight a successful war in Africa. The only raw materials of war of which Italy possesses an adequate domestic supply are man power and food. She lacks every other essential, including steel, cotton, copper, coal, petroleum, and rubber. These she must buy abroad. To buy them she must borrow abroad because the balance of trade runs against Italy.

Mr. Darrah called attention to the fact that Italian bonds have been dropping steadily in the foreign markets since the first of the year. That was no secret. On the day of Mr. Darrah's expulsion the bonds sold off another point and a half. Italian bonds yielding 7 per cent would be selling at 125 or more in this country if investors thought they stood a good chance of getting their money back. Instead the bonds are selling in the low 80s and the trend is definitly downward.

The expulsion of Mr. Darrah will not bolster the market for Italian securities. On the contrary, it will serve as an added warning to bankers, investors, and foreign traders of the precarious condition of Italian finance. The expulsion of Mr. Darrah will not make it easier for Mussolini to stave off bankruptcy through foreign borrowing or to calm public discontent with a glorious war. He has only made matters worse for himself. He has advertised the fact that he cannot permit the world to know the truth about his financial management. He has served notice that his position in the seat of power is so insecure that he dare not permit the publication four thousand miles away of a dispassionate account of popular feeling in Italy. The financial markets will not be slow to take account of these self-revelations. Tourists may take alarm and spend their money in less troubled lands.

Mussolini may have felt that the American public had no right to the facts regarding Italy. If so, he overlooked the circumstance that much American money has been lent to Italy and the even more important circumstance that Americans have every reason to be interested in the progress of dictatorships, for our government has displayed strong leanings in that direction. It is important that the American public know that the imposition of a dictatorship is the first step toward bankruptcy, war, and domestic disorder. It is instructive to the American people to observe to what lengths a dictator will go in his attempts to destroy the freedom of the press.

THE MASSACRE.

We heartily wish that a copy of "Accident Facts, 1935 Edition," recently issued by the National Safety council, could be placed in the hands of every Chicagoan. Perhaps then all could see the gruesome facts so vividly that public opinion would drive through to immediate consummation the plans for elevated highways. The booklet demonstrates beyond doubt that the only method of stemming the tide of the automobile massacre is through the segregation of fast motor trafic on highways that eliminate grade crossings, the dangerous left hand turn, and which provide for the safety of pedestrians.

Perhaps the most startling fact graphically portrayed is that at the present record one in every twenty Chicagoans is due to be killed or crippled within the next five years. Safety first campaigns are controling accidents in other fields, notably air transportation, but in only one state in the Union, Rhode Island, was there a decrease in the number of automobile fatalities from 1933 to 1934.

Among the male population accidents figure as public enemy No. 2, second only to heart trouble and distancing such dreaded diseases as cancer, pneumonia, and tuberculosis. Indeed, between the ages of 3 and 40, possibly the most useful, the accident figures are public enemy No. 1.

In the compilations by states Illinois is not a leader, but its record of 87.9 deaths compares rather unfavorably with that of Rhode Island with a rate of 53.9 deaths per one hundred thousand population. Chicago's record is slightly less than that of the state at 78.6, but New York is a far safer city with a death rate of 61.3, as well as Detroit with 40 and Pittsburgh with 28.

In the publication of these statistics the National Safety council has accomplished an inestimable public service.

JIM FARLEY, DEFENDER OF THE FAITH.

It was a political boner for Mr. Roosevelt to use Mr. Farley as official statement maker replying to the Republican Grass Roots convention at Springfield. The direct challenge by the convention of Mr. Roosevelt's assumptions of authority and of his personal policies and future purposes may have made the New Dealers feel that a reply was required, but Mr. Farley's name was hardly one to be used for the answer.

It is said that Mr. Farley himself did not write it, but used a ghost writer who serves both old deals and New Deals in the Democratic party. If Mr. Farley didn't write it, then it was gratuitous blundering to select him for window dressing. Mr. Farley has enough trouble to answer some of the members of his own party, including Huey Long, and if he has ghost writers they could be kept busy replying to things reliably said about him.

As window dressing Mr. Farley presents the picture of the Tammany boss in full regalia. He is the eminent Rooseveltian who adds to the regular technique of running the postoffice the personal touch of making embarrassing mistakes with unperforated stamps. In the front window Mr. Farley appears as the distributor of the public funds for vote getting. He is the man who tells the country that Santa Claus goes where the New Deal gets votes. He is the patronage distributor and the political "fix." To put him forward as the defender of the revolution is only to call attention to all the peculiar methods by which the cause is advanced.

It would have been better politics to have shoved Mr. Farley into the background and to have produced some New Dealer who has not been reproached for questionable conduct, if such a New Dealer is available. The Grass Roots convention declared that the Roosevelt revolutionaries seek to establish a different form of government in the United States, that it will be arbitrary, domineering and autocratic, and that it will make the citizenship of the United States do tall hopping. There is only one reply the revolutionaries can make to this. They have already made it. The facts are as stated. That is their story and to go ahead with what they propose to do they must stick to it. The answer from Washington to the declarations in Springfield is and will be: Proved as stated.

ILLINOIS AS A SATRAPY.

In spite of the abnormal conditions which permit the governor and Democratic organization to carry on the policy dictated from Washington, it is no secret that the repugnance to this course of action felt among citizens of both parties throughout the state is shared by Democratic representatives as well as the militant minority of Republicans. Only extreme pressure has obtained the votes the governor has managed to deliver and resistance has been successful on several important occasions.

Gov. Horner, of whom so much was expected, has disappointed a considerable part of his friends and well wishers because of his complacency toward federal dictation, and he makes a poor appearance in the rôle of an oriental satrap. Illinois is still a sovereign state of the Union and its people do not show any enthusiasm for the low opinion of our "union of indissoluble and indestructible states" disclosed by Mr. Roosevelt and his coöperators at Washington and at Springfield.

NO ONE FOOLED.

[Rockford Register-Republic.]

Democrat members of the Illinois legislature are fooling nobody with their sudden enthusiasm for makeshift amendments to the state election laws. The activity of Horner administration forces in behalf of the latest proposals is quite amusing in light of the ruthless manner in which the permanent registration, or honest election, bills were strangled to death in the lower house of the general assembly a few weeks ago.

Illinois citizens will not soon forget that slaughter and do not now consider the new bills as adequate substitutes for the earlier measures which had the support of all organizations interested in good government. The original bills, which their sponsors believed would prevent the casting of an approximate 100,000 dishonest votes in Chicago at each election, were throttled because the Cook county Democratic oligarchy decreed they should be killed because they were inimical to the best interests of spoils politics as played in Chicago.

Passage of the permanent registration bills would have sent Illinois a long step forward in the movement to prevent election frauds. The new bills are mere camouflage offered as a sop to an enraged downstate citizenry which does not like to have its candidate go up to the Cook county line at every election with generous vote leads, then be counted out in defeat after the Chicago politicians have found out how many votes are needed to put the organization controled candidate across.

IT'S FATHER'S DAY tomorrow! I'll bet mother gives father a handsome damask tablecloth for the dining room and Laura will give daddikins a beautiful diamond studded wrist watch, but, as that old jeweler made a mistake and sent a cunning little lady's watch instead of a gent's ticker, Laura will have to wear the wrist watch herself, darn the luck! The twins Bessie and Tessie will give the old man a nice new radio which just fits into a corner of their room and has already been installed there, but papa can listen to it as he walks down the hall. Charlie will give papa a swell silk hat, size 7⅜, while papa wears a 6 size. And it's the funniest thing, Charlie himself wears a 7¾ size hat. Then, too, father gets all the bills for his pretty presents—but the bills come later. Anyhow, it's Father's Day tomorrow. That's what Father gets—the Day! Yessir, he gets the day off. But it's Sunday and he'd have the day off anyhow. Just father's luck; he never gets the breaks.

ARMISTICE OF BEAUTY.

Their garb of pink and snow
I break my fast at early dawn
And through the orchards go.
At last I know that I was wrong
To think that life had lost its song.

As through each vistaed glory-path
I follow Beauty's lead,
I quite forget the Winter's wrath,
The nations' warring greed.
"This day shall I rejoice," I sing,
"Though all the world go glimmering."

THE RADIO ANNOUNCER at the ringside made me believe while the fight was going on that Baer and Braddock were murdering each other in cold blood. I wondered why the New York police, the Anti-Cruelty Society, and the Red Cross didn't rush in to stop the horrible massacre. Why didn't the governor call out the National Guard? Why didn't the regular army stationed in New York harbor open fire with long range siege guns? And then I read the newspapers about the fight and got the idea the fighters were playing tag or Button, Button, Who's Got the Button? Anyhow, I'm not going to waste money going to prize fights in order to be shocked, thrilled, and horrified. I'm going to stay home and listen to the radio.

HUEY LONG did pretty well in talking sixteen hours, considering that the dictionary only contains four hundred thousand words. But the next time Huey starts filibustering he ought to remember that there's more in the unabridged dictionary than just the four hundred thousand words. He should be able to go twenty or even twenty-four hours if he only made use of the other things in the dictionary: "List of Authors Quoted," "History of the English Language," "Guide to Pronunciation," "Orthography," "Abbreviations Used in This Work," "Explanatory Notes," and "Addenda." And that isn't near all. Over in the back of the unabridged Huey ought to find inspiration enough to run him at least three hours and forty-five minutes. There's the "Pronouncing Gazetteer or Geographical Dictionary of the World," "Pronouncing Biographical Dictionary," "Signs Used in Writing or Printing," "Classified Pictorial Illustrations," "Foreign Words and Phrases Occurring in English Literature," and "Common English Christian Names." Then after he finished all that Huey could tear up his dictionary and march around giving a page to each senator with a few appropriate remarks. There being over 2,630 pages this ought to run Huey's speech an hour in itself. Then he could slowly chew up the covers, and if he has the dictionary bound in calfskin, which is hard chewing, this would take up another hour and amuse the galleries very much. Yes, Huey did well, but there's lots more in the dictionary than he got out of it.

They tell me it would be a coward's trick
To jump this planet and the rot it bears;
What sentimental stuff! It makes me sick—
Bum rules like that . . . suppose a fellow cares
Much more for honesty than sentiment.
I'm in a pit, let's say, where vermin crawl,
And then they prove with windy argument
That I ought not to try and leave at all!
O I suppose I'll get it when I'm gone,
Me that thought I was mighty shrewd and sharp
In figuring this thing as being unfair . . .
Somewhere a God is waiting with a harp
To hand to me as soon as I am done
With beating bloody fists against the air!

II.

So you're the guy Success I've always craved
To shake the hand of! Well, sit down, old sport,
And share this little bottle that I've saved!
What say, old timer, will you have a snort?
Aw shucks, I'm not a souse. Don't look at me
As if I were. I've given up so much
To get to know you that this victory
Deserves a little sort of liquid touch.
Well, here's to you! Boy, I've waited long
And spent some hellish years in misery,

SHINGLES AND PITUITARY EXTRACT.

Now that scientists have discovered powerful substances in some of the glands of internal secretion scores of investigators are studying the effects of these extracts upon disease processes. New and important results may be expected from these experiences.

Within the last few years we have gained no small amount of information relative to the effects of the pituitary secretions. This gland may be likened to a power station from which figurative wires carry currents [hormones] which stimulate most of the other endocrine glands and hence govern the activities of the body. For some time an extract of the posterior portion of this structure has been used in controling diabetes insipidus, a disease characterized by a copious excretion of pale urine that contains no sugar. The extract greatly reduces the elimination of water.

The most recent use of pituitary extract [posterior portion] is in the condition known popularly as shingles and technically as herpes zoster. While the disease in question has been recognized for thousands of years, it was not until 1863 that it was identified as an infectious process that affected some parts of the spinal nerves. The cause is probably a filterable virus which has a strong liking for nerve tissue and which travels along nerve fibers. As a rule during the acute phase of the disease patients will show a temperature and a considerable increase in the white cells of the blood. Regardless of the earlier types of treatment employed, the disease has hitherto pursued a uniform course and terminated whenever it chose to do so.

Shingles is characterized by severe pain and, in some instances, skin lesions [watery blisters] appear, chiefly on the front and sides of the chest. There is a marked dilatation of the skin blood vessels in these areas.

Because of the increased amount of blood in the skin, experimental work was conducted by Somers and Pouppirt to see if the use of drugs that constrict capillaries would be followed by relief of pain and healing. The two drugs used were epinephrin, an extract prepared from the adrenal glands, and an extract of the posterior portion of the pituitary gland. It was found that the effect of epinephrin was of too short duration to bring about relief, whereas that of pituitary extract was much more prolonged.

Using this latter substance, these investigators treated 22 cases of herpes zoster, each presenting typical symptoms. They report that no unfavorable effects were noted. They began with very small doses at one or two hour intervals, gradually increasing the amount with subsequent injections. It was noted that there were two types of herpes pain. The first was described as sharp, stabbing, or shooting, and the second as burning, itching, or stinging. As a rule the burning pain disappeared within six hours after the beginning of treatment, and some patients stated that the intensity of the symptoms decreased within thirty minutes. In 20 cases the type of pain was entirely relieved in seven hours after the initial dose, although the stabbing, aching pains were but little influenced by the treatment.

Under this plan of management the skin manifestations also receded rather rapidly. In no single case did a skin blister appear after pituitary extract had been started, and it was found necessary to continue treatment on the average for only three days.

Because of the powerful effects of pituitary extract it is obvious that the drug should not be used except under careful control. In the presence of blood vessel disease or heart muscle damage the treatment should not be employed.

We may conclude from the work of Somers and Pouppirt that in carefully selected cases slowly increasing doses of posterior pituitary extract will not only relieve the burning pain of herpes zoster but greatly shorten the course of the disease.

HICCUPS.

A. J. S. writes: What are hiccups caused by? Are persons more susceptible shortly after meals and in periods of excitement? What method should be used to stop them?

REPLY:

Hiccups are due to irritation of the phrenic nerve. This nerve governs the diaphragm, which is the muscle that separates the chest cavity from the abdomen. The sudden contraction of this muscle, the action of which is to expel air from the lungs, results in the characteristic "hic." The cause may not originate in the phrenic nerve itself, but may be due to a reflex from the diaphragm. In other words, in certain types of abdominal disease such as peritonitis the diaphragm may be irritated and periodical contractions occur. If it continues the condition may be serious.

The ordinary remedy is to hold the breath as long as possible. Some advise drinking nine swallows of water, which has the same effect, the object being to exert pressure on the nerve itself.

The condition is a nervous reflex and excitement and overeating may bring it on.

ASTHMA.

F. J. P. writes: For the past few years I have been bothered by a condition I believe to be asthma. On damp, rainy days I invariably get an attack. I have recently been advised that the trouble is due to a growth of yeast fungus in my lungs. Could this be the cause?

REPLY:

If you have difficulty in breathing on damp days it is quite possible that an asthmatic condition is present. This should be investigated, particularly from the standpoint of food. Keep a food diary and endeavor to eliminate the particular food that seems to make the condition worse. The dampness of the air influences the chest because damp air is lighter than dry air and contains a smaller amount of available oxygen. Yeast in the lungs is probably out of the question.

MASSAGE.

J. S. M. writes: Will massage injure a man 60 years old with double hernia?

REPLY.

Massage of the arms, the legs, and the back will tone up the muscles and stimulate circulation. Massage of the abdomen in a patient with hernia may be performed gently and hence will do no damage.

OLD AGE PENSION.

Chicago, June 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I understand the pension bill for people over 65 years of age has been passed in Illinois. For years I have supported my folks at a great sacrifice to myself. May I apply for a pension for them so it will be possible for them to make their own way? E. P.

There are three reasons why the passage of the Illinois old age pension law should not be regarded as making the money immediately available: [1] The bill has not yet been approved by the governor so as to become law; [2] the bill expressly provides that no grants shall be payable before Jan. 1, 1936; and [3] the bill makes no provision for funds out of which to make the payments.

If and when these hurdles have been passed, relief will be payable at not over $1 per day to persons 65 years of age who have resided in Illinois ten years within the 15 years preceding the application, who are not inmates of public institutions and who do not have over $5,000 of property. The local agency in Cook county is the bureau of public welfare. In counties where there is no such bureau the County judge is to appoint three persons to the old age relief board. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CITIZENSHIP STATUS.

Chicago, June 12.—[Friend of the People.]—1. Please tell me if a woman born and raised in the United States lost her citizenship by marrying an alien before Sept. 22, 1922. She later divorced this man and married an American born citizen. Did she regain her citizenship by this second marriage? 2. Are children by her first marriage American citizens? L. S.

1. An American citizen woman lost her citizenship by marriage to an alien before Sept. 22, 1922. If she was divorced from him before the above mentioned date she regained her American citizenship, if residing in the United States at that time, by continuing to reside therein or, if abroad, by registering as an American citizen within one year with a consul of the United States or by returning to reside in the United States. If the divorce took place on or after the above mentioned date she did not regain her citizenship. Marriage to an American citizen after Sept. 21, 1922, would not change her American citizenship status.

2. All persons born in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States, under the fourteenth amendment to the constitution.

FRED J. SCHLOTFELDT,

RESPONSIBILITY FOR DEBT.

Chicago, June 13.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A distant relative bought a coat on time and after making a few payments failed to finish paying for it. I signed a slip of paper for her (1) supposedly as a character witness, but my husband did not sign. Now the finance company has (2) garnisheed his wages and the firm for whom he works is holding back his check. Since making the purchase party referred to has moved out of the city. 3. Can the finance company hold my husband for the balance due? 4. Don't they have to take him to court first and isn't the other party's husband responsible for her debts now that she is married? 5. Just what steps would you advise us to take to make her pay for the coat? S. F. L.

1. The law presumes that a person who is able to read has read and understood an instrument which he has signed.

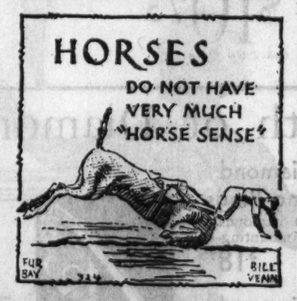
The DEBUNKER
By John Harvey Furbay, Ph.D.



Horses have far less "sense," in general, than dogs, apes, elephants or even mules. Horses behave rather unintelligently in many situations, and certainly are very lacking in what is usually meant by "horse sense." It would be better even to say "mule sense" than horse sense to express so-called animal intelligence.

EXPERIMENTS.

Stanley, Wis., June 10.—Secretary Ickes was recently quoted as favoring the teaching in our schools of socialism, communism, etc., to broaden the minds of our young people and to enable them to choose for themselves. Fine! We all like broad minded people. That having been done to their minds, let us proceed to broaden them physically, for the laws governing our mental and physical beings are identical.

For one hundred fifty-two years we have been content to believe that milk is the ideal food for the infant. Maybe we are wrong. Suppose we try beer or, better yet, put in some whisky and add a quantity of iodine to give it a bright red color so popular with so many people today. For a green food, for 152 years we have favored spinach, as it contains mineral matter and vitamins. Possibly there is something better. We will go down to the marsh and get a pailful of cowslips. On the way back we might pluck and put in a few horse-nettles from the fence corner. The child can take its choice. For cereal, for 152 years we have favored the fine grains. Now let us substitute cottonseed meal. We know it is bad for little pigs, but the baby might thrive on it.

For 152 years we have enthused over fresh air, free from disease germs; air conditioned rooms, fresh breezes from the country and our parks. Let us go to the slums and bring out some garbage laden and reeking with germs of typhoid, scarlet fever, diphtheria, and cholera. These will strengthen the child's resistant powers.

For 152 years our constitution has nurtured sturdy Americans as strong and broad minded as any men and women in the world. Let us stick to it and not experiment. Let us teach it in our schools to the exclusion of every conflicting influence. Let us revere the Stars and Stripes and be Americans.

CRITICISM.

Chicago, June 6.—In all your severe criticism of what the administration at Washington is doing you overlook one vital issue. And that is: Can the 12,000,000 unemployed continue to be overlooked by business and industry? Behind all of President Roosevelt's plans and purposes is the one big idea of getting people back to work, those who can work and want to work.

If the time, energy, and effort you use in criticizing President Roosevelt were spent in trying to get jobs for those of us who are unemployed and want work the so-called depression would be over in a week. JOB WANTED.

ELSTON AVENUE'S DELIGHTS.

Chicago, June 9.—No one in his right mind would use the Elston avenue line for speed, but I use it often when time hangs heavy over me to inhale the many varieties of odors. Varnish fades into brewing processes, then that blends into lether tanning, which again gives way to pickles and vinegar. Don't forget our gas works and the Chicago river close by.

CRITICISM.

Chicago, June 10.—I have been a reader of your paper for the last thirty years. Outside of the fact that you do not seem to be able to represent anything but old standpat principles in the running of our government, I believe you have the greatest paper in the world. I could not get along without your sports page, your markets, the funnies, etc.

Your editorial writers and cartoonists should be deported as should any other Red. Really, I cannot understand why a great paper like THE TRIBUNE could possibly join hands with all the dead politicians to try to wreck this good country of ours. You can no more run this government under present conditions with the old out of date constitution than you could run THE TRIBUNE farm with the tools used in revolutionary days.

HONEST ELECTIONS.

Chicago, June 6.—In the matter of securing the passage of a permanent registration bill by the legislature it has been freely stated that the downstate legislators were against it as it made an unnecessary burden on their communities. The argument that they should be vitally interested in fair elections in Chicago never seems to have been made. When it comes to state elections and to the election of congressmen and the members of the state legislature the residents downstate are just as much affected by a fraudulent election as are residents of the city of Chicago.

FRED L. STEERS.

THE PROBLEM BOY OF BASEBALL.

Chicago, June 6.—It looks as though Dizzy Dean had opened the door for his own exit from baseball in the not distant future. What team would want an egotistical trouble maker on their team whose head was light and getting lighter from one year of meteoric success? Frisch seems to have the matter well in hand, but I would make one suggestion. Instead of a fine, I think if he turned him over and spanked him it would do a lot more good. That is the old and better way to handle little boys who get too big for their breeches. W. C. H.

ANOTHER DIVORCE.

Martinsville, Ind., June 9.—It is very evident the Roosevelt family is strong for divorces. Now our President wants to divorce the constitution, on the grounds of incompatibility, I suppose, or it might be mental cruelty. The fortunate thing about this divorce is, "We the people of the United States" will be the judge. And will we judge!

ILLINOIS HOUSE TRIMS 40 BILLS FROM CALENDAR

Rush for Adjournment Starts.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 14.—[Special.]—In more or less helter-skelter fashion the house today began to clear the calendar for sine die adjournment July 1. About forty house bills on the order of first reading were stricken off and fifty others advanced to a position where they can either be passed or killed next Monday night when the week-end recess will end.

This wild scramble was prompted, in part, by printing limitations. The calendar today was 37 inches long—"you could wrap it around you like a sash," one member said—and it happens that the firm which prints the daily schedule has paper stock only 38 inches long. So being right at the saturation point some action was necessary.

Devine Calls for Ax.

The purge killed bills which had least chance of passage. They would have had to go through three readings in the house and three more in the senate and there are only two weeks left of the session. Some pretty skilful legislative juggling would have been necessary to get them all through.

From the chair Speaker Devine admonished committee chairmen "not to hesitate to use the ax" on bills still under consideration in committee.

"There are more bills in the enrolling and engrossing department already than can be prepared before July 1," the speaker said. Today's action will not, however, affect the chances of senate bills now in the house. Most, if not all, will be voted "up or down" before the session ends.

Delinquent Tax Bill Passes.

Among the measures passed today and sent to the senate was the Saltiel bill, which provides for payment of delinquent taxes for 1932 and prior years in seven annual instalments beginning Aug. 1, 1935, at 6 per cent interest. Penalties and interest could be waived by agreement between the taxpayer and county collectors. Current taxes would have to be paid during the seven year period.

During the session William W. Powers [Dem., Chicago] struck from the calendar his bill to provide that no alcoholic liquor labeled as whisky could be sold at retail unless 75 per cent of the volume had been aged in oak for not less than four years. Powers declared that he withdrew the bill upon the request of Representative Howard P. Gorman [Dem., Peoria.]

Refuse to Invite Long.

Speaker Devine had a little fun with the Republicans today on a resolution by Harry N. McCaskrin [Rep., Rock Island] to invite Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana to address the legislature on his so-called "share-the-wealth" propaganda. McCaskrin demanded that the executive committee be discharged from further consideration of the resolution and that it be passed by the house. Republicans did not want a roll call, but Devine directed it be called and only seven members—two Democrats and five Republicans—stood with McCaskrin.

Fifty-four Democrats voted against inviting Long.

"You Democrats needed Huey badly enough at your 1932 convention," said Richard J. Lyons [Rep., Libertyville]. "What's the matter with him now? If it hadn't been for Huey and Dealers McAdoo and Garner, you wouldn't have nominated Roosevelt. I'm for having him here; he's your man."

On the basis of votes cast, a total membership of only sixty-one was indicated. However, the speaker saw many Republicans refusing to vote so he primed Majority Leader Benjamin S. Adamowski of Chicago to raise the question of a quorum. The roll for attendance was called and members forced to answer. It was found that 95 were present.

STATE SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS DENTISTRY LAW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 14.—[Special.]—The Illinois Supreme court today upheld the constitutionality of the 1934 dental practice act, ruling that dentistry is a profesion and that the prohibition in the act is not discriminatory.

An opinion prepared by Justice Paul Farthing of Belleville, which covered two cases involving validity of the law, was filed by the court today.

One question involved was whether the law was in restriction of trade, in that it forbids the practice of dental surgery under the name of a corporation, company, or association.

"The legislature was not dealing with traders in commodities," said the opinion, "but with the vital interest of public health, and with a profession treating bodily ills and demanding different standards of conduct from those which are traditional in competition with the market place."

The court said there is no doubt concerning the authority of the state to ban questionable practices where public health is involved, since the dental law is not discriminatory but applies to all practitioners.

Conflicting rulings had been given in two lower court cases consolidated in the appeal.

The act was upheld by the Cook County Superior court, which dismissed a suit by Fred Winberry and other dentists, but an injunction was granted by the East St. Louis city court to Russell A. Trovillion, doing business as the new system dentists.

Ben Warner, 32 years old, 408 South Hamlin avenue, an automobile accessories salesman, was sentenced yesterday by Federal Judge William H. Holly to six months in the county jail after he had pleaded guilty to charges of possessing and passing bonds stolen from the mails. Assistant United States Attorney Edward A. Fisher told the court that Warner passed $5,000 worth of Kingdom of Italy bonds which were part of a shipment valued at $131,100 stolen from the steamer Leviathan at Cherbourg, France, in February, 1933.

MONEY FOR AGE PENSION CAUSES HORNER DOUBT

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 14.—[Special.]—By its eagerness to follow suggestions—and sometimes orders—from Washington, the Illinois legislature finds itself in a hole on old age pension legislation. The Prignano-Collins-Lenane bill for a dollar a day pension to the indigent has passed both houses, but there is no money to pay it and letters from prospective recipients are pouring into the statehouse asking how soon they will receive the dole.

The intention now appears to be to make Gov. Horner hold the bag. No revenue section was included in the bill and the governor remarked when it passed the house that he was glad the principle of old age pension had been approved and said that the house should start immediately to find the money to pay for it.

5 Million Held Insufficient.

A. J. Prignano [Dem., Chicago] introduced a bill yesterday to divert 5 million dollars for the pensions from the general revenue fund, anticipating that sales tax collections would be so excessive that that sum could be set aside. In answer administration spokesmen declare that appropriations approved to date by the legislature are 5 millions more than those passed last session and, furthermore, that 5 millions would be only half enough for the pensions.

But if both houses act on the present Prignano bill with the same alacrity which attended consideration of the key pension bill, it will be passed and the governor will have to sign it or be put in the position of refusing to stand by the principle which he advocated in his biennial message to the assembly when it convened last January.

The administration insists that it has cut appropriations to the bone and cannot operate on less money than it has anticipated it will get from the assembly.

Study Residence Requirement.

A great deal of curiosity has been manifested by the members, as they reread the bill they passed, on why it provides that recipients of the pensions, who must have attained the age of 65 years, must also have resided in the state "for at least 10 years within the 15 years immediately preceding their application for old age assistance."

The question being asked is whether this "ten of fifteen" provision was included to provide for a particular individual or individuals. Sponsors of the bill—Prignano, Dennis J. Collins [Rep., DeKalb], and F. J. Lenane [Dem., Quincy]—deny that it was.

Provision Called Too Low.

Soderstrom explained that the federal suggestion contained in the security bill was that states pass laws giving pensions to all indigents residing in the state "five out of the last ten years." Soderstrom was for this and proposed its adoption before the subcommittee which had charge of the Prignano-Collins-Lenane bill.

But the committee, as the sponsors explain it, felt that this provision was too low and that longer residence in the state should be stipulated. "Ten of fifteen" instead of flat 10 or 15 year requirement was adopted to care for persons who have temporarily resided outside the state but are now residents, the sponsors said. In addition the ratio was in proportion to the one suggested by the New Dealers at Washington.

BLAME CHAMPION ESTATE CLAIMANT FOR HIS DEATH

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—Charles L. Brazelle, former boxer, who is fighting for a share of the $6,000,000 estate of Mrs. Edna J. Champion, widow of the spark plug manufacturer, was described today at a hearing before Surrogate James A. Foley as having been responsible for the death of Albert C. Champion, following a brawl in a Paris saloon in 1927.

Joseph Katz, attorney for executors under Mrs. Champion's will, charged that Champion died within an hour after Brazelle had punched him over the heart during a clash which resulted from Champion's objection to the attentions Brazelle was paying his wife.

Under the will, admitted to probate on April 1, Brazelle was eliminated as a beneficiary. A previous will bequeathed to Brazelle a life estate in one-eighth of the residuary estate and named him an executor.

Herbert C. Smyth, attorney for Brazelle, described Brazelle as "a man of affluence" who lent Mrs. Champion $200,000 with which to pay the inheritance tax on her husband's estate. An income tax return showed he paid a tax of $1.58 on an income of $1,900 in 1927, the year the alleged loan was made.

FAR OFF BEATEN TRAIL IS FOREST WORTH HUNTING

320 Acres Await Visitors in Will County.

BY HAL FOUST.

Off the beaten trails of week-end motoring is half a square mile of forest preserve in the northeast corner of Will county. It is only thirty-three miles from the loop, but because it is accessible by dirt roads only, this public playground has seen little of the public.

It was as a rectangle of green on THE TRIBUNE'S Chicagoland road map that this forest preserve was selected as the destination for a week-end tour story. Even with the aid of the map, it was difficult to find and, after it was found, it was not easy to recognize as public property.

But for motorists who enjoy leaving the beaten trails, there was ample compensation for these difficulties. THE TRIBUNE roadster was alone in 320 acres of woods and meadows yesterday and there were indications that few if any cars had previously entered the natural park since last year.

How to Reach Preserve.

The preserve is surrounded by a fence with iron posts painted gray with red tops. There are two gates, each bearing a sign reading, "Keep Closed." Without the aid of a map, no one would suspect that visitors are welcome, that it's the taxpayers' property.

The information from the map was verified by two small signs posted on trees within the preserve. In large letters, they read "No Hunting," and under this caption in smaller letters were the words, "By order of the board of forest preserve commissioners of Will county."

The least difficult route to the preserve from Chicago leaves the pavement of Wolf road at 167th street. Travel west on the gravel of 167th street for three and a half miles. At a fork in the road, where the telegraph poles carry high tension wires, recognized by their heavy insulators, bear to the right with this power line. Where the power line leaves the gravel for a dirt road, follow the dirt road for half a mile and you'll be at the gate to the preserve.

Best Route from Loop.

Wolf road and 167th street may be reached from the loop by driving in Michigan avenue to Garfield boulevard, west to Western avenue, south to the Southwest highway, thence following the Ill. 7 markers in Southwest highway to 143d street, west to Wolf road and south to 159th street. South from 159th street Wolf road is marked U. S. 6. North siders can take U. S. 45 [Mannheim road and 96th avenue] south to pick up the Southwest highway at Orland Park.

Inside the forest preserve gate marked "Keep Closed," THE TRIBUNE roadster proceeded on a trail grown with grass some times as high as the headlights. A stiff breeze waved branches of tall oaks with a rustle of leaves like the wash of surf.

The woods were alive with sounds. Crickets chirped, birds sang. From the muddy bed of a creek came the croak of a bull frog.

All was not green in the woods and meadows. There were white bouquets 12 feet in diameter, blooming haws. Wild flowers were abloom, some tall and in an abundance that marked the landscape, and others tiny, nestled among ferns.

STORE FINED $100 ON SHORT WEIGHT CHARGE

Municipal Judge Erwin J. Hasten yesterday fined Goldblatt Brothers, Inc., department store chain, a total of $100 and costs on charges that the company had violated two city ordinances—that against giving short weight and that against the possession of a faulty scale. The fine was $50 for each offense.

Two inspectors from the office of City Sealer James O'Keefe testified. They are Charles Cameron and Mrs. Sadie Abrahams. Both declared that on April 11 they purchased a ham in the Goldblatt store at 1615 West Chicago avenue and found it three ounces short in weight. They added that on inspecting the scale they discovered three ounces of sausage meat glued to the under side of the scale pan. Cameron said he found four ounces of sausage glued to the under side of another scale pan in the store.

Attorney Henry Burman, representing the store chain, declared the owners knew nothing of the short weight. He requested that the judgment be vacated and a hearing on his motion was set for next Tuesday.

"Every store owner," said Judge Hasten, "should make herculean efforts to see that customers are given full weight and full measure."

MEN'S GARDEN CLUB SHOW TO BE OPEN TODAY

The flower show of the Chicago Men's Garden club will open in the Garfield park conservatory at 9 o'clock this morning, Leo W. Nack, secretary, announced yesterday. The show is free to the public and will be open from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. today and tomorrow.

Club members and nonmembers are competing for prizes. A variety of spring flowers will be included in the competition.

N. R. Napier, a noncommercial grower of Blue Island, is exhibiting a collection of his own blossoms. Mr. Napier, a member of the men's club, has one of the finest collection of peonies and irises to be found in private gardens of the central west, according to Mr. Nack. Gardeners report that flowers are in exceptionally fine conditions for the show.

BRITAIN TO BUILD AIR RAID DEFENSE 'READY FOR WAR'

London Area Provided For in First Step.

LONDON, June 14.—(AP)—The war office in a surprise announcement tonight stated that eight battalions will be created immediately to form an anti-aircraft defense force "ready for war." The announcement of Britain's preparation for wartime defense came out of the clear sky.

It said that five units will be transformed into searchlight battalions and the other three, including the famed royal fusiliers, will become anti-aircraft brigades of royal artillery. It is understood air raid "sounding stations" with delicate mechanical ears will be revived.

The war office stressed the necessity that the new force be "ready for action immediately on the outbreak of war or even earlier."

Operate on Wartime Basis.

The new units, it was understood, will operate on a wartime basis, prepared to go into action at the slightest sign of danger and serving as the crown complement to Britain's air forces which are now in the process of great expansion.

Only the London area is provided for in this new step by the army council, but it was expected that similar units shortly would be organized for the great midland manufacturing cities such as Birmingham, Manchester and Leeds.

The new program will be financed by a sum equal to $2,250,000 set aside by the house of commons March 18 for anti-craft defense.

British O. K. Hitler's Demands.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 14.—Joachim von Ribbentrop, personal adviser of Adolf Hitler on disarmament, and other members of the German naval delegation, who returned to London last night, today conferred with Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, and R. L. Craigie, foreign office naval expert. Later the Germans talked informally with members of the British admiralty.

It is understood the Germans have brought back from Munich, where they conferred with Hitler, an outline of German naval plans which will now be discussed in detail. It also is understood the British have made up their minds to make naval friends of Germany by agreeing to recognize her demand for 35 per cent of British tonnage. The British, it was stated, will support the Germans' demand at the world naval parley due to be held this year.

This has aroused a storm of protest in France and to a lesser degree in Italy. Nevertheless, Britain apparently has decided to take independent action this time and not wait for orders from the French foreign office.

Von Ribbentrop has obtained Hitler's confirmation for acceptance in principle of conditions laid down by Britain in admitting Germany's naval claims. The reichsfuehrer is anxious to conclude the Anglo-German "gentleman's agreement" in the belief that the diplomatic advantages accruing thereto will greatly outweigh the disadvantages of a permanent 65 per cent naval inferiority to Britain.

The public and Catholic parochial schools of Chicago closed for summer vacation yesterday. Approximately 600,000 pupils were released from the public schools. They will return Sept. 16.

William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, said he expects more than 7,000 pupils to attend the public school elementary and high school summer schools from June 17 to Aug. 9. Charges of from eight to ten dollars per course are made at the summer schools, the fees being divided among the teachers and maintenance employés.

Elementary summer schools will be maintained at Kozminski, Lawson, Libby, McPherson, Nobel, Van Vlissingen, and von Humboldt schools. Chicago Normal college and Austin, Schurz, Senn, Tilden, Crane, Englewood, Flower, Hyde Park, Lake View, Lane, Lindblom, and Phillips High schools will be open during the summer. Approximately 300 teachers will be employed in the summer schools.

CHURCH GRANTS OPEN TRIAL TO COLLEGE HEAD

The Rev. Dr. J. Oliver Buswell, president of Wheaton college, who went on trial at a secret session of a Presbyterian church court in Chicago yesterday, succeeded in winning a public hearing on the complaint against him, it was learned last night. He is charged with "conspiring to injure and hinder" the Presbyterian church in the United States of America [northern].

Yesterday's hearing was held behind closed doors in the office of the presbytery of Chicago at 77 West Washington street. The public hearing, it was stated, will be held on July 8 in the Fourth Presbyterian church.

The complaint against Dr. Buswell is practically identical with that on which Prof. J. Gresham Machen of Westminster Theological seminary, Philadelphia, was convicted in a New Jersey presbytery recently. Dr. Machen was accused of refusing to heed a mandate of the 1934 general assembly of the church to withdraw from an independent Presbyterian board of foreign missions which he had founded. Dr. Buswell is also a member of the banned missions board.

Dean Carl W. Ackerman Is Guest at Luncheon

Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the school of journalism in Columbia university, who is among those to receive honorary degrees today at Northwestern's announcement, was entertained yesterday at a luncheon given at the Chicago club by George B. Dryden. Among the other guests were Bishop George Craig Stewart, Gen. Charles G. Dawes, President Walter Dill Scott, Charles B. Goodspeed, E. J. Buffington, Ernest Palmer, Arch W. Shaw and about fifty others.

HONORED TODAY

NORTHWESTERN U. TO CONFER 1,540 DEGREES TODAY

Pick Student Editors at U. of Chicago.

Graduating students and alumni of Northwestern university will have virtual possession of Evanston today in the class day festivities and other ceremonies attendant on the university's seventy-seventh annual commencement exercises.

The climax of the day is to come at 5:30 p. m. in Dyche stadium when degrees and diplomas will be conferred upon 1,540 members of the graduating class.

Dr. Lotus D. Coffman, president of the University of Minnesota, will deliver the commencement address on "Personal Freedom and Social Security."

Honorary Degrees to Six.

Honorary degrees will be granted to six men. The degree of doctor of laws will be conferred upon: Gov. Henry Horner, President Coffman, Carl William Ackerman, director of the Pulitzer school of journalism of Columbia university, and Dumas Malone, editor of the Dictionary of American Biography. The degree of doctor of science goes to Charles Franklin Kettering, vice president of General Motors corporation, and to Henry Stanley Plummer, medical director of Mayo clinic and president of Mayo Foundation.

Baccalaureate services for the graduating class were held last night in the First Methodist Episcopal church, the speaker being the Rev. Logan Hall of the Covenant Methodist Episcopal church of Evanston.

Medal to Mark Cresap.

After these services, Illumination night was held on the campus meadow, which was bedecked with myriad Japanese lanterns. There the alumni medal, awarded in recognition of distinguished service to the university, was given Mark W. Cresap, class of 1898, for 17 years a trustee of the university.

In the citation accompanying the medal, notice was taken of Mr. Cresap's work in the founding of the school of commerce in 1908, the Greater Northwestern campaign of 1923, and the establishment in 1926 of the foundation fund.

Also at the Illumination night ceremonies twenty-six graduating athletes were presented with the traditional "N" blankets.

Choose Midway Editors.

SATURDAY NEWS OF NEW BOOKS

First Offerings of 3 Novelists Reviewed Today

Writers Get Extravagant Praise Abroad.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"The Wolf at the Door," by Robert Francis [Houghton-Mifflin]. Published on Tuesday.

"Landtakers," by Brian Penton [Farrar & Rinehart]. Published on Thursday.

THREE novels, preceded by blasts of critical praise, come this week from France, England, and Australia. Two of them are translations. All of them are first novels.

"The Wolf at the Door" is by a young Frenchman who chooses to call himself Robert Francis and who, after the overwhelming critical success of his first novel, probably will never use his own less distinguished name again.

"Cat Across the Path" is by a young German woman living in London, whose real name, Ruth Feiner, adorns her work . . . a distinguished name in the German theater where her father is an actor, a producer, a playwright, and was manager of the great Berlin amusement establishment, Haus Vaterland.

Unless a translation is a masterpiece—like those of the Pauls from the German, for instance, or those of Constance Garnett from the Russian, the subtleties of style are liable to be lost in the ferrying of the book from one language to another. Both of these translations, it seems to me, suffer a sea change. But instead of becoming something rich and strange they have lost the distinction of style which they had in the original. Robert Francis' work could not possibly have won the distinguished praise, nor the coveted Femina prize which was awarded it in 1934, if it were not unusual in style, for the French are, as a rule, less concerned with content than with the manner of presentation of a literary work of art.

In translation "The Wolf at the Door" has no distinction of style. It is involved, full of transliterations, and repels rather than allures by its style. It is for its material alone, then, that English readers will con M. Francis' first opus.

The material is of the kind that the French adore, a combination of bitter reality and charming phantasy. The story is told by Catie Pamploix to her daughter and is at the same time bitterly and tenderly reminiscential of her own childhood when her father came home from the Franco-Prussian war with one leg gone, his natural kindliness soured by economic tragedy and too much to drink.

The lowest depths of privation are traveled in its pages, horrors which pile upon themselves so unremittingly at times that the reader wonders how much of them is phantasy to match the obvious phantasy which the two little girls create for themselves, delightfully manifest in the doll maker. The French love literature that is not sharply defined, that is half mystic, half fancy, but, when it touches reality, terribly realistic. All of those qualities are overflowing in the pages of "The Wolf at the Door." One can well imagine that, clothed in the exquisite language which all of the French critics claim for Robert Francis' gifted pen, "The Wolf at the Door" was the find of the year. Translated, the exquisiteness, the exactness, the vividness fades.

Francoise de Lisle has made the translation which Havelock Ellis declares in his introduction to be the work of an "observant translator . . . prepared for her task . . . by a childhood spent near the district where the scene of this story is laid." Mr. Ellis' introduction is, incidentally, a very sketchy but keen criticism of French literature.

NOTHING GERMAN HERE

"Cat Across the Path" has nothing especially German about it in theme, spirit, or treatment. It is just on the borderline of melodrama, with situations in which that usually so very creaky mechanism, the long arm of coincidence, rearranges the lives of every one concerned. Miss Feiner manages somehow to oil the mechanism so skilfully that the reader is amused rather than repelled by its movements.

The book gets its title from what happened the day Alexander Himmelmann was wheeled home from the hospital at the age of one week. A black cat walked in front of the pram. All his life long Alex was the victim of misfortune. His friend Felix (whose very name means happy and fortunate) was destined for joy. How they met, both became musicians, one the leader of the most famous jazz dance orchestra in the world, the other a sadly struggling composer and piano player; how one woman played her part in both their lives is a tale that delighted London before it came to us.

The English Book guild chose "Cat Across the Path," and the Book society recommended it, and it received enthusiastic acclaim from the British press. But in my simple opinion it's just another excellent dime novel in a not too good translation by Norman Alexander.

TWO FROM YOUNG FOREIGNERS

Two young foreigners offer us novels in translation this week, Robert Francis, a Frenchman, "The Wolf at the Door," the first volume of what his admirers hope will be a modern Balzacian chronicle of northern France, and Ruth Feiner, a young German woman living in London, "Cat Across the Path." Mr. Francis' novel won the Prix Femina. Miss Feiner's was a spring choice of the English Book guild.

Mystery of the Week

BY MORTIMER QUICK.

Being on the lily-livered side, I am not always enthusiastic about the hard boiled school of mystery fiction, but two pretty good ones are out this week which deal starkly with murder in its dourer aspects. "Murder of a Dead Man" [Bobbs Merrill], by Kurt Steel is all about a crafty private detective who resentfully sets out for Long Island to help a lady find a dog, and before he knows it has every kind of criminal investigation on his hands.

A more involved plot it would be hard to evolve but Hyer, the detective, is never down hearted even when he and his journalist friend are mistaken for gangsters and kidnapers. They just wise-crack along being very funny and incredibly smart, and before you know it everything is clear as flawed crystal.

Probably we shall have a number of Hyer stories because this one is good enough to attract a considerable following. You'll like the way young Mr. Steel deals with his assorted bad lots and the nice, easy way he writes about them.

"This Is Murder" [Morrow], by Charles J. Kenny, is quite a bit tougher. An advertising man who craves adventure and a D. A. with a social conscience are its leading characters and a meaner lot of people than all others exploited it would be hard to find.

In the manner of Perry Mason, Sam Moraine has a pretty, smart and faithful secretary who at a word from him hurls herself on the horns of the most savage dilemma, and between them they get into a peck of trouble.

But they get out, and the story of their extrication is also a little reminiscent of Mason wiles. Poker and politics form the background of the story and nobody seems to eat or sleep for the duration.

PIONEERS IN AUSTRALIA

From Australia there comes a first novel, "Landtakers," by Brian Penton, which has also won ecstatic praise from the critics. . . . It is a long, impressive, panoramic record of pioneer days in Australia. There is enough of our own remembered pioneer tradition in it to make it understandable and thrilling to American readers, and at the same time enough of the bizarre, the locally vivid to give it the allurement of the unknown. It is a serious book and at times a powerful one.

All three of these first novels point to futures for their authors, either as artists, entertainers, or chroniclers, or as all three at once.

Frank Buck Writes Inside Story of His Thrilling Jungle Film

Frank Buck, former Chicagoan, author of two stirring volumes on wild animal capture, successfully takes his reader behind the scenes of his picturesque but dangerous calling in "Fang and Claw" [Simon & Schuster]. The author of "Bring 'Em Back Alive" and "Wild Cargo" tells how he made his pictures based on those two books. He devotes more space to people than animals and tells more of his daily jungle work routine than in his former works.

Among the thirteen chapters are several unusually colorful and well written short stories, apparently based on fact. "Binji" is a delightful dog yarn; "Gila," a tragic tale of intrigue and passion, reminiscent of Maugham; "Drums," a sinister, shivery story skilfully woven about a native belief in "were-tigers."

It's a well rounded collection of stories of the far east, and Ferrin Fraser, frankly acknowledged "ghost," has done a splendid job in putting the boisterous Buck's contacts with jungle animals and people into type.

Al Smith Explains Government for the Average Citizen

"The Citizen and His Government," by Alfred E. Smith [Harpers], is really for those much talked of people, the man in the street and the woman in the home—for the average American who would like to be a good citizen, but who is simply bemazed by the workings of his government.

Al Smith knows how government governs; he's a practical man, a simple man, a party man; he can and does, explain government in words of as nearly one syllable as can be used in writing to past primer readers.

There is little excuse, after reading "The Citizen and His Government" for any one to act dumb when the subject of politics comes up. Mr. Smith caustically ends his book with a chapter called "Our Antiquated Machine of Government" and points out a lot of rusty spots!

Ford Madox Ford Takes Reader Into 14th Century

"Ladies Whose Bright Eyes," by Ford Madox Ford [Lippincott], starts its action with a violent one—a train wreck in which a Mr. Sorrell [no relation to the Sorrell who had a son] gets bumped into a dream of the past and fair women. The fourteenth century . . . "behind a curtain" . . . a sort of Alice Through the Looking Glass, except that what Mr. S. finds is not so much fancy as historic facts. "L'Envoi" explains all.

Abbe Dimnet Is Adding to His Biography

Author Enjoys Unique Place in Literary World.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Abbe Dimnet must be one of the few writers who have equal fame in three countries, the United States, France, and England; but he is truly a citizen of the world. That is why, although the book has already been published in America, his autobiography, "My Old World" [Cape], will enjoy here an immediate welcome as it has done in America. It is as charming a memory of the past as any recent year has seen.

The abbe admits that he has largely deserted London of late years; but at one time, and particularly during the war and immediatly after the war, he was as often in London as he was in Paris. He has a strong feeling of affection for it and for the English; but he has such numbers of friends in America that the sequel to "My Old World," which is in preparation, will be a contribution to cosmopolitan friendship as well as a charming and lucidly written reminiscence of personal experience.

Moreover the abbe has known intimately a number of English speaking personages, living and dead, who will certainly figure largely in his later pages.

A first novel which has a springlike quality of original sentiment is "Country Holiday," by Frances Woodhouse [Allen & Unwin]. The author has a neat touch and considerable feeling; and she has sympathy which never dribbles into falseness for young men and women who do not quite succeed in getting what they want from life. She is not at all "modern"; her characters are plain human beings.

But she has humor, conciseness, and sincerity; and in a beginning novelist these qualities promise much for the future. The book will quietly attract attention here.

Meanwhile the passion for books about the king's silver jubilee persists in the British public. Two of the most popular works of the moment are John Buchan's "The King's Grace" [Hodder & Stoughton], which was helped by the fact that it was a Daily Mail book of the month, and Sir Philip Gibbs' "Book of the King's Jubilee" [Hutchinson].

But still very much in demand is H. V. Morton's "In the Steps of the Master" [Rich & Cowan]. I do not know whether Mr. Morton's book will end by being the most popular book of the century; but it looks as if it might reach extraordinary figures.

Presently we are to have Hilaire Belloc's book about Palestine; and this, in view of Mr. Belloc's genius for topographical writing, coupled with his detestation of the Jews, should be a most exciting work. That it will achieve a Mortonian success seems more doubtful; but it might do even that.

IMPORTANT BOOKS OUT THIS WEEK

We Owed It to the Children, by Grace L. Roosevelt [Coward-McCann], tells the adventures of Archie Roosevelt, son of Theodore Roosevelt, and his family on a motor trip starting in Greece and ending in Paris.

Forever Wandering, by Ethel Mannin [Dutton], is a mosaic of impressions of many places, including Hamburg, Moscow, Vienna, Paris, Irish Galway, Nazi Germany, and London.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

NONFICTION.

Creating the Modern American Novel, by Harlan Hatcher [Farrar & Rinehart], describes the conditions and the atmosphere under which the American novel was created, the people who created it, and its ultimate acceptance by the public.

Black Reconstruction, by W. E. Burghardt DuBois [Harcourt-Brace], is a history of the part which colored folk played in the attempt to reconstruct democracy in America, 1860-1880.

Full Chronicle of Exploration Given Praise

According to Leonard Outhwaite, author of "Unrolling the Map" [John Day-Reynal & Hitchcock] this is the first complete book about exploration to be written and printed in America. He certainly has painted a comprehensive and related picture of how the world grew. This has been done, he states, as far as possible by telling the individual story of each explorer. These include all the great adventurers by land and sea from Hannu, 2750 B. C. to Piccard, 1935.

"In this story I have tried to include a picture not only how the explorers went physically from place to place, but also a vision of what ideas, what dreams, what definite plans, what scientific aims moved them," the author says.

An outstanding feature of this engrossing book of world exploration is the fifty-six specially drawn maps which define the areas known at various times in history and show the ground covered by each important explorer. The book gets its title from this literal unrolling of the world map before the reader.

Radio Operator Pens Thrilling Story of Modern Sea Tragedies

With sea tragedies unusually frequent in the last few years, "SOS to the Rescue," by Karl Baarslag [Oxford University Press], is a timely addition to blue water literature. It's also a thrilling and authentic picture of major ocean misfortunes since the advent of radio from the viewpoint of the wireless operators.

That means, of course, for the first time valuable data and brand new thrills surrounding such famous salt water catastrophes as the sinking of the Titanic, the collision between the Republic and the Florida, the fast foundering of the Empress of Ireland, the Vestris disaster, the heroic rescue of the Antinoe crew by the President Roosevelt, and the burning of the Morro Castle off the New Jersey coast.

The author, an experienced seagoing wireless operator, expected it would take a few months to complete his work; instead, he spent more than five years in the United States, Canada, and England examining records and interviewing radio operators and others.

Eleanor Egan Is Engaged

MISS ELEANOR EGAN

Miss Katrina McCormick to Be Bride Today

Ceremony to Take Place in Washington.

BY JUDITH CASS.

WEDDING bells, ringing in various houses of worship today, are of interest to Chicagoans, whether they are near enough to hear or so far away that they must imagine they hear the chimes. That bells ring at all weddings is a poetic figure of speech, as a matter of fact, for one hears chimes at few weddings nowadays.

And there cannot be any at a marriage of national interest in Washington, D. C., today, for the carillon has not been installed in the National cathedral, where Miss Katrina McCormick and Courtlandt Dixon Barnes Jr. are being married this afternoon. This ceremony gives promise of rivaling in brilliance the marriage that thirty-two years ago on the 10th of this month united the parents of today's bride, Ruth Hanna and Medill McCormick. Mr. McCormick died ten years ago and Ruth Hanna McCormick now is Mrs. Albert Gallatin Simms of New Mexico and Washington.

There was wide interest in the wedding of thirty-two years ago which joined in marriage the second daughter of Senator Marcus A. Hanna of Cleveland and the elder son of the late Robert S. and Katherine Medill McCormick of Chicago. President Theodore Roosevelt journeyed from Washington to Cleveland to the wedding, and with him he took his daughter, Alice, now Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. She is Katrina's godmother and her 10 year old daughter, Paulina, will be the flower girl in today's wedding.

Bishop Freeman Will Officiate.

Today's service will be read at half after 4 o'clock in the Washington cathredal by Bishop James E. Freeman, an old friend of the bride's family. A reception will follow at the Georgetown residence of Mrs. Simms. Fourteen year old Ruth McCormick will be her sister's maid of honor and Joseph Medill McCormick will give his sister in marriage.

The bridesmaids will be Mrs. J. Harris Ward of Washington, Mrs. Jay Reeves of New York, Mrs. Tracy Barnes of Boston, the bridegroom's sister-in-law and a lifelong friend of the bride's; Miss Abigail Sard of Washington, and Miss Margaretta Rowland of Virginia.

Tracy Barnes will act as his brother's best man and ushering will be Archibald S. Alexander and Frederic A. Potts, cousins of the bridegroom; Henry I. Cobb Jr., Perry R. Pease, Gilliat De G. Schroeder Jr., C. McKim Norton, Arthur N. McGeoch Jr., and Edward S. Moore, all of New York.

Mr. Barnes, a member of one of the old Dutch families of New York, will take his bride to Europe for their honeymoon. They will sail next Wednesday on the Manhattan for France and will motor on the continent, with particular emphasis on music festivals in Austria. Upon their return they will live in New York.

Chicago Girls to Be Brides.

When the hour of half past four sounds today two of Chicago's daughters will be starting the walk down the altar aile.

The weddings, two of the most fashionable of the June season, are those of Jane Plamondon Ripley to John Carroll McGuinn and of Katherine Wakefield Street to James Reid Shannon of Denver.

Jane, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Bradford Ripley, will be married to Mr. McGuinn, son of the late Dr. James J. McGuinn and Mrs. McGuinn, in the Holy Name cathedral by the Rev. Joseph Phelan, the same priest who assisted at her baptism two decades ago.

Attending her and Mr. McGuinn will be some 20 young people, all of whom will accompany them to the cathedral chapel at 8:30 o'clock this morning for nuptial high mass, to be followed by an informal breakfast at the Ripley home at 325 Fullerton parkway.

Miss Betty Kellogg will be Miss Ripley's maid of honor. Miss Ann Bryant, Miss Blanche Smith of Grosse Pointe, Miss Lillian Fraser and Miss Lura Schreiner will be bridesmaids. Little Miss Maryann Luke, the 7 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Luke of La Grange, will be flower girl.

James J. McGuinn Jr., brother of

"Well, why don't you go home?" persisted the policeman.

"I rang the bell about two hours ago, and nobody anshered," explained the drunk. "I couldn't get in."

By May Tinée.

Good Morning.

Well, the day's big news is, I reckon, "Becky Sharp." First feature length film to be photographed in color.

Since they were born, the movies have been proving to us that there is, indeed, always something new under the sun.

They burst into sound before our astonished eyes and ears. They have been the merry sugar daddies of the high salary, and, in some cases, the low life. They got half the people in the civilized world mad at them—which is no mean distinction. They took a proper spanking and settled docilely down to an earnest and surprisingly efficient career of producing the classics. NOW—they hand us the screened version of William Makepeace Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," delicately photographed in ALL the colors of the rainbow — which is something new again.

For some time producers have been monkeying with tinted "shorts" and these haven't been so hot. Only one or two hues reproduced effectively. You can imagine the activity there's been in laboratories for the last few years as scientists labored to bring the color process to a successful head. At last, it seems to me, they've done it.

You will find the yellows and a certain periwinkle blue the loveliest in reproduction. But the violets and greens are gorgeous and the red takes on an enchanting winey depth.

Note especially the sunkissed appearance the process gives to the skin of the players, lending them a russet, windblown look—which, if I mistake me not—was far from the complexion worn in ye olden day by ladies, inced to the core, who fainted prettily in emergencies that cause the modern maid to push back her hair and mutter "Nerts!"

As to the costumes—my dears!—we're wearing practically the same things now! Which also goes for coiffures.

As regards the story—you'll love the way the novel has been merged in the movie, and you'll love Miriam Hopkins' interpretation of Becky Sharp, the shrewd, soulless, and fascinating little governess whose wits made nitwits of all those about her. Little Becky, who went down as she came up, laughing, lying, weeping; ribald or religious as suited the moment. Down as she came up—in all ways but one. The Becky who came UP didn't drink brandy. . . .

Miss Hopkins is so natural, so utterly alluring that she makes the character she portrays perfectly real. You quite understand how a woman of her brains, personality, and looks—not so much the looks, the lady just knew how to make the most of what she had—could work the havoc Thackeray's heroine did.

There's a brilliant supporting cast and Rouben Mamoulian did a great job of directing. He was bold and he was subtle. Note the flashing, risque dialog—out of the way almost before it is spoken. Keen—but never offensive.

The story is smartly told with emphasis where emphasis should be and only swift kotow to less important episodes.

In all ways, I'd say, "Becky Sharp" is a sparkling, iridescent gem that doth become its makers mightily.

You'll be wanting, for summer, a fairly light cleansing cream that will do its work efficaciously and that won't leave you with that hot, greasy feeling. Well, one came to this desk not long ago that should suit the most pernickety of you.

Contemplating it an afternoon or so ago, when it was awfully hot and life in general was sort of complicated, we were struck by the fact that it even looks cool. It's a cool pink that will make you think of strawberry parfaits or cherry lemonade served on a breeze swept terrace.

The texture of it is just what we ask for in creams. It isn't waxy; neither is it so very greasy it's positively runny. It's just about right.

And it's a completely efficient little remover of grime, especially if you use it as the makers ask you to. Spread it on in a thin film, massage for a little bit and remove it in about three minutes. You'll think, from the grime on your cleansing tissue or towel, that you'd gathered all of Chicago's dust unto yourself and you'll feel awfully set up to be rid of it.

Using it this way it does a good job of softening as well as cleansing, and, as we've said before, there's as much need of softening when the thermometer flirts with the hundred mark as there is when it lurks down around zero.

This cream is most inexpensive, which is something to ponder on when you stock up for the summer. There's more dust, you're out of doors more, and you'll cleanse your face a lot oftener in warm weather than you will in other seasons. You'll want something that won't break the family bank when you're using it in such slathers.

The fragrance is a cool one, too; it's almost indefinable, but it's pleasantly delicate. ELEANOR NANGLE.

Fairbank Jr. and New York Girl Engaged

The engagement of Miss June Cornell, daughter of Mrs. John Francis Cornell of New York, to Kellogg Fairbank Jr., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, was announced yesterday. The announcement was made at a cocktail party given by Mrs. Stewart Harvey, sister of the prospective bride.

The young couple met last summer when Miss Cornell was in Chicago for a visit with her sister. Young Fairbank is a graduate of Harvard university and is now employed in a loop department store.

'Mutiny' Cast Gives a Play for Recreation

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., June 14.—[Special.]—The bold bad mutineers of the screen version of "Mutiny on the Bounty" find time hanging so heavy on their hands during location at the isthmus on Catalina Island that they are giving their own private theatricals over week-ends.

And these special theatricals are so unusual that everybody who can wangle permission to look at them deserts Hollywood. In the playlet, which is a three act satire on Hollywood, written and gagged chiefly by Herbert Mundin, Charles Laughton plays the beautiful love smitten high school girl, Mundin is the handsome juvenile; Stanley Fields, the film villain, is, oddly enough, a Hollywood producer, and Franchot Tone, Clark Gable [who is still staying away from the Ohio preacher who wants to "reclaim him"] and Donald Crist have other male and female roles. They say that Laughton as a blushing girl does the most impressive acting of his life.

Edward H. Griffith, director of ever so many Ann Harding films, has bought a partnership in a Cuban sugar plantation. . . . Jean Tennyson of the Chicago Grand Opera company is due in Hollywood for the start of her film career in September. Her contract is with M. G. M.

The first picture under the newest film merger, that of Republic Pictures and Mascot Pictures, has Charlie Farrell, Charlotte Henry ["Alice in Wonderland"], Phyllis Barry and Beryl Mercer in "Forbidden Heaven." The combination of the two large independents is sticking to the name "Republic Pictures."

For "Curly Top" at Fox studio Rochelle Hudson wears a bathing suit of black, elastic straw cloth topped by a very large patent leather white cartwheel hat and a blue and white terry cloth robe with red cording and tassel. Stylist Rene Herbert is responsible for the effect.

Una O'Connor, herself an only child and single, says her movie ambition is to play mother roles. . . . Gilbert Adrian, Metro designer, has moved the bridal veil from the bride's [Joan Crawford] head to her shoulders in what the girls around the studios assert is a very daring style innovation. In the wedding scene in Joan's picture "Glitter," now being made, the veil hangs from the shoulders on the order of a cape and drops from under a garland of white flowers. It covers the dress like a cloud of mist and trails in back for fifteen yards. A pert hat with an upturned brim serves as head covering.

September Bride

The engagement of Miss Eleanor Egan, pictured above, is being announced this morning by her mother, Mrs. Nina McNally Bingham of 15 East Division street. Her fiancé is Morris Everett, son of Mrs. S. Homer Everett of Cleveland, O. Miss Egan, whose father is H. Chandler Egan of Medford, Ore., formerly of Highland Park, is a graduate of Miss Raney's school in Pasadena and Smith college, class of 1933.

Mr. Everett prepared for Yale at the Kent school and was graduated from college in 1933. Miss Egan is spending the week-end in Cleveland, where the engagement is being announced tonight at a dinner-dance. The wedding is planned for September and Mr. Everett will take his bride to Cleveland to live.

Now Is Time to Buy Your Swim Outfits

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Week-end shopping tips! Grab your swim and beach needs now. Everything is new and the last word in summertime comfort for out of doors and all of it is being sold almost faster than the stuff can be packed for delivery.

One piece swim suits of satin lastex may be a bit luxurious at the first glance at the price tag, but they're worth every cent. They fit like your own skin and the sleek, shiny black beauties are especially handsome and effective after you have dipped.

Then there are some grand white wool affairs with nubby textures like miniature candlewick bedspreads, some gorgeous yellow wool, and plenty of dusty pink and sea green blue.

The tie-on top suits are made to fit smoothly and have plenty of yardage over the diaphragm so that you can tie them well down over the contrasting colored shorts if you wish. Summer suits of this year's vintage certainly fit. No excuse for sloppy looking seagoing outfits this time.

Next to the popular lastex suits the good looking beach dresses are setting records for quick sales. Navy blue flannel with bandana tie tops in blue and white and white flannel with the same nautical tops are best buys. The skirts fit smoothly and button down the back with big white pearl buttons.

Sun glasses are a small but most important gadget to remember. The colored frames, in five different shades and white, are now ready for your hearty approval, because you can wear glasses with frames in the color to match your beach robe or swim suit—red, yellow, green, blue, and pink.

Terry cloth beach capes are knockouts. The many coats of the same cloth also are popular. They are inexpensive and practical, as you can use them for indoor bath wear, too. Some of the newest coats have monograms in color or anchors and other marine decorations embroidered on the collars, pockets, and chest sections.

And all these aquatic outfits have price marks that are lower than they have been in years.

Outdoor Art Fair Opens on Wacker Drive Today

Chicago and suburban artists will open an outdoor exhibition today on the north sidewalk of Wacker drive, just west of Michigan avenue. N. P. Steinberg, director of the show and representing Chicago Artists' Equity, said there would probably be more than 300 painters, etchers, water colorists, wood carvers and lithographers in the open air show. The show will continue for two weeks.

Miss Tanner Will Be Bride at Evanston

Miss Barbara Tanner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tanner Jr. of Evanston, will be married to John Douglas Hastings, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy H. Hastings, also of Evanston, at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon in the chapel of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Evanston.

Miss Louise Hahn will be Miss Tanner's maid of honor. Miss Mary Forrest of Winnetka and Mrs. Merrill Russell of Evanston will be bridesmaids.

Miss Elizabeth Constance Gorman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mervyn J. Gorman, 521 Stratford place, will be married to James McAllister Bennan, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Bennan, at 10 o'clock this morning at the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel.

The Rev. Samuel Knox Wilson, president of Loyola university and cousin of the bride, will officiate at the nuptial high mass which will be followed by a breakfast at the home of the bride's parents.

Miss Gertrude Barrett will serve Miss Gorman as maid of honor. Other attendants will be Miss Helen Gorman, sister of the bride; Miss Margaret McAuley, Miss Mary Bennan, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Mary Sullivan. Miss Sally Carroll will be flower girl.

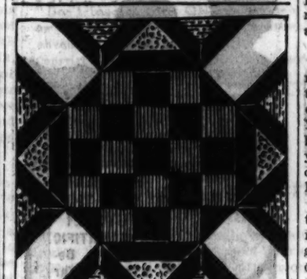
Miss Ruth Regina Gallatin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gallatin of Chillicothe, Mo., will be married to George P. Martin, 4928 Quincy avenue, son of Mrs. G. H. Martin of Hannibal, Mo., at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Belden Avenue Baptist church. Mr. and Mrs. Martin will live in Chicago.

Miss Margaret Theresa Schreiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Louis Schreiner, will be married to Thomas Patrick Hart, son of Mrs. Katherine Hart of Omaha, Neb., today. Miss Schreiner is a graduate of Faulkner school and attended the Goodman School of Dramatics. Mr. Hart is a graduate of Creighton university and Harvard business school. The couple will live at 45 Cedar street after July 1.

Pennsylvania Is the Birthplace of Pieced Quilt



Governor's Garden.
BY NANCY CABOT.

"Governor's Garden" is an interesting old pieced block, made in Pennsylvania in the latter part of the 19th century. The exact date is unknown, but the simplicity and beauty of the block have made it, since its creation, one of the oustanding quilts in popular favor. Orange, yellow, and red prints, combined with white and soft green, create a typical color combination preferred by the quiltmakers in the eastern state.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices: One South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

Dr. Dugall Jackson Made Director of Lewis Institute

Dr. Dugall Caleb Jackson Jr., head of the department of engineering at the University of Kansas, has been elected director of the Lewis institute of Chicago, succeeding Dr. George Noble Carman, who has resigned. Dr. Jackson will take over his new duties in September. Dr. Jackson, 40 years old, is a graduate of Harvard university and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The Ortega Feud

By Marie De Nervaud

SYNOPSIS.

Chris Jackson is sent by Bill Benton, new sheriff of Monterey county, to put an end to the Ortega-Alvado feud, which has resulted in numerous murders. Both families believe California to be still Spanish and want Americans kept out. Pietro Sanchez runs the general store of the Big Sur valley. While calling there Chris encounters Guido Ortega, Ramon, his dare devil son, and Ysabel, his beautiful, sad eyed niece. He falls in love with Ysabel at first sight, and has a run-in with Ramon. Chris outfits himself for a supposed lion hunting expedition. He receives a note sent by messenger from Ysabel Ortega, hinting of a mysterious danger, begging his help, and asking him to meet her in a fortnight. Chris camps in a canyon on the northern boundary of the Alvado ranch. A shot from an unseen hand gives him warning to leave. He is saved by Rocky, an old Indian hunter, who invites him to his camp for supper and advises him to leave the country.

INSTALMENT VI.

AN AUDACIOUS SENORITA.

Suiting the deed to the words as soon as Chris had finished breakfast and washed up in the creek, he prepared to leave camp. He took the precaution to tie Tom to one of the redwoods, knowing that Jerry would never leave him, and that it would be safe to let him range at large to guard the camp.

He stopped down and gave Tom a consoling pat. "A few more days, old top, and I can count on your loyalty, so I won't have to tie either of you," he explained, "but I'm not sure you know me quite well enough yet."

He turned and followed upstream until he came to the spot where he and Rocky had turned off the night before.

He particularly remembered the place, as it was marked by a peculiarly shaped boulder which had been split in two by a persistent redwood that had wedged it's way into a crevice.

Rocky's camp had been not more than thirty paces from the creek, up a steep bank, and under some redwoods.

Giving a "hallo" to mark his approach, Chris scrambled up the bank and went over to the site of their last night's supper. Rocky was no where to be seen, but Chris discounted that fact.

He had already learned that the mere fact that Rocky was invisible by no means proved that he wasn't there.

As he made his way through the trees, however, he suddenly stopped with surprise and turned to retrace his steps. He was sure he had not come as far as this the night before, and yet there was no sign of a fire or that any one had camped there.

Circling about through the trees, Chris became more and more mystified as his eye searched the apparently unbroken bed of needles that carpeted the slope.

He certainly hadn't dreamed this whole encounter with Rocky, and yet there was no evidence to prove that he hadn't.

Remembering Rocky's uncanny cleverness at woodcraft, Chris paced out the distance from the rock to about the spot where he figured the fires must have been, and dropping to his hands and knees, scraped down among the fragrant redwood needles.

An exclamation escaped him as his fingers encountered damp ground and, leaning closer, he saw that water had been poured over blackened earth. With this clue as a starting point, Chris managed to follow the outline of the circle that Rocky had so cleverly covered with the needles, completely obliterating any traces of the fire of the night before.

With an admiring chuckle at this further evidence of Rocky's skill and cunning, Chris stood up and studied the slope behind him.

Twenty yards or so from where he stood it rose precipitously over jagged ledges of rock to where the rim cut a sharp line against the blue sky.

A few minutes later and he stood at the top. A low whistle escaped him as he surveyed the magnificent panorama before him.

Brown hills rose abruptly on his left, their tawny slopes dotted here and there with cattle. In the distance, by the rim of the next canyon that cut its way to the ocean, an adobe hacienda nestled among spreading live oaks, its red tiled roof making a vivid splash of color against the blue of the water sparkling beyond it.

This, undoubtedly, was the Alvado stronghold, and Chris gazed at it with a fascinated curiosity. Even from this distance he could judge of the spacious proportions of the picturesque dwelling and the many outbuildings of the rancheria testified to the size of the outfit.

Somewhere within those thick adobe walls was the man who had nipped his arm last night with that warning shot, and who in turn had received Rocky's more telling rebuke.

There, too, was the old Senor Alvado, the head of the clan, ferociously intent on avenging the death of his youngest son, who had been one of the three victims of the last six months' feud war.

Chris was somewhat hazy about the other members of the family. He had left in such a hurry that he hadn't had time to glean many of the details about the situation he had been sent to investigate. He had figured it would be easy enough to pick up all that information on the spot, but so far he couldn't flatter himself that he had been very successful.

"You like the view, senor? Yes?"

Chris swung about in amazement at this silvery toned question which cut through his absorption. A moment his heart missed a beat as he spied a slender figure in a black riding habit standing a few paces from him, her mount beside her. The next instant he saw that it was not Ysabel Ortega, but a stranger, who had appeared so inexplicably from nowhere.

Though dressed in the same absurdly conventional fashion of a generation ago, and with dark hair and eyes like Ysabel's and the same transparent cameo skin, the girl before him gave out an entirely different essence.

Her black eyes, with a slightly mocking tilt to the eyebrows, stared boldly at Chris, and her red lips were parted in a half smile as she waited for him to recover from his surprise.

Holding the reins of her milk white pony loosely in her right hand, she rested her left on the pommel of her saddle, posing with conscious satisfaction in this striking attitude, and repeated her question.

"I ask you, do you like our view, senor?"

Her voice had an illusive Spanish accent that softened the harsh Anglo-Saxon syllables with a sort of drawling caress. She shifted her gaze from Chris' eyes to his mouth and then back again with a mocking interrogation.

"Perhaps I mistake? Perhaps you do not speak English?"

"Sure, I speak English," Chris broke his silence at last, "but what gets me is where you came from and why I didn't hear you ride up."

She laughed and indicated the slope behind her with a graceful gesture, then rested her hand on the pommel of her saddle again, studying, with a glint of approval in her dark eyes, the tall blond figure before her.

"I was riding there and saw you, so I dismounted and came down, very quietly, to ask, do you like our view?" The black eyebrows arched and her lips parted in a provocative smile. "You have not told me yet!"

"Nothing the matter with the view," the girl flushed slightly as Chris played up to her flirtatious lead, and bowed gallantly, his eyes fixed with flattering intensity on her, "but why 'ours'? Are you one of the Alvados?"

"Do you think a daughter of the Alvados would be speaking this way with a stranger?" She parried finally.

"Looks that way!" Chris grinned at her audaciously. "This is the first I knew that Senor Alvado had a daughter. What's your name?"

"Francesca Alvado, senor, since you are so clever at guessing." She glanced apprehensively at the distant hacienda. "They could not see us from so far, could they?"

"Not without a spy glass," Chris reassured her, "and anyway, why shouldn't you speak to me?"

"My father is very strict, and he allows no strangers south of this point or even as far as this, for that matter. It is really for that that I came to warn you." She left her eyelids flutter demurely over her dark eyes and rest a moment against her cheeks.

Much amused at the vamping tactics of the Spanish beauty, Chris nevertheless felt a certain elation at this encounter. It would do no harm to play up to her a bit, and where could he get a better source of information for all that he wanted to know? He'd be a fool to let this chance slip by!

"How about sitting down there for a moment and talking it over?" Chris indicated a ledge of rock.

the bridegroom, will be best man, while Bradford Ripley, brother of the bride; Joseph Griffin, Maurice O'Meara and Edward Finnegan will be groomsmen.

Following the ceremony a reception for 175 friends and relatives will be held at the Ripley home, after which the new Mrs. McGuinn and Mr. McGuinn will leave by motor for San Francisco, where they will make their home.

Street Nuptials in Winnetka.

Miss Street, the daughter of Mrs. Harry Lockman Street and the late Mr. Street, will be married to Mr. Shannon, son of Mrs. Edward Lincoln Shannon of Denver, at 4:30 o'clock in Christ church, Winnetka. The Rev. Dr. Charles Larrabee Street, head of St. Alban's school, and Miss Street's uncle, will read the marriage lines. The Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard, rector, will assist in the ceremony.

Mrs. Thomas Hunter Knorr, the former Jeanne Street, will be her sister's matron of honor. A second sister, Miss Marjorie Street, will be maid of honor. A third sister, Miss Harriet Street, will be one of the bridesmaids. Miss Virginia Shannon, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Eleanor Bovenizer, who was the bride's roommate at Mount Vernon seminary, will be the other bridesmaids.

James Pinkney of Denver will serve Mr. Shannon as best man. Dr. Dumont Clark, Jack Harris, Shields Mason, and Lloyd Hughes, all of Denver, and Thomas Hunter Knorr will be ushers.

Following the ceremony there will be a reception at the home of Mrs. Street at 592 Sheridan road, Winnetka. If the weather is fair, the reception may be in the garden.

The bride and bridegroom will leave immediately by motor for Denver, postponing their wedding trip until August that they may be in the bridal party of Miss Nancy Lee and Casper Foreman Hegner there on June 22. Miss Lee was a bridesmaid in the wedding of Mrs. Knorr last summer and was expected to be bridesmaid in Miss Street's wedding today, until she unexpectedly advanced her own wedding date. Mr. and Mrs. Knorr also will motor out to Denver, leaving the early part of next week, to be in the bridal party.

Seaman-Schuyler Marriage Today.

In the quaint little Zion Episcopal church on the shore of Oconomowoc lake in Wisconsin this afternoon a wedding of interest to Chicagoans will take place when Miss Claribel Seaman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Seaman of Milwaukee and Oconomowoc, becomes the bride of Daniel M. Schuyler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Schuyler Jr. of Chicago and Oconomowoc.

The Rev. Holmes Whitmore of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Milwaukee, will read the service in the church, which was built in 1846. Following the ceremony there will be a reception at the home of the Seamans, Miss Betty Leach of Milwaukee will be the maid of honor and Betsy Norris, niece of the bride, will be the flower girl.

William M. Schuyler will serve his brother as best man and ushering will be Gilbert Seaman, the bride's brother, Stephen A. Briggs of Detroit, Robert McCulloch of Milwaukee and Oconomowoc, Frank W. Norris of Milwaukee, Frank Nahser, Edson Cook, and William De Riemer, all of Chicago, and Walter Blood Jr. of Denver.

Mr. Schuyler and his bride will motor east on their wedding trip and will be at home after July 15 in the Marshall Field Garden apartments. The bride is a member of the Junior league and Service club of Milwaukee. Many Chicagoans are motoring to Oconomowoc today for the wedding.

Luncheon Today for Jere Richards.

Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick will entertain at luncheon at the Casino today for her niece, Miss Jere Richards, only daughter of Mrs. Harold Wyles Richards, whose marriage to Russell Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Scott, will be an event of next Saturday.

Among the other pre-nuptial parties being given for Miss Richards during the early part of next week is a luncheon and shower Monday by Mrs. Caryl Cummings and a shower late Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Tilden Cummings.

The wedding will take place at 4:30 o'clock next Saturday at the Fortnightly club, with the Rev. Edric Amory Wells of Boston, Miss Richards' cousin, officiating.

No one is hoping for good weather today more fervently than the Horace White Armstrongs for they are planning to receive on their new terrace overlooking the lake at the reception they will give this afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock for their son, Frank H. Armstrong II., and his bride, the former Barbara Bastien.

The Armstrong home on Sheridan road in Winnetka is one of the handsomest in that north shore town, and the terrace that has been finished just recently is especially lovely and will be an ideal place for a reception if only the weather is pleasant.

The daughters of the family, the Misses Jean and Mary, will receive with their parents and brother and sister. The younger Mrs. Armstrong's mother, Mrs. Alvin E. Bastien, is among the women the elder Mrs. Armstrong has invited to pour this afternoon.

Gads Hill Benefit Dance at Skokie Club.

An annual dance to which Winnetka and Evanston folk look forward with pleasure each June is taking place tonight at the Skokie Country club with a dozen or more dinner parties preceding it. The nursery school of Gads Hill settlement will benefit from the party, which is sponsored by the Winnetka and Evanston auxiliaries of the settlement.

A group of Mexicans from the settlement section, plucking the strings of their instruments, will bring a touch of the "Land of Manana" as they stroll about between dances, and there will be games and other entertainment. Five young Winnetka girls, Miss Peggy Sargent, Miss Nancy Brown, Miss Nancy Knode, Miss Jane de Peyster, and Miss Leslie Wilson will sell flowers.

Among the dinner hostesses will be Mrs. J. Endicott Bradstreet, Mrs. Samuel C. Smart, Mrs. William O. Coleman, Mrs. Chesser Campbell, Mrs. Vernon Welsh, Mrs. Robert W. McKisson, Mrs. Willis D. Nance, Mrs. James Waller Marshall, Mrs. John Pontius, Mrs. Walter Straub, Mrs. Layton Northrup, Mrs. Joel G. Childs, and Mrs. Tom Hough.

Garden Club Day at Barrington.

The Barrington Garden club will hold open garden day from 2 until 6 o'clock today at twelve of Barrington's loveliest gardens. Admission to the showing, of which Mrs. Schuyler Thurber and Mrs. Robert Hilton are chairmen, will be 50 cents. The gardens which will go on view are those of Mrs. John Roberts, Mrs. Sheldon Clark, Mrs. William Webbe, Mrs. Evan Evans, Mrs. Edwin A. Seipp, Mrs. James Cardwell, Mrs. Henry Zander, Mrs. George E. Van Hagen, Mrs. Alexander Reichman, Mrs. Frank Johnston, Mrs. Frank Hecht, and Mrs. H. Stillson Hart.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Dole, W. Scott Linn, and the Raymond O. Mitchells will be among those entertaining dinner guests tonight at the Dunham Woods Riding club before the first dance of the summer.

Extended Cape Slenderizes

WOMAN'S DRESS.

Capes and cape effects are seen on many dresses, and are exceedingly smart. This dress is designed especially for the heavier figure, and it has this new feature. But to keep it slim the caped sleeves are brought down to the waistline, suggesting more length. The surplice closing and V neckline are other clever details. Any of the cottons, linens, or silks will make up attractively in this design.

The pattern, No. 3278, comes in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, and 50 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 39 inch material.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

CUE BIDDING.

An immediate overcall in the opponent's suit may mean one of two things. For most purposes, it is considered a cue bid, showing either control or a void in that suit, and is forcing until game is reached. But the joker is that your partner is at perfect liberty to make this bid, if he considers that the opponents are psyching, and wants to show you that he, not the bidder, has spades. Because of the natural confusion that results from using the same bid for two entirely different things, I prefer to reserve my cue bids for the second or third round of bidding.

The bidding:

Pass	Pass	1 Cl.	2 Cl.
Dbl.	3 Ht.	Dbl.	4 Di.
Pass	Pass	Pass

The psychic opening, and the two doubles deceived North entirely. Instead of trusting her partner, she forced him first with a jump bid and then passed his takeout when six diamonds was a lay-down.

A little later this hand was dealt:

Again East psyched. South, justifiably annoyed that his seven-card suit had been bid, attempted to show that he had clubs as well. Unfortunately North had make up her mind that she wasn't going to be fooled by any such underhand tactics as had succeeded before. Despite the fact that five clubs is undefeatable, she persisted in no trumps, and the result was a 700 point loss under the old scoring.

After that North and South gave up cue bidding for the duration of the match.

BY MARY MEADE.

Saturday's orchid—or perhaps it should be a good, homey potted geranium—goes to a "professional woman whose hobby is cooking" in Evanston. It seems that she's in sympathy with our views on strawberry shortcake, and in connection with her graceful note of appreciation she reminded us of a shortcake pointer omitted from our story. "Instead of splitting the cake after baking," writes this interior decorator [we're referring to her profession this time, not her hobby], "put two thin cakes together with soft butter spread on the lower one before baking. When separated for the final buttering the inside surfaces have a lovely, soft, receptive texture."

Now for one of those plain old garden variety cooking problems—one which is so frequent a visitor in most kitchens as to go almost unnoticed. Miss R. M. puts it this way: "Most of the time my mashed potatoes get sort of gummy." Which describes the situation in pat manner, except that "sort of" isn't strong enough to tell how gummy have been many of the mashed potatoes in our experience. Two things are likely to cause this unappetizing compactness in mashed potatoes—having to wait for mealtime and too little or too much milk. Mashed potatoes simply can't wait for long without losing some of their fluffiness. Too little milk may give them a dry, choking gumminess, and too much an overmoist degree of the same ailment.

When the cooked potatoes are tender they should go through a ricer to insure an even and thorough breaking. It can be done with a fork, a regular masher, or an automatic mixer as well. Then they should be combined immediately with a little hot milk, butter, and seasonings, whipped to a smooth fluffiness, and served right away. The usual proportion is a third cup of hot milk to five medium sized potatoes.

Mrs. A. M. G. of Thornton, Ill., is looking for a German pancake recipe. The name, she writes, sounds something like "fonkley," the cakes tasted much like an omelet, and were so tender that they could hardly be taken off the griddle without breaking in parts. Our browsing in German cookbooks has brought forth a recipe which may or may not be the one she seeks. If any cosmopolitan cooks among our readers can help us locate the real one for Mrs. G., we'd be deeply grateful to hear from them. Anyway, here's the best bet we could find:

German Pancakes.

1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
4 eggs, separated

Combine the blended dry ingredients with the milk and beaten egg yolks. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites, and bake in large, thin cakes on a hot griddle.

A new book on dieting for weight control recently has come to our attention. It's "Diet and Like It," by Mabel E. Baldwin, and it's published by the D. Appleton-Century company of New York and London. We like the book because it presents a sensible method of dieting, planned to protect the dieter from malnutrition while the weight slithers off, and because fully half the book is dedicated to a series of interchangeable menus, complete, easy to read and use. The latter half deals with the nature of a correct diet—the needs of the body and how they can best be met during the weight losing period.

Older Child Is Often Jealous of Younger One

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

"My dear Mrs. Bevans," begins a letter, "I am a devoted reader of your column in the paper and decided to write and ask your advice on an important matter that is fast becoming a problem in our household. It's about my little boy, who will be 2½ years old in October. Have also another baby—a darling girl of 10 months.

"Now Mrs. Bevans, the trouble lies with the boy. He is a cute little fellow, golden haired, and seems perfectly normal, exceedingly active and smart in every respect. But I cannot leave the two alone five minutes that he doesn't tear the baby's face or pinch or bite her. If any one calls at the house and notices the baby he immediately goes over to her and does damage. I am at my wits' end—afraid he may seriously hurt her, and it makes the task so hard. I know he loves her, for at times he puts his arms around her and kisses her, and even plays with her, but it always ends with her screaming and the mark of his teeth or nails on her."

So many mothers are having this experience that my brief answer may be helpful:

It seems apparent to me that the trouble with your little boy is due to two things—of these the first is the baby. This is a most usual thing, and the younger the first child the more likely it is to happen.

You see he was always the baby, was the center of your attention and care and love—and it was to him that guests and relatives always turned. Then suddenly—with the advent of another baby while he himself is still under 2, with his own babyhood only a lap behind—attention is turned away from him to some one else, most of your time is necessarily given to this newcomer, and his whole world is upside down! Of course, he loves his little sister, but at the same time that he loves her he can also resent her place in his world and long for the attention he used to get exclusively. So there are these two warring impulses in him.

I suggest that you try to give the older baby as much attention [in the form of real interest] as possible, show him your love, and try to make the baby a joint possession. I think these ideas will smooth things out for the little fellow.

The minor cause of the scratching and biting may be due to the fact that many children act so at this age, because they have not yet learned to play with others. It would be well if you could manage some companionship of his own age for your small son.

We have several leaflets on the young child's behavior. They are: "The No Habit," "Temper Tantrums," and "Don't Touch." Any ONE will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self addressed envelope.

Columbia School Chorus Presents Pleasant Concert

BY EDWARD MOORE.

There was some unusually pleasant singing by the Columbia School chorus at Fullerton hall yesterday afternoon. This is a woman's organization of some twenty members under the direction of Louise St. John Westervelt. It has good tone, good balance, and more than common ability at getting words across to the audience. Several of the numbers were of an older generation, a florid chorus from Handel's "L'Allegro," a work by the early American composer, Francis Hopkinson, folk songs from Germany and England, all of which made excellent contrast with later works.

Among the soloists there were Frank Taylor, a baritone with a fine voice; Raymond Anderson, violinist, and Richard Wozny, pianist.

Edith Mason has been invited by Arturo Toscanini to appear under his direction in the rôle of Nanetta in "Falstaff" at the Salzburg music festival this summer. Miss Mason now resides in New York.

Shirley M. K. Gandell, president of the Cosmopolitan School of Music, has been elected president of the Chicago Council of Teachers of Singing, succeeding Thomas Noble MacBurney. The other officers are Walter Allen Stults, vice president, and John T. Read, secretary-treasurer.

Joseph M. Schenck Forms Two British Film Concerns

LONDON, June 14.—(AP)—Joseph M. Schenck, American producer, invaded the British film industry today with the formation of two production companies. One, called "The Elisabeth Bergner Production Company, Ltd.," will star Miss Bergner in three pictures in the next two years, the first of them Bernard Shaw's "St. Joan." Dr. Paul Czinner will supervise the filming. The second company has the title "The Paul Czinner Producing company," in which Czinner will make pictures without Miss Bergner.

Darker Shade of Powder Is Flattering to Blonde Beauty

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

I got an idea, from a recent visit and chat with Grace Moore, the brilliant opera and screen star, about blondes and makeup, that is worth passing along.

We all are inclined to type ourselves for makeup selection, although the more recent advice is to experiment widely rather than adhere to a prescribed form of classification. Blondes have been told, because of their delicate coloring and their blue eyes, that they should choose powders of the most delicate shades, get tones that have a skin matching tint. Now, Miss Moore is extremely blonde right now, for camera purposes, and the darkish shade of powder she uses gives just that character strength needed by the fair blonde.

I mean powder character-strength, of course. When her skin becomes tanned, as it does in the swimming season, which sport she pursues a lot, Miss Moore changes her lipstick from the glowing red she was wearing when I saw her to a darker shade. Her theory is that the bright lipstick in all that tan midst makes the lips appear too prominently.

Another individual persuasion Miss Moore has is that blue eye shadow isn't always best for the blue-eyed blonde. She uses an olive green. The contrasting shade brings out the blue of the eye, she thinks, whereas the blue in the eye shadow tends to "kill" the natural blue of the eye.

The powder shade Miss Moore now uses and which, as I say, gives a tannish effect without being dark, as a tanned skin is, is a sort of apricot or topaz shade.

It was clever makeup to use with the costume she wore: dusty pink jacket and hat trimmed with flowers of the same soft pink color. A blonde ordinarily wearing that shade of pink with a delicate powder shade might look negative. I saw Miss Moore off on the boat on which she sailed for her performance before the king and queen of England. A whole story could be written on the poise and energy reserve required by stars of such magnitude as Miss Moore confronted by the army of cameras, reporters, and autograph collectors. But this girl from Tennessee, who made good in the biggest sort of way, stood the test with rare good nature and charm.

Art Graduates Told World Is Ready for Them

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

The Art institute graduated its fifty-fifth class from the Art institute school yesterday afternoon at commencement exercises which were short and informal.

The exercises were held in the Goodman theater. Charles Fabens Kelly, dean of the school, presided and H. J. Lucas, manufacturer, gave the address which dealt with art in industry and had as its main theme the inspiring suggestion that never was the world so art minded as now and that a wealth of opportunities were waiting for the young, serious, and industrious artist.

For the first time in the history of the school the degree of bachelor of fine arts was awarded. Thirty students received it. The requirements consist of studying one year at the University college of the Chicago university and three years at the Art institute.

Two exhibitions opened yesterday, one in the Allerton gallery and the other in the Boulevard gallery, 540 North Michigan avenue. Members of the Brush and Pencil club are exhibiting at the Allerton and the exhibit is colorful and fresh.

W. F. McCaughey has a group of well handled water colors. His "New York Harbor," "Belgian Village," and "Evening Rush" are a challenge to the most proficient user of this medium.

Margaret Selleck shows a number of stunning still lifes and Irma Bratton Mars four charming pastel portraits of children. June Jordan is responsible for two attractive little children sketches, nearly as fascinating as her costume dolls for which she is famous.

In the Boulevard gallery David McCosh and his wife, Anne Kutke, are exhibiting oils, lithographs, and water colors. Mr. McCosh has made strides in his painting. He shows some stunning canvases, his lithographs are superb. He has added craftsmanship to turbulence and the result is a vivid, compelling technique that makes his stuff worth while.

The exhibitions will continue into July.

Unrequited Love May Be Eased by Unmailed Letters

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"This is the case history of my first experience with the pernicious malady known as love. The cause of this most deplorable cardiacal condition and I are both in our teens. And that's about all we have in common. She's Louisa M. Alcott's 'Little Women' personified. I'm Ernest Hemingwayish. That's as euphemistically as I can put it.

"Well, a couple of weeks ago she left to spend the summer far away. I wrote two letters and got one answer. It was as impersonal as a rejection slip. Sounded like the palaver printed on the back of a railroad ticket or something.

"What to do? What to do? Now I can appreciate Hamlet. Frankly I hope you tell me to tell the little woman to go to. See what Hamlet got for procrastinating! But that isn't what I want at all. I'm nutty as a squirrel about the maid in question, and the letter described above has me feeling lower than Pike's Peak isn't. I'm a fairly intelligent young man, but any one addleheaded enough to fall in love probably will be naïve enough to be comforted by anything you write. HERMES."

"P. S. Please explain why any one suffering with the cardiac blues, as I am at this moment, can appear facetious when it's the last thing on earth I feel?

Aren't you trying to prove yourself a glutton for punishment, Hermes, spending any more postage money on your little woman infatuation?

You might write her if you could keep up your facetious tone throughout the letter, but if you inject the blues between the lines, or on them, we fear you'll just be in for more depression. It might be that you were expecting too much of the young woman in her reply. After all, girls are taught not to send flaming epistles through the mail. We have an idea that if you'd just sit down and write the girl a whole flock of letters, and NOT MAIL them, it would help to get that cardiac action of yours back to normal. Try it, Hermes.

The Mummers Are Energetic in "Half God"

"HALF GODS."

The cast:

Stephen Ferrier	Sherman Marks
Hope Ferrier	Bernice Rea
Ada	Marcella Newman
Dennis	D. Cameron Robertson Jr.
Rush Bigelow	Bud Hinkle
Judge Sturgis	Wally Olsen
Helen Grey	Ruth K. Smyth
Dr. Mannering	Samuel Stafland
Police sergeant	Leon Michel
Polly	Gertrude Horowitz
Dr. Wolhelm	Thor Ericson

And others.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

The Mummers, an organization of amateurs which has been in existence since 1922, made its downtown début last night with a staging of Sidney Howard's "Half Gods," subtitled "The First Hundred Years." This was the play's first staging in Chicago, for its life in the original professional production in New York [1929] was brief indeed.

"Half Gods" is an ante-depression piece of work, frivolous and farcical in its treatment of the light minded and divorce chasing aspect of American marriage. One of its scenes shows a flighty young wife consulting a portentous psychoanalyst about the condition of her Libido—a hobby which passed out of fashion among our daffy intellectuals with the arrival of the great economic blight.

Howard rates as a serious dramatist, but in "Half Gods" he did his best to write a rattle brained farce on the American woman's attitude toward matrimony in the good old days when nobody worried over meal tickets. He went so far in his search for humor that in the sixth of his eight scenes he introduced a trunk smashing episode reminiscent of "Lightnin'" and a thousand vaudeville sketches.

Although of no importance in the history of the drama, "Half Gods" has the merit of providing a lot of healthy exercise for amateurs. It permits the Mummers to act profusely, and they tackled the job with gusto. There was high animation on the stage, and there was much laughter in the audience, which filled the Goodman. Apparently these Mummers have a large following.

Next season the group plans a series of five productions in a downtown theater. Their leaders are William F. Madden, stage director, and Sherman F. Marks, who acted an agonized husband in this performance. Bernice Rea, leading woman, is an attractive young person. The stage settings were excellent.

Baer Agrees to Meet Louis or Carnera.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 14.—Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock walked into the Madison Square Garden office on West 49th street at 2 o'clock this afternoon. There from the hands of Promoter Jimmy Johnston the new titleholder received a check for $31,244.13, his share from the proceeds of last night's bout in which he won a 15 round decision from Max Baer at Long Island City.

Immediately after the paying off ceremony developments came quickly in the heavyweight boxing situation. First Madison Square Garden, which has the new champion under contract, announced Braddock had agreed to defend his title against Max Schmeling, former champion, in the summer of 1936, thus eliminating any chance of a championship fight in September.

Then came the announcement by Mike Jacobs of the Twentieth Century Sporting club that the dethroned Baer had accepted terms to fight the winner of the Joe Louis-Primo Carnera bout of June 25 in September. This indicated Baer has no intention of quitting the ring as he declared he would do following his defeat last night. In the event Baer's swollen hands do not respond to treatment, Jacobs said, Art Lasky, who was beaten by Braddock recently, will be held in reserve for the September encounter.

"Louis, Carnera Are Out."

In announcing Braddock would make the first defense of his championship next year, Johnston said both Louis and Carnera are out as far as a chance at the title is concerned. These opponents of June 25 are allied with the rival Twentieth Century club.

"We're going to bring Schmeling over from Germany within a few weeks to start building him up for the next title chance," Johnston said. "Louis and Carnera are out of the picture as far as the Garden and Braddock are concerned.

"Louis refused to fight Braddock for the Garden when we were seeking an opponent for Braddock after the Lasky bout. Carnera had a gentleman's agreement to meet the winner of the Braddock-Lasky bout, but he ran out. So those two guys just ran themselves out of the championship picture."

At the same time Johnston said he would offer Baer a bout with Schmeling in September and if he won Baer would be substituted for Schmeling in a return bout with Bradock.

Baer to Remain in East.

Baer, Jacobs said in his announcement of the Twentieth Century club's plans, has agreed to remain at Asbury Park, N. J., his training site for his losing fight with Braddock, rest his hands, and train his brother, Buddy, who is to fight on the Louis-Carnera card.

Just a year ago, on this very date, to be exact, Braddock was waiting for the preliminary to the Baer-Carnera fight in which he was to engage Corn Griffin, a bout he had accepted on two days' notice and for which he was to receive $250. Braddock's total wealth at that time differed from his $31,244.13 received today by a little matter of about $31,000. Such is one of the strangest stories in pugilism.

Braddock bore his new honors modestly, shaking hands all around with those he knew. This writer looked for visual evidence that Jersey Jim had outfought for 15 rounds the reputed hardest hitter of present day boxing. A small bunch of cotton gauze, held with adhesive tape, covered a portion of the slightly cauliflowered left ear, which is the only easily recognizable trace of his profession. Braddock bore no "shiners." The upper eyelid of his left eye, however, was slightly discolored, but it only showed close up. Otherwise Jim appear no different than when he entered the ring. He said his hands suffered no mishaps.

Confident After Seventh.

"Just when in the bout did you feel sure you had Baer beaten?" we asked.

Instead of answering that he held that feeling from the start, as some might expect a new champion to say, Braddock, without hesitation, gave the forthright answer. "After the seventh round. In that round, as you remember, Max was uppercutting me in the clinches, but I was learning to get inside and tie him up to prevent it. Then he landed his right, not quite square, but the hardest blow he gave me all night. He looked as if he expected me to drop. I felt the blow all right, but didn't even stagger. I think then Max realized I was his master in this particular fight. I knew I was his master, fought better thereafter, and took more chances."

It was at the end of the seventh round, we noted, that Baer, walking to his corner, shrugged his shoulders at Manager Ancil Hoffman as if to express "What's the use?"

Paid Attendance 29,366.

Official announcement was made today that the paid attendance at Long Island City was 29,366, and the gross gate receipts were $205,566.97. Brad-

OMAHA TO START NEXT WEEK IN HANDICAP EVENT

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—William Woodward, chairman of the jocky club and owner of Omaha, announced today at Aqueduct that he expected to start his Kentucky Derby winner in the Brooklyn handicap on Saturday, June 22, the date of the American Derby at Washington Park. The decision to start Omaha against older horses was acclaimed as evidence that Mr. Woodward was willing to permit his horse to face the best in the handicap division.

The Brooklyn carries $10,000 in added money as against $25,000 in the American Derby.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., June 14.—Old Uncle Charley Moran, who still is umpiring in the National league, waved home the winning run today in a contest which the Phillies won from the Cubs, 5 to 4. The fatal ruling was made by Moran on the recommendation of Manager Jimmy Wilson of the Phillies, following a debate of several minutes. After Johnny Moore had been permitted to stroll home, the entire Cub cast rushed Moran, but with nothing approximating the success of the earlier one man rush by Wilson.

The deciding guess hinged on whether or not a brain storm throw by Augie Galan went into the Cub dugout. Moran and Wilson said it did. All the Cubs, including those gathering splinters in the dugout at the time, swear that the ball did not go in the dugout. It appeared from the press stand that the ball did not go in the dugout.

Kowalik Comes Through.

The Phillies victory enabled them to split the six game series just concluded. The seventh placers also finished with a one game edge in the season series to date, having won five to the Cubs four.

Fabian Kowalik made his first start for the Cubs and pitched well enough to win. He was embarrassed by a bad throw by English in the third inning and the aforementioned throw of Galan, which precipitated the Moran ruling, was one for the book. Kowalik allowed only eight hits. Curt Davis, recovering from a sore arm which has bothered him all year, went all the way to win his first victory of the year. He yielded nine hits.

The Cubs were glad enough to move out of Philadelphia. It has been quite strenuous here, what with Vice President Grimm screaming murder, threatening trades, barring poker games, and cutting down on pinochle, and P. K. Wrigley and Boots Weber coming to town in a barrage of trade and discipline talk.

Some of the Cubs enjoyed a good personal series. Galan, despite the distressing features of his throw today, made three homers, four doubles and three singles during the series. Chuck Klein made four homers and two singles and Billy Herman made six doubles and seven singles.

Through the ninth inning 1 to 0 defeat of the Dodgers, whom the Cubs meet tomorrow, the Chicagoans kept one foot in the first division. The Cubs and Dodgers are tied for fourth place, and each team is a game above the .500 mark in the standings.

See-Saw Affair.

The Cubs took the lead in the second inning on a single by Lindstrom, a double by Cavarretta, and a single by Kowalik, which produced two runs. Galan followed up with a double which put Kowalik on third, but the rally ended with Herman's fly to Chiozza.

The Phils tied it up after two were out in the third. David led off with a single. Two force plays followed, then successive doubles by J. Moore and Camilli tied the count.

A double by Chiozza at the start of the fourth and two infield outs enabled the Phils to go ahead, 3 to 2.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., June 14.—The 1935 style book for golf tournaments is not quite ready for publication, but at least one fetching innovation—that of unassuming young red headed gents who sidle quietly up to the home hole after having abused par for the first round—is now certain to be included in that interesting pamphlet.

FRANCIS SCHWARTZ

Butch Krueger, the baseball pitcher from Beloit set the vogue last week when he came out of the first afternoon of the National Open with a 71. Today another flame thatched golfer, Francis Schwartz by name, walked off the 18th green of the South Bend Country club without gallery and cheers and calmly posted a 69, two under par for the Chain O'Lakes course. That 69 gave him a three stroke lead on the field of 170 professionals and amateurs here to seek the 36th open championship of the Western Golf association.

Comes In Alone.

Just as Butch Krueger had no couriers to herald his 71 last week, Francis had none today. The sitters' league around the home green had no idea that when the young St. Louis pro missed a putt of a yard there, he had been shooting for a 68. As soon as the card was made public, the bewildered Schwartz was swallowed up in a huddle of photographers and reporters, who soon discovered he is 25 years old, the boss of a driving range outside St. Louis, and a younger brother of Bill Schwartz, one of the most consistent scorers in the Chicago district.

On the eve of the second round of eighteen holes, young Schwartz is 3 up on a trio of pros who had beat him home today with 72s which looked handsome until he ambled in. They include Dick Metz, the handsome Chicagoan from the Lasker course in Chicago; Ted Longworth, tall, young Portland, Ore., pro, and Jock Collins, 45 year old Mansfield, O., veteran.

Cooper Is Third.

In third place tonight was Harry Cooper, the Glen Oak Country club pro from Chicago, who won the marathon playoff for the 1934 title at Peoria last year. He was one of seven in the field who went around in 74 today. The others included Johnny Revolta, the bushy haired Milwaukeean; Arch Hambrick, French Lick's bespectacled star; Harold McSpaden, the winter circuit star from Kansas City; Gene Kunes of Jeffersonville, Pa., a semi-finalist in last year's national P. G. A.; Bill Kaiser of Louisville, Ky., and William Walsh of Kalamazoo, Mich. The 17 year old Walsh was leading the amateurs, with Johnny Fischer, the University of Michigan sharpshooter, next at 77.

Next in line with 75s were Byron Nelson of Ridgewood N. J., and Bob MacDonald of Chicago. The story of why the 23 year old Nelson, a comer for the last two years, is not leading even Schwartz tonight, is somewhere out on the second nine, with particular emphasis on the sixteenth. Nelson was out in 32, 4 under par, but took 43 swipes to finish, including an 8 on the aforesaid sixteenth.

Thomson Takes 76.

This hole, with a veritable hurricane deck for a tee, set out in one of the club's lakes, was the magnet for a steady barrage of winds which hammered at the course most of the day. Nelson drove two balls into the water in trying to make the carry of 200 yards or more, while Johnny Banks, Notre Dame captain, went away with a 13. Mr. Schwartz, by the way, attended to this problem with a birdie three.

Among those who carded were the long hitting Jimmy Thomson, runner-up in the national open; Tommy Armour of Medinah, holder of the tournament scoring record, and Jim Noonan of Lansing airport, Chicago. Armour was away in 42, but soon remedied that with a 34 coming home, a back nine second only to that of Schwartz. Walter Hagen, who has won the western five times, is still the show's white

BY FRENCH LANE.

What promises to be a breathless minute and five seconds will prove a lot of things to some twenty owners of race horses at Washington Park this afternoon.

Hopes of all of them will rise and fall rapidly during this short period of time, and a great many of these hopes will be blasted entirely before the watches tick off the last precious seconds.

This will happen during the running of the Juvenile stakes, which for a time at least will settle the 2 year old supremacy in the west. It will also prove to the owners of the 27 colts and fillies named for the race whether they have bought wisely and whether or not they have again put a lot of confidence in a horse that is no account. These owners are going to find out if they have been good judges of horses.

Large Field Expected.

The field promises to be the largest that has ever gone to the post at Washington Park. If all start the race will have a gross value of $9,440. It is hardly likely all of them will accept, yet a field of 20 would be the largest ever to run at Washington Park.

Overnight the Joseph E. Widener entry of Dnieper and Seven Pines ruled as the favorite at the rather good odds of 4 to 1. The Dixiana stable entry of Erin Torch and Thatagal was held as the second choice at 5 to 1, with the fleet Black Highbrow being quoted at not more than 6 to 1.

The Milky Way farm entry of Forever Yours and Sir Gawaine was held at 8 to 1. The dark horse entry in the race was that of Toro Prodrome and Valiant Fox which will represent the Northway stable of California.

Stable Has Long Shots.

This Northway outfit has become famous for the longshots it has produced in Chicago's headline stake events. Plucky Play started doing these sort of tricks some years back. Gallant Sir came along and carried on from where he left off.

The 2 year old stake headlines the finest racing program presented so far this year in the west. In the Prospect purse at a mile and seventy yards will come the long awaited clash between the two great fillies, Black Helen from Col. Edward R. Bradley's stable and Nellie Flag, owned by Warren Wright of Chicago. Also in the race are Tearout, winner of the Latonia Derby, Whiskolo, the greatest "second" horse of the year, and Bloodroot, the speedy stable companion of Black Helen.

Bradley to Attend.

Col. Bradley is due in from the east this morning to see his star fillies perform in the race and will remain over at Washington Park until after they run in the American Derby one week from today.

Aside from all this the Des Plaines handicap brings together an overnight handicap field that is the best that could be mustered in the west. It includes Sweeping Light, Watch Him, Evergold, Silent Shot, and others.

SIMMONS HITS HOMER WITH 3 ON TO TIE SCORE

Dykes, Hayes Back; Sewell Out.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox resorted to heroics again yesterday but all it brought them was a batch of extra labor. Apparently whipped to a frazzle, they turned loose a broadside of hits, one of them Al Simmons' eighth home run with the bases filled, and scored six times to tie up the battle at 11 to 11 in the eighth. Then Whitlaw Wyatt, the usually gallant rescuer, was sent forth, but he was crushed in the eleventh and Washington's Senators captured the final game of the series, 16 to 11.

The enemy's finishing pitcher, Ed Linke of Chicago, was responsible not alone for keeping the Sox in leash during the three concluding innings, but also for the blast that shattered Wyatt's hopes. With two on the bases in the eleventh, the pudgy Linke made doubly good on his own relief job by sending a near record homer over the left field wall. That would have been enough, but for good measure the Senators drove home two more runs.

Pound Six Pitchers.

The cause of the Sox being so far in arrears that a six run splurge in the eighth was needed to bring on a tie was the persistency with which Washington pounded three south side pitchers. They hit Carl [Lefty] Fischer so hard he was gone in less than two innings. Johnny Salveson then made his American league debut, but before he could end the second inning seven Senators had scored. Salveson was punished some more after that, but he at least helped a bit by hitting a homer. Then Les Tietje in a two inning workout yielded one run in the eighth. After that Wyatt was in action.

When the affair appeared hopeless in the eighth, Manager Jim Dykes and Jack Hayes, the two cripples, decided to get in for a couple of innings of work. For ailing gentlemen they did pretty well. It was a homer by Hayes that inaugurated the disturbance in the eighth when Jack Russell finally had to quit after a lucky afternoon. And Dykes delivered a single that finished Russell in favor of Belve Bean. The latter walked a couple, whereupon Simmons rounded out the inning's total of six by producing his homer with three on.

Shortly after Dykes and Hayes returned to action, Luke Sewell went on the hospital list. In endeavoring to hurry to first base on an infield grounder in the ninth he pulled a muscle in his left thigh. The charley horse will keep him on the sidelines for at least ten days. To be protected against an emergency the Sox probably will sign Frank Grube, who was a member of the south side team several seasons ago. He recently was released by the Browns.

Breaks Against Sox.

The Sox were a bit unfortunate in the first inning or they would have started off with some runs. With one out Hopkins singled to left and moved to third on Haas' double to left center. The bases were loaded on a pass to Bonura. Simmons lined one a mile a minute toward third and it looked good enough to produce a couple of runs until Travis speared it. He threw to second to double Haas. Then the Senators proceeded to their big job of the afternoon.

The first of the incidents which led to the seven Washington runs in the second was a single to center by Travis. Powell walked and Schulte followed with a single on which Travis scored. Bolton walked, filling the bases and ending Fischer's tenure. The first thing that happened to Rescuer Salveson was Kuhel's double

CAMPBELL RAPS HOME RUN; REDS DEFEAT GIANTS

New York, June 14.—(AP)—Leon Chagnon, making his first appearance as a starting pitcher in nearly two years, ran into tough luck today when the only two hits he gave produced a 2 to 0 victory for the Reds over the Giants.

The hits which decided the pitching battle between Chagnon and Paul Derringer came in the second inning. Jim Bottomley, back in the Cincinnati lineup after three week's absence, blasted a line single toward first which nearly injured Bill Terry when the Giant manager stabbed at it with his bare hand. Then Campbell, rookie catcher, hammered one into the lower right field stand for a home run.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 14.—(AP)—Bill Swift today pitched and batted the Pirates to a 1 to 0 victory over the Dodgers in the series final.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES—CLOUDY AND COOLER

Cleveland, O., June 14.—(AP)—Monte Pearson's wildness cost the Cleveland Indians the final game of their series with Philadelphia today, the Athletics winning, 5 to 4.

Philadelphia scored three runs in the third inning after Johnson and Foxx walked, McNair scoring them with a single after Foxx and Higgins worked a double steal. Knickerbocker fumbled Mahaffey's grounder, filling the bases, and a moment later Pearson walked in the third run of the inning.

ENGLISH GIRL GIVES MRS. MOODY 6-0, 6-4 BEATING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, England, June 14.—The march of Helen Wills Moody toward another world's tennis championship was halted today when she was eliminated from the Kent women's tennis tournament by Katherine Stammers, ranking No. 3 player in England. The scores were 6-0, 6-4.

Sox to Open Five Game Series with Yankees Today

The pacemaking New York Yankees will be on hand today for the first of a five game series and the White Sox intend to see what can be done about getting themselves back into first place. John Whitehead, who hasn't faced the New Yorkers thus far, will pitch against them this afternoon. Vito Tamulis, a leftie, probably will start for the Yanks.

Starting this afternoon all Saturday games at Comiskey park will get under way at 3 o'clock instead of at 2 as has been the custom this season.

The women guests turned out in such numbers that a couple of extra gates had to be opened to take care of the rush. There were about 15,000 of them present. The paid attendance numbered about 4,000.

When Jack Hayes appeared in the eighth inning yesterday it was his first game since May 20, when he suffered a chipped bone in his left thumb. Dykes' return marked the end of a vacation that started June 4 when he sprained an ankle.

Phils Defeat Cubs, 5-4, with Umpire's Aid

knocked his second double and stopped at third on Hack's infield single. Hartnett doubled to the left field barrier, Herman scoring the tying run and Hack stopping at third. The runners held their bases while Ryan threw out Lindstrom. Then Klein fanned.

After Allen had fanned to start the home fifth, Watkins came through with his second single and stopped at second on J. Moore's third hit. Camilli walked after a three and two count, filling the bases. Wilson sent a long fly to Galan, Watkins scoring after the catch. Galan threw toward third, which was uncovered, and the ball bounced around, apparently at the brink of the Cub dugout, J. Moore taking third and Camilli second.

The Phillies claimed the ball had gone into the dugout after J. Moore and Camilli had reached their bases and that Johnny and Dolph therefore were entitled to another base. Umpire Moran concurred in this view. He waved Moore home and put Camilli on third, which decision caused the entire Cub team to swarm around Moran. The outcome of the debate was the banishment of Coach Roy Johnson. When the game was resumed Herman threw out Chiozza.

Galan walked at the start of the seventh, took second on a wild pitch, third on an infield out and scored on Hack's third hit, a single to center. Hartnett fanned and Lindstrom grounded out to Haslin.

to right, Powell and Schulte scoring. Russell singled to center to send Bolton and Kuhel home. Bluege walked, after which Salveson committed a balk. This put Russell in position to score the sixth run on Stone's roller to Bonura. Bluege scored on Myer's long fly to Radcliff.

Simmons Robbed Again.

Salveson gave up another run in the third on a single by Powell and double over Simmons' head by Bolton. Then the Sox popped up with a pair of runs in their half of the inning. Radcliff led off with a single to center and Hopkins singled over third. Both scored when Haas lined his second double to left center. Bonura flied to Powell. Then Simmons hit another right on the seam. This one was flagged by Bluege, who tossed to Myer to double Haas off second.

The Senators became unruly again in the fourth, scoring two more to make their lead 10 to 2. Bluege led off with a single, Stone flied to Simmons, and Myer sent a homer into the right field stand. Before the inning was over Powell slammed a double to left but didn't get home. Then the Sox countered with a pair in their half. Appling singled, Piet grounded out and Appling was run down on Sewell's grounder. Salveson followed with a homer into the left field pavilion, Sewell preceding him across the plate. This made the score 10 to 4.

Whittle Down Senators' Lead.

The Sox whittled another run from the Senators' lead in the fifth. After one was out Bonura drove a low liner against the left field wall and the ball bounced half way back to the infield for a double. Simmons was erased on a soft roller to Kuhel, but Appling singled over short, scoring Bonura. Piet fanned to end the inning.

Tietje got by successfully in the seventh, but his luck was not as good in the eighth. Russell hoisted a drive into the wind and it carried almost to the center field flagpole for a triple. Simmons was given another workout almost immediately on Bluege's two base drive to right center on which Russell scored. That completed the damage for this inning.

That Big Eighth.

Here's how things developed in the home eighth: Hayes, in his first time at bat since May 20, slashed his homer into the left field seats. The next two men, Sewell and Tietje, flied out. Radcliff didn't create much excitement when he singled, but there was a stir when Dykes singled. That was the finish of Russell. Bean stepped in and passed Haas, loading the bases. When Bonura walked, forcing Radcliff to score, the rooting was on in full blast. Then there was a baby riot when Simmons, swinging at the first pitch, lined it into the right field stand for the four runs needed to tie the score at 11 apiece. Appling ended the inning with a liner to Powell.

The blowoff in the eleventh started with a pass to Schulte. Redmond beat out a bunt in front of the plate. Kuhel popped foul to Dykes and then Linke tore loose with his homer, which dropped behind the gate in the left center field wall. Wyatt continued to wabble by passing Bluege after which Stone singled. He went to second on a passed ball by Shea. Myer flied to short left, but Travis tripled into the right field corner, scoring Bluege and Stone with the last runs.

PUPILS WORK ON MASHIE SHOT IN TRIBUNE CLASSES

4,400 Attend Lessons on Thirteen Courses.

Four thousand four hundred men and boys last night dropped the curtain on the second great week of THE TRIBUNE'S third annual free golf school given in coöperation with the thirteen member courses of the Daily Fee association.

Last night's crowd brought the attendance figures for the week to 26,700, an increase of 3,500 over last week. The women still continue to come out in greater numbers than the men, although both groups seem equally enthusiastic about the lessons.

The mashie was the club under discussion last night. The classes were drilled in the pitch, full mashie and pitch and run shots. The pupils were allowed to hit balls at most courses and became very proficient before the end of the evening. Professionals on the teaching staf have been urging their pupils to capitalize on their classwork by constant practice.

Resume Classes Tuesday.

Classes will be resumed on all courses next Tuesday for girls and women and on Wednesday for the men and boys. The lesson will be on putting and chip shots and should result in tremendous score cutting for the pupils. The final lessons will be given on Thursday and Friday of next week and will be a review of the entire course.

Following a meeting at Westgate Valley on Monday, the teaching staf of the school will announce the courses at which the form contest and the final medal play contest will be held. Prizes will be distributed at the course holding the form contests.

Evergreen had a crowd of 750 pupils. Al Megeff drilled the class on the mashie and pitch shots. The value of a sound short game was impressed upon the pupils. All were urged to practice nightly. Among the pupils receiving special attention from Megeff is William Hart, 2216 E. 74th street, a one armed golfer. Hart, who had never played prior to the golf school, shot 115 on his first round after receiving instruction in the wood and iron swing.

Frank Walsh Talks to Pupils.

The pupils at Westgate were treated to a talk and demonstration by Frank Walsh. He discussed the open at Oakmont and amused the crowd with many stories of the griefs of the pros at Oakmont. Bobby Cruikshank's remark about the green—the way to putt at Oakmont is to yell "Whoa" before you putt—particularly delighted the class. Tom Walsh drilled the class on the fundamentals of the swing and had them all out hitting mashie shots in the fairway.

Jock Anderson, at Techny Fields, had the entire group hitting short shots. He demonstrated the swing for the different length shots and drove home the value of a short, crisp mashie shot. Anderson reported that one of his golf school pupils, John Smart, 524 Stratford place, was able to cut eight strokes from his game.

Northbrook had its usual enthusiastic crowd out. The pupils received individual instruction from Harold Johnson and all hit mashie and mashieniblic shots under Johnson's watchful eye. According to Johnson, three of his pupils who have attended every class thus far drive down on class nights from Kenosha. The Kenosha golfers are Emil Larson, Ralph Harcaugh, and Arnold England.

Pupils Learn Chip Shots.

Jack Daray entertained a good crowd at Mission Hills with a demonstration of short shots. The class was then allowed to hit balls and under Daray's watchful gaze soon was laying the ball dead to the pin. Clarence Moeller assisted Daray.

Over 1,100 pupils reported to Mel Thompson at Mid City. They witnessed an exhibition of chip shots by Ed Jacobs, Thompson's assistant. Jacobs brought out the value of getting close to the pin for one putt. The class finished with a workout under the floodlights of the illuminated driving range.

Tom Geary presented a prodigy at Indian Head in the form of little John Novak, eight years old, of Berwyn. John, who had never before grasped a golf club, walloped the ball 90 yards down the fairway with a mashie—a prodigious shot for one so young. Geary gave his 325 pupils a demonstration of long and short mashies as well as brassie shots.

WORLD'S FINEST MILERS RUN AT PRINCETON TODAY

Princeton, N. J., June 14.—[Special.]—Jack Lovelock, a New Zealander representing Oxford university, who ran the mile here two years ago in 4:07.6 to shatter all previous marks; Bill Bonthron of Princeton, who registered 4:08.7—well under the previous world record—in finishing second to Lovelock, and Glenn Cunningham, who set the existing record at 4:06.7, will meet in Princeton stadium tomorrow.

HAFEY CHARGES CINCINNATI REDS WITH 'COERCION'

Walnut Creek, Cal., June 14.—(AP)—Facing a future as a baseball outcast and a fine of $1,500, Chick Hafey, Cincinnati Reds outfielder, exploded today with accusations of "coercion" and "queer manipulations" against the National league club.

Hafey aimed his verbal shots directly at Larry McPhail, vice president of the Reds, who he said had unjustly charged him with "jumping the club" in a recent letter.

"On June 3 the club directors held a meeting and asked me to go on the voluntary retired list," Hafey said. "They sent word to me at the hotel where I had been sick in bed for eight days that if I couldn't play ball they couldn't afford to pay my salary.

"I said I was willing to go on the retired list and told them not to worry about the salary—to tear up my contract. Then McPhail telephoned from Chicago and talked to the club's auditor who was in my room. I was told not to give out any word of my retirement to the newspaper, to 'Give the club a break.'

"It's all a puzzle to me. One day I'm told to retire. The next day I'm told to keep quiet about it. I got to figuring maybe they had decided to peddle me off to some other club because I was sick and might not be of any use to them any more. Maybe I'm wrong, but they seem like queer manipulations."

dock received 15 per cent of the gate, after taxes, and Baer 42½ per cent, or a total of $88,805.

The boxing commission also revealed the scoring by rounds of Referee McAvoy and Judges Lynch and Kelly. Including three rounds which were awarded to Braddock because of foul blows by Baer, without regard to their respective boxing merits in those sessions, McAvoy's count was nine rounds for Braddock, four for Baer, and two even. Judge Lynch gave 11 to Braddock and four to Baer. Judge Kelly had seven for Braddock, seven for Baer and one even, but cast his ballot for Jersey Jim.

After the 15 round contest in which the title again changed hands after only a year's possession by Baer, Braddock returned to his hotel followed by the usual group of back slappers. He posed for photographers who took perhaps 50 views. There was no objection from Jim that he was tired or that he wanted to rest.

Then Mrs. Braddock, an attractive little lady of 26 years, mother of three children, arrived from their home in New Jersey. She had not attended the fight. She never does. But she had listened to the radio broadcast and knew the good news.

Max at Victory Dinner.

Baer's hotel headquarters after the bout drew a surprising number of persons, considering his defeat. Max was not present. He was attending an anticipated victory dinner at another hotel, given by the safety razor blade officials sponsoring his current broadcasts. Manager Hoffman played the part of host. He was disappointed, but philosophical.

"I'd like Baer to meet Braddock again," Hoffman said. "Both his hands went bad and he didn't fight his fight. At the same time, we give Jim full credit."

Boxing officials agreed with fans at large that the best man had triumphed.

This belief was shared by the state boxing commission, which spiked any rumors there would be an investigation.

"Investigate?" thundered Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the boxing commission. "Investigate what? There will positively be no investigation because I am certain there was nothing wrong. It may not have been a good fight, but I'm certain it was on the level. After all upsets there are always disgruntled gamblers who cry fake. This fight was won on its merits and everybody, including newspaper men, handlers, seconds, managers, and relatives of both men agree on that. The situation is closed so far as the commission is concerned. We held a private meeting and decided there was no ground for any action. Braddock's crown is clean."

GERMAN NETMEN TAKE 2 TO 0 LEAD OVER AUSTRALIA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Germany, June 14.—Germany's Davis cup team won the opening two singles matches against Australia in the European zone semi-final round series. The winner will meet the United States in the interzone finals.

Gottfried von Cramm, Germany's No. 1 star, triumphed over Jack Crawford, 6-2, 7-5, 6-3, while Heiner Henkel won from Vivian McGrath, 4-6,6-2, 6-0. The doubles match will be played tomorrow and the final two singles contests Sunday.

FLEMING, HEG ARE NAMED N. U. TRACK CAPTAINS

Jack Fleming of Fort Wayne, Ind., and Sunny Heg of Evanston were elected co-captains of Northwestern university's track team yesterday. Fleming competes in the half mile and Heg in the quarter. Both placed second in the Big Ten meet last month.

The two runners together with Phil Doherty, low hurdler, will leave with Coach Frank Hill tonight en route to Berkeley, Cal., for the national intercollegiate track meet June 21 and 22.

GIRLS' TEAMS PLAY.

The Hart Motors will play the Vogel Bloomer Girls in a softball game Monday night at Mills stadium.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

AFTER THE BATTLE.

NEW YORK, June 14.—[Special.]—Fistic consensus is that Jim Braddock, quondam forlorn hope, who was picked merely as a sacrificial offering before Max Baer engaged in a financially more profitable battle in September, gained the championship because he adopted a plan of strategy and adhered to it consistently throughout fifteen rounds.

That strategy was based on the premise that Baer was a one punch winner—that one punch resting in his right glove. Therefore, if Jim could forestall and prevent the landing of that right, the danger of taking the ten count would be eliminated. On the other hand, Baer always has been easy to hit. If Braddock could hit him often enough and stay fifteen rounds he would gain the decision. That's just what happened.

To one interested in tactics it was beautiful to see Jim work out his plan. It was the highlight of a contest otherwise at times slow almost to the point of being uninteresting because no really damaging punches found their mark. Braddock guarded consistently against Baer's right despite the latter's at first confident and later desperate efforts to land it.

One typical example occurred in the eleventh round. Even Max, by this time, must have realized the tide was against him, not strongly but enough to endanger his cherished title. He pushed his left against Jim's beak, kept it there, his right poised for the kill. Braddock sensed it all. So slowly and so accurately it seemed mechanical instead of brain planned, he pushed down Max's extended left, closed into a clinch and Baer's right went wide of its mark over Braddock's shoulder.

Braddock unquestionably gained confidence as the bout continued. He appeared nervous even when outpointing Baer in the early rounds. When the milling became faster and more dangerous in the middle sessions, and especially toward the end, Braddock was confident. Baer, on the other hand, looked concerned. If we remember rightly, he did no clowning after the eighth session.

When Baer failed to win some of the later rounds by wide margins the decision was inevitable.

What Is Psychology?

Psychology, if there is such a thing in fighting, and there is, was all wrong for Baer. It was not a battle in which he would secure tremendous earnings, gauged by what champions expect for their efforts. He had nothing to gain in prestige and everything to lose.

Some way we felt the attitude of the crowd had an effect on Max. It was with the under dog. Part of the spectators actually were hostile to the California Lothario and showed it by boos and jeers. Despite his clowning, his sometimes arrogance, Baer likes acclaim. Absence of acclaim and Braddock's carefully planned strategy played their parts.

How Good Is Braddock?

Just how great a fighter Jim Braddock is is still moot. Expert opinion is divided, with both camps vehement in their declarations. On his record of 83 contests with 21 defeats Jim is not impressive. Many of those defeats, however, were against heavier opponents when Braddock weighed pounds less than now.

In trying to find some basis for Braddock's chances before the bout, The Wake called attention to the fact that the new challenger had been knocked out only once. The blemish on the Braddock escutcheon, placed there by Lou Scozza, not heard of much otherwise, was not an actual, but a technical knockout. The bout was stopped because of Jim's cut eye, which was bleeding profusely.

So we have Champion Jim Braddock, destined to be popular because of his clean living and earnest efforts rather than because he is a dynamic fighter of the Jack Dempsey type or a one punch killer, as Max Baer was supposed to be.

FIVE STRAIGHT FOR WEST MAIN; WINS BY NECK

Bring On Cavalcade or Head Play!

West Main, the Board of Trade flyer, made it five straight at Washington Park yesterday when he carried Charley Peck's white and blue silks to victory in the Stony Island purse.

He did not vary from his customary habits. He let three horses make the pace for him during the first six furlongs of the mile battle. Then Jocky Longden took him to the outside and he charged up in mighty stride to take the lead a sixteenth out and win by a neck in one of the most exciting finishes of the season. Dusky Devil beat Bold Lover out of second place by a nose.

Peck and all his friends from the Board of Trade gathered at the course to bet on West Main. This made the son of Westwick-Mantle the favorite. He paid $4.16 in running the mile in 1:37 3-5. The boys in the wheat pits probably would bet on him now to beat Head Play and Cavalcade.

Mid Victorian, paying off at $3.02, in the Wildwood purse which entered 3 year old fillies at six furlongs. French Princess outran Mid Victorian during the early stages, but submitted to her challenge in the stretch. Mid Victorian went on to win by a length and a quarter. Bandalore, a 60 to 1 shot, got up to be second, and French Princess saved the silver end of the purse.

Old Sandwrack, a stake horse in his day, came to life in the seventh race and under a hustling ride by Jocky Steve Erwin got up to beat the favorite, Our David, by a neck and pay off at $39.90.

1,600 Horses Seek Stables at Arlington

A new high in applications for stable quarters at Arlington Park has been established this year, Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan announced yesterday. The barns at Arlington will accommodate 1,200 horses, but the committee entrusted with the bolting space is confronted with the problem of making selections from 1,600 applications.

"With the certainty that Arlington Park will have more than a sufficient number of high class horses, McLennan said yesterday, "I anticipate no trouble whatsoever in arranging attractive programs from day to day. Prominent stables throughout the east and middle west are anxious to compete for the $400,000 in purses.

The Coldstream Stud and Elmer Dale Shaffer horses, coming to Arlington next week from New York, are expected to be accompanied by the Everglade stable of Frederick A. Burton, Chicago sportsman. The Everglade horses, trained by Sherill Ward, include the 2 year olds, Deliberator and Wise Duke, which are candidates for the Hyde Park Stakes, to be run July 6. Deliberator also is an eligible for the $60,000 Arlington Futurity on Aug. 3.

Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Head Play and other members of her stable, including the Illinois Derby winner, Sun Portland, are expected to ship to Arlington Park following the running of the Detroit Challenge Cup June 29. Head Play was transferred to Detroit following his victory over Discovery, King Saxon and Cavalcade in the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park, and has just beaten Azucar and Stand Pat in a special event at Detroit.

His Arlington engagements are the Stars and Stripes and Arlington Handicaps, $10,000 added attractions.

PACK AND CLARK WIN BOUTS BY KNOCKOUTS

George Van Der Hayden of the Catholic Youth Organization, defeated Hugh Allen in six rounds. In another match at six rounds, young George Dixon defeated Wesley Martin.

Tiny Bittner stopped K. O. Brown in the second round and Scotty McLean knocked out Joe Brown in the second round.

C. Y. O. TRACK CANDIDATES IN TRIALS TODAY

Five hundred entrants in the 1935 C. Y. O. track meet will compete in sectional preliminaries this afternoon and tomorrow at Ogden park and Lake Shore playground, respectively.

Winners of district trials will qualify for the finals, scheduled for Loyola university stadium June 23.

Entries will be accepted up to the time of competition, Jack Elder, C. Y. O. athletic director, announced yesterday.

Finalists Compete Today in Novice Track Meet

Finals in the Central A. A. U. Novice track and field meet, sponsored by the Chicago Park district, will be held today at Lake Shore park. All events for contestants under 15 will be held in the morning, starting at 10 o'clock, and events for those over 15 will be run off in the afternoon. Medals will be presented to winners of first, second, and third places in all events, according to George T. Donoghue, general superintendent of the park district and president of the central association of the A. A. U.

Time, :23 2-5, :47 1-5, 1:13 4-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: L. B. Wilson, $3.90 straight, $2.62 place, $2.42 show; Harold Wiley, $3.62 place, $3.00 show; Busy Storm, $5.30 show. Winner trained by owner. Went to post at 2:15½. At post ½ minute. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving.

L. B. WILSON followed the pace under strong restraint, bore out when racing to the front, and continued to swerve to outside while coming away. HAROLD WILEY, given a hustling ride and on inside throughout, readily submitted to winner, but held on fairly well to last sixteenth. BUSY STORM was under strong riding the final three-eighths and had no mishaps.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Time, :23 1-5, :47, 1:00 2-5, 1:07 1-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Look Out Below, $8.74 straight, $4.20 place, $3.96 show; Lady Charmian, $3.56 place, $2.66 show; Black Bess, $3.60 show. Winner trained by B. A. Jones. Went to post at 2:45. At post 1½ minutes. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same.

LOOK OUT BELOW, well up from the start and lightly restrained for three-eighths, responded with determination when called upon, slightly impeded BLACK BESS when racing to front and, weakening in late stages, won under pressure. LADY CHARMIAN, quick to get going, fell back slightly while swerving on stretch turn, but closed with good speed when straight. BLACK BESS, on inside early, had speed from the start, suffered interference in stretch, and swerved out when faltering in last eighth.

THIRD RACE—Three-fourths mile. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Time, :23 2-5, :47 3-5, 1:14. Two dollar mutuels paid: Orinoco, $5.98 straight, $4.10 place, $3.30 show; Bonnie Princess, $24.10 place, $12.12 show; Lee Laffoon, $8.88 show. Winner trained by B. A. Kindred. Went to post at 3:07. At post 1½ minutes. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; second driving.

ORINOCO, much the best and beginning fast, raced around the leaders on stretch turn and tired after five-eighths, but was not endangered and won without need of punishment. BONNIE PRINCESS, forced back on far turn, came to outside in stretch and closed well. LEE LAFFOON, away fast but unable to keep up, gained gradually in stretch and was going determinedly in late stages.

FOURTH RACE—Seven-eighths mile out of chute. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Time, :22 4-5, :47 1-5, 1:12 2-5, 1:26 2-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Behemoth, $27.90 straight, $9.62 place, $6.48 show; Spicate, $4.28 place, $3.40 show; Good Cheer, $4.04 show. Winner trained by D. Shaw. Went to post at 3:34½. At post 2½ minutes. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same.

BEHEMOTH, fractious at post but away well, raced wide when beginning to improve her position on stretch turn, went over sharply when entering final eighth, and bore out when drawing out in last fifty yards. SPICATE bettered his position with a rush on inside on turn, came on in stretch, and held on well after reaching the lead but could not withstand the winner. GOOD CHEER, a factor from the start, slipped through on inside entering stretch, was cut off by winner when nearing final eighth, but weakened when clear.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Time, :23 1-5, :46 4-5, 1:12, 1:37 3-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: West Main, $4.16 straight, $3.12 place, $2.18 show; Dusky Devil, $3.38 place, $2.20 show; Bold Lover, $2.20 show. Winner trained by A. Pelletieri. Went to post at 4:00. Off at once. Start good. Won driving; place same.

WEST MAIN, probably much the best and forced back when trying to get through on inside soon after reaching the turn, came to outside in stretch, and under mild punishment outgamed DUSKY DEVIL and BOLD LOVER in the drive. DUSKY DEVIL, under steady restraint for three-quarters, stood a long and hard drive courageously. BOLD LOVER followed the early pacemaker under slight reserve, took command quickly approaching final quarter, and although failing to withstand leaders, fought it out stubbornly.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Time, :22 4-5, :46 2-5, 1:12 2-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Mid Victorian, $3.02 straight, $2.64 place, $2.60 show; Bandalore, $19.62 place, $10.80 show; French Princess, $6.72 show. Winner trained by W. J. Hirsch. Went to post at 4:26. At post 1½ minutes. Start good. Won easily; place driving.

MID VICTORIAN, on inside while following the pace, came out entering stretch, quickly drew clear after wearing down FRENCH PRINCESS, and won in hand. BANDALORE, badly outrun early, lost much ground entering stretch and closed with a rush when straight. FRENCH PRINCESS had good speed, was well rated, but weakened in last sixteenth.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Time, :23 :46 2-5, 1:12 2-5, 1:38 3-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Sandwrack, $39.90 straight, $19.80 place, $7.88 show; Our David, $7.54 place, $4.78 show; Manager Bill, $2.88 show. Winner trained by H. K. Barron. Went to post at 4:51. At post ½ minute. Start good. Won driving; place same.

SANDWRACK saved ground early, but went to outside after reaching the turn, improved his position approaching stretch, and wore down OUR DAVID in the drive. Latter raced to the lead with a rush, and though to withstand the winner held on gamely. MANAGER BILL, jostled about the first half mile, lost ground entering stretch and closed resolutely in a good effort.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Time, :24 :47 2-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:38 3-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Brains, $6.68 straight, $3.28 place, $2.60 show; Caw Caw, $3.48 place, $2.62 show; Sea Eagle, $2.92 show. Winner trained by H. G. Bidwell. Went to post at 5:17. At post ½ minute. Start good. Won easily; place driving.

BRAINS took command when ready and, holding on in his best style, held CAW CAW safe to win with something left. Latter, under strong restraint for five-eighths and whose rider was taken by surprise as winner rushed into command, stood pressure gamely the final quarter. SEA EAGLE, far back for three-quarters, came through on inside in stretch and bore out near end.

GERMAN POLICE HIDE DETAILS OF MUNITIONS BLAST

Rescue Workers Continue to Dig for Dead.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 14.—The task of digging into the ruins of the Westfalian Anhalt Munitions works at Reinsdorf and dragging out bodies was halted at 8 o'clock tonight. The wreckage was still hot from yesterday's series of explosions and subsequent fires.

Officials insisted the death toll at the munitions village, 52 miles southwest of Berlin, remained at 52. According to unofficial estimates, the number of dead might reach 1,000. Nazi leaders continue to declare that any estimates higher than the official announcement are "grave exaggerations."

By nightfall 45 of the announced dead had been accounted for by rescue workers.

Claim 300 Slightly Hurt.

Authorities said 79 seriously injured workers were being treated in hospitals at Wittenberg, three miles from Reinsdorf. Three hundred persons, according to official estimates, were slightly injured.

A few details of the catastrophe began to leak out despite the frantic efforts of authorities to keep them a secret. Inhabitants of the neighborhood insist the list of casualties is larger than has been officially admitted.

Officials declared that as a result of an accident in a department for washing waste products a fire broke out leading to the first explosion. This explosion, they said, caused a series of blasts. The first explosion occurred in the nitro department. A gunpowder plant nearby was the second to blow up.

Lips Are Silenced.

Attempts to interview workers and their poorly clad relatives as well as other inhabitants of Reinsdorf and the surrounding territory failed. When questioned about their experiences during the explosions, they replied:

"We know nothing. Those bandages you see are for injuries suffered from broken glass."

Foreign newspaper correspondents who rushed to Wittenberg when news of the explosion filtered through to Berlin were watched more closely than they were in the days of the world war when they were visiting the battlefields. Whenever they attempted to telephone human interest stories, the service was cut off.

Local officials also attempted to compel one group of newspaper correspondents to sign an affidavit that they would not report conditions as they found them in the Reindorf area. This practice was halted following a personal appeal to Heinrich Himmler, commander of the secret police, in Berlin.

"Personally Conducted Tour."

Nazi headquarters in Berlin ordered the restrictions lifted briefly this morning, and newspaper men were allowed to go on a "personally conducted auto tour" in the neighborhood of the explosions. Few details of the disaster were revealed on the trip.

In one of the nearby villages it was discovered a woman had been killed as she was working in her potato patch. A sixty pound piece of cast iron was hurled a half mile and struck her on the head.

While flags were floating at half-staf over Germany in mourning for the victims of the disaster, authorities prepared to take care of surviving relatives. Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler donated $40,000 of his personal funds to the relief fund.

TWO SOUTH BEND YOUTHS KILLED AS PLANE FALLS

South Bend, Ind., June 14.—[Special.]—Clifford Ort, 17, student pilot and a companion, Carol Hamilton, 18, both of South Bend, were killed in an airplane crash today a few minutes after taking off from Mishawaka airport east of here.

The ship in which the two youths crashed was a five year old biplane recently purchased by Ort. It fell in a wheat field. Witnesses said the plane banked sharply and stalled as it reached an altitude of two hundred feet. The necks of both youths were broken.

Coroner Arthur L. Knapp will conduct an inquest Saturday. Frank E. Still, department of commerce inspector, has been notified of the crash. Ort had soloed twelve days ago after taking flying lessons for a year.

Chinese Flyer Killed.

Monroe, Mich., June 14.—[Special.]—Leong Sears Chee, Chinese restaurant owner, was killed today in a crash of his plane near here, ending his long cherished ambition to fly in the Chinese air corps. He was practicing for his pilot's license when his ship crashed. Only July 1 he was to have sailed to China with his parents to become an army flyer.

ROWBOAT TRIP KEEPS JOHN UP PAST BEDTIME

Johny was taken before Capt. John Anderson to explain himself, and he was not at a loss for an explanation.

"Last night [Thursday] I was over by the Columbia Yacht club at the foot of Randolph street," he recited, "when a man came up, showed me the rowboat and asked me to row it out here for him. He said he'd meet me here in half an hour, but he didn't come, and I went to sleep."

Capt. Anderson called Johnny's father, who had a different theory.

"His mother told him not to stay out after 10 o'clock Thursday night," said the elder Mahoney. "I guess he was afraid to come home when he found out he was late."

W. L. HAHN GETS 1 TO 10 YEARS FOR RECEIVER THEFT

Walter L. Hahn, 41 years old, former receiver for the Bankers' State Bank building, 47th street and South Park way, was sentenced to one to ten years in the penitentiary yesterday by Judge Michael Feinberg in the Criminal court for larceny of $6,631.

Motions for a new trial and arrest of judgment were overuled, but Hahn was granted a 30 day stay of mittimus and 60 days in which to file a bill of exceptions.

Hahn was appointed received of the building by Circuit Judge Harry M. Fisher in November, 1932. In December, 1934, when Circuit Judge George Fred Rush ordered a report on assets and liabilities, Hahn had disappeared. The shortage was discovered and Hahn was arrested later in San Antonio, Tex.

Ex-CongressmanHoggDies; Former Law School Dean

Point Pleasant, W. Va., June 14.—(AP)—Charles Edgar Hogg, 83, former dean of the law school at West Virginia university, and former United States representative, died at his home tonight.

News of the Radio Stations

When Ted Fio-Rito returns tonight to the Edgewater Beach hotel for a summer's engagement he will be back at the scene of his first success as an orchestra leader. It was at the north side hotel that Ted, then a youth of 23, made his first real bid for fame with a ten piece orchestra, later doubled in size as the Fio-Rito brand of music caught on. More than one successful maestro of today was numbered among the personnel of that early group.

The contract bringing the Fio-Rito organization back to the Edgewater Beach for the summer is reported to call for $5,200 a week. In addition to being a sustaining feature on a CBS network three times a week during the north side engagement, Fio-Rito will pinch hit for Wayne King on the latter's sponsored broadcasts while King vacations in Hollywood. These programs will be picked up from the hotel. Fio-Rito did his first pinch hitting for the Aragon maestro last Sunday.

Plans are fairly definite, it is said, for Fio-Rito to replace Guy Lombardo on the aspirin program in the fall. This show is going off the air in July for a summer's interlude, but will return in the fall, according to plans, with two broadcasts a week instead of one.

The task of spinning the cable supporting spans of the San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge will be described over an NBC network at 1:30 today. The start of the cable spinning operation will be recounted by four announcers stationed at various points. The cable work is expected to require five months to complete.

Loretta Young, film star, will appear in "The Patsy" on the "Radio Theater" program at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow. . . . CBS veterans are forming a Five Year club, consisting of all microphone performers, including announcers, who have been on the network for five years or more. At least twenty-five in the Columbia organization are eligible for membership, among them Ted Husing, David Ross, Freddie Rich, Raymond Paige, and Harry Von Zell. Ben Bernie, Abe Lyman, and Guy Lombardo are eligible for associate memberships for meritorious service on many Columbia programs.

From a note from Fred Allen: "New York milk consumers protest against exorbitant prices. They claim milk hasn't been so high since the cow jumped over the moon." . . . These are the songs the country will be whistling, humming, and singing during the next few months, if Frankie Masters' prediction is correct: "I Gotta Note," "Dodging a Divorcée," "Yip Neddy," and "The Girl with the Dreamy Eyes." The songs, of English origin, arrived on the Normandie.

Lum and Abner, W-G-N's rural comedians, who are also culinary experts of a sort, have concocted a new dish, consisting of a mixture of pineapple and shredded coconut and which, because of its Hawaiian ingredients, they have named after themselves, "Luab." . . . Alabama Pitts, former Sing Sing athlete, will be interviewed on Thorton Fisher's sports review at 6:45 tonight over WMAQ.

W. B. Brown Funeral Today in California

Funeral services for Walter B. Brown, former general manager of the City News Bureau of Chicago, will be held today at 3 p. m. in Monrovia, Cal., where he died Thursday. Mr. Brown retired as general manager of the news bureau in 1931, because of ill health, and went to the southwest seeking a cure. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Christine Conley Brown, and three daughters, all of whom live in the Chicago area.

RAZOR BLADE USED BY DOCTOR IN VAIN TRY TO SAVE CHILD

Sioux Falls, S. D., June 14.—An emergency operation, performed with a razor blade contained in a cigar clipper failed to save the life of Patricia Ann Fleege, 2, who died in a hospital here today.

Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Fleege, was slowly choking to death, when a physician reached her. With the only instrument available, the doctor made two incisions in the child's windpipe, temporarily cheating death. Another operation was performed at a hospital, but pneumonia developed.

Nothing was found in the child's throat, but physicians believe she may have choked on a crust of bread.

SLAYER OF WIFE AND PRIEST GETS TERM IN PRISON

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—Joseph L. Steinmetz, 22, former university student who killed his 17 year old bride, Ruth, and the Rev. Joseph J. Leonard in a room in the Knights of Columbus hotel on Nov. 26, last, and was convicted on May 17 of manslaughter in the first degree, was sentenced by Judge Nott in the Court of General Sessions today to a term of from eight to sixteen years in prison.

The maximum sentence which might have been imposed is from fifteen to thirty years, but the court took into consideration the plea for mercy which the jury attached to its verdict after long and serious deliberation.

Assistant District Attorney Kaminsky announced in court that the indictment still standing against Steinmez, charging him with the murder of Father Leonard, will probably be dismissed.

I. L. Steinberg, 68, Is Dead; Spring Valley Merchant

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—An advance in the second grade and speculative rail bonds was the feature of the bond market today, but even in this group the market was more selective. Gilt edged issues were firm. Dealings in treasury issues were light, but a firm tone was maintained.

The main body of active issues moved in a narrow trading range during the forenoon, but a brisk rally in low priced rail loans got under way at the beginning of the final hour, when standing bids had to be revised upward to fill the demand, and the entire list was pulled upward in the wake of the fast moving carriers.

Trading Is More Active.

Transfers aggregated $11,197,000, par value, compared with $10,244,000 the day before.

Southern Pacific bonds were among those favored today, particularly the collateral 4s, which reached a new high for the year. The buying was coincident with an announcement that the company has reduced its bank loans by $5,000,000, leaving a total of $16,500,000 still to be paid.

Gains of more than a point were recorded in some of the obligations of Missouri Pacific, Katy, Nickel Plate, Lehigh Valley, Illinois Central, Erie, and Baltimore and Ohio. Other firm spots included bonds of the Atlantic Coast Line, Rock Island, Hocking Valley, New York Central, Delaware and Hudson, and Southern railways.

Other Groups Are Firmer.

Other sections of the list also provided outstanding performers. Several issues of International Paper bonds advanced 1¼ to around 2½ points, and Postal Telegraph 5s were more than a point higher. Among active issues, ending fractions to a point or more higher, were Penn-Dixie 6s, American Water Works 6s, Laclede Gas 5½s, North American Edison 5½s, and Tennessee Electric 6s.

United States Hoffman Machinery.

Investors' Guide: I would like to have you send me a report on United States Hoffman Machinery.—B. E. E.

Answer: United States Hoffman Machinery corporation manufactures garment pressing machinery, for which it holds numerous patents. Its business comes from clothing manufacturers, hotels, pressing and tailoring shops.

Most of its output is sold on the instalment plan. When credit conditions tightened in 1931 and 1932, not only did sales decrease, but numerous purchasers defaulted on their contracts. Loosening of credit conditions, some improvement in business and operating economies, however, have once more placed the company on a profitable basis.

Net income in the first quarter of 1935 was $21,000, or 10 cents a share. Net income in 1934 was $44,000, or 21 cents a share, against losses of $299,000 for 1933, $1,089,000 for 1932, $618,000 for 1931 and $161,000 for 1930.

Current assets on March 31, 1935, including $209,000 cash and $2,265,000 instalment accounts receivable, were $3,893,000 and current liabilities, including $300,000 notes payable to the Reconstruction Finance corporation, were $1,021,000. Capitalization consists of 215,203 shares of $5 par capital stock on which nothing has been paid since Sept. 1, 1930.

The company has just emerged into profitable operations after a long period of heavy losses. Current position reveals the effects of these deficits. Until such time as the company can show sustained earning power, sufficient to improve current position, the stock appears to be just a speculation.

Des Moines Railway Company.

Investors' Guide: Please give me information on Des Moines City Railway company bonds as soon as possible.—N. E. E.

Answer: Des Moines Railway company operates the street railway system in Des Moines, Ia. It acquired the assets of Des Moines City Railway company at public auction in 1929, subject to the predecessor's general and refunding 5s, due Jan. 1, 1936.

Earnings have been far below interest requirements for years. In 1934 operating revenues were $1,232,000 and amount available for interest was $97,000. Bond interest and other interest run about $500,000 a year.

In 1933 operating revenues were $1,184,000 and amount available for interest was $41,000, while in 1932 net available for interest was $155,000.

On Dec. 31, 1934, current assets totaled $294,000 and current liabilities were $2,721,000. Funded debt was $4,821,000.

It hardly seems likely that the corporation will be able to meet the heavy bond maturity by the beginning of next year. The bonds are quite speculative.

STOCKS CLIMB AS INVESTMENT DEMAND GROWS

Many Issues Mount 1 to 3 Points.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 14.—The bulls continued to dominate stock market activities today as persistent investment buying of the most promising industrial, railroad, and utility stocks attracted a speculative following and prices in nearly all sections showed gains running from 1 to 3 points. Seventy-four new highs for the year were established.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE index of fifty stocks scored its seventh consecutive advance. This is the longest series of successive rises since the sharp upswing from Aug. 3 to Aug. 10, 1932, when in seven sessions the index advanced from 45.44 to 60.61. During the last seven trading days the index has moved up from 91.16 to 96.30. Prior to the current string of rises, there was a one-day reaction on June 6 of about a quarter point, and this was preceded by four consecutive rises.

Sales Exceed Million Shares.

Transactions for the session amounted to 1,272,600 shares. Much of the trading in the early part of the session was attributed to evening up by professionals, but the profit-taking which appeared in the pivotal issues was absorbed well and the price levels were steadily lifted. Developments in the nation's capital continued to hold the interest of the speculative fraternity but little apprehension was shown over prospective legislation.

Conspicuous in the upturn were the railroad shares. Great Northern rose more than a point to a new high for the year. At one time it sold above 20. Union Pacific scored a gain of more than 2 points and Atchison and Louisville Nashville finished more than a point higher.

The buoyancy of the rail shares was attributed in part to the removal of the threat of coal strike, better crop reports, and the increase in car loadings. The numerous reorganization parleys had little or no affect, it was said, except in the case of the Chicago and North Western. Both classes of the stock of this road sagged to the lowest levels of the year.

Utility Group Mixed.

Prices of public utility shares were mixed. The stocks of American Power and Light company sagged heavily as the directors voted to omit the dividend because of the passage of the holding company bill. American Telephone and Pacific Telephone on the other hand rose more than a point while most of the losses in other issues were confined to fractions.

High grade investment issues continued in favor with Westinghouse Electric a particularly bright spot as it soared more than 2 points on a large volume to a new high. American Can after reaching a new high level fell back to its previous closing price. du Pont equalized its high mark with a gain of 1½ points and Eastman Kodak gained a fraction.

Chrysler again led the motor division, at one time in the session being above its previous high. General Motors gained a major fraction. Farm implement recovered further with J. I. Case preferred rising 3 points.

The preferred stock of Otis Elevator hit a new high with a gain of 5½ points and Pure Oil followed by gaining over 4 points.

BANK OF FRANCE ISSUES MONEY ON TREASURY BILLS

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, June 14.—Reports that part of the 4,355,000,000 franc increase in the discount portfolio of the Bank of France during the last month represents treasury bills which various banks discounted at the treasury's behest, were confirmed today.

Thus, indirectly, the French treasury is meeting its imperative day-to-day needs and particularly its settlement day requirements by getting money from France's bank of issue. This fact, which had been suspected but could not previously be confirmed, has aroused conflicting reactions in financial circles. Some observers contend it is an inflationary move because it results in the Bank of France issuing currency against treasury bills instead of gold.

Government apologists say there is no reason to take the attitude that French treasury bills are not good paper for any bank to rediscount. All observers agree that if the movement continues long enough it will become highly dangerous. It was said the government must set its house in order quickly.

RESERVE BANKS' OFFICERS GIVEN LOAN EXTENSION

Washington, D. C., June 14.—(AP)—The time in which loans by federal reserve member banks to their executive officers may be renewed or extended was moved up three years today with the signing of a resolution by President Roosevelt.

The legislation was hurried through congress and rushed to the White House to meet a deadline of June 16, after which bank officials who had obtained such loans prior to June 16, 1933, and had not paid them back would have been liable to penalty.

Canada's May Newsprint Output Sets New Record

MONTREAL, Que., June 14.—[Special.]—Canadian newsprint production in May amounted to 242,693 tons, a new high record. April output was 222,244 tons. Production in the United States amounted to 84,323 tons, the highest since last May when it totaled to 89,726 tons.

Cheap Money Puts Investor in the Middle

BY HOWARD WOOD.

With money rates going down and bankruptcy laws being eased to aid the debtors the poor bondholder is being ground between the upper and the nether millstones.

No matter what grade of bonds he holds the investor is taking a licking. If he has government bonds, municipals, or high grade corporation issues he's suffering a big cut in income through the calling of such bonds and their replacement with bonds of lower interest rates. If he has weak bonds that are either in default or headed in that direction along comes a reorganization plan under which the bondholder is asked to waive his rights in order to facilitate a speedy readjustment.

The scaling down of interest rates on high grade issues has been made possible by the New Deal "easy money" manipulations. It began with the calling of higher interest rate government bonds. The treasury created this situation, corporate managements have been quick to take advantage of it.

Amendments to the bankruptcy laws making it possible for owners of corporations that cannot pay their debts to scale down their debts and retain part of their equity have been described as an aid to the bondholder as well as the debtor, but in many cases they have merely made scraps of paper out of mortgages which were supposed to protect the fellow who lent the money and who was content with a fixed low rate of return because he thought he enjoyed a preferred position.

Thus, the bondholder has been suffering simultaneously the disadvantages of both inflation and deflation. Dropping interest rates have been the direct result of the administration's inflation program and the amendments to the bankruptcy laws have been the foundation of the administration's deflation program.

The New Dealers have been going in two directions at once and the bondholder has suffered from both.

Treasury Seems to Fear New Gold Clause Bond Tests.

The wholesale calling by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau of practically all important United States government bonds bearing the promise to pay in gold at the old parity is believed to be partly due to the New Dealers' desire to get in as many as possible of the "gold clause" bonds before there is a further test before the Supreme court of the government's liability on these bonds.

The Supreme court in its famous "gold clause" decision held that the government actually owed a premium on these bonds, but that holders must show actual loss. In the cases then before the court the plaintiffs failed to show that they had sustained such a loss.

Today, however, a group of New Yorkers, represented by Robert Jackson, former Democratic national committeeman, is expected to make a move intended to show that bondholders have been robbed by the debasement of the dollar.

A $1,000 government gold bond maturing today is to be presented to the treasury with a demand that it be accepted in payment of $1,690 of income taxes also due today. On this bond the treasury stipulates that it shall be receivable in payment of taxes. When the bond was sold the dollar was worth 25.8 grains of gold. Since debasement it is worth only 15 7-21 grains. Thus $1,000 in paper money at the time of the original sale of the bond should be worth $1,690 now.

The Supreme court has already held that congress had no power to change the terms of government bonds, but it also held that the holder must demonstrate loss. The purpose of today's test is to show that loss has actually been sustained.

Taxpayers May Soon Know Some of Idle They Support.

The recent reports from Washington that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau will employ some of the idle on relief rolls in checking on the income tax returns filed by taxpayers in the small income groups presents interesting possibilities. The fellow that the taxpayer is supporting on relief rolls will come around to bite the hand that is feeding him.

It would be hard to imagine a more effective way of demonstrating to the taxpayer the manner in which his hard earned dollars are wasted. He will have the opportunity of becoming personally acquainted with the individual whose boondoggling he is supporting.

NORTH WESTERN WILL SEEK BOND ACCORD TUESDAY

Provides Deferment of Interest.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—Representatives of about twenty insurance companies and savings banks will meet officials of the Chicago and North Western railway on Tuesday in an endeavor to reconcile their views on a plan of the company for a deferment of interest. The plan has been criticised because it requires no sacrifices by stockholders.

Fred W. Sargent, president of North Western, said that all bonds of the company would be subject to a five year interest deferment cut in varying ratios, under the plan, but that the net result would be to cut the total interest burden by about one-half.

Directors Meet June 27.

Sargent explained that, pending word from the bondholders, the company's directors did not discuss the plan at their meeting today but that they would meet on June 27 in the hope that an agreement would be reached by that time.

Pointing out that the company's $72,335,000 of twenty year 4½ per cent debentures of 1949 were unsecured, Sargent said that the holders would not better their position if they sought litigation to force the payment of interest on these securities. The interest due May 1 on the debentures was defaulted and the period of grace on the payment expires on July 1.

The debentures were offered to common and preferred stockholders in 1929. About one-half remained unsold under this offer and were subsequently marketed by Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

View on Litigation.

"About the only result from litigation by the debenture holders," said Sargent, would be to force action by the senior security holders. This in turn might result in a filing under section 77B of the bankruptcy law."

Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, conferred with T. M. Schumacher, chairman of the Western Pacific railway, today on the reorganization of that company. Jones has said that the reorganization of this company should prove a simple operation. No comment was made at the Western Pacific office on the outcome of the conference.

FRISCO WILL SUE TO REGAIN STOCK PURCHASE LOSS

St. Louis, Mo., June 14.—(AP)—An order directing John G. Lonsdale, cotrustee of the St. Louis-San Francisco railroad, to file suits against two New York banking firms; E. N. Brown, chairman of the Frisco board, and others to recover losses suffered by the road in stock purchases, was issued today by Federal Judge Charles B. Faris.

The order, issued on Lonsdale's application, authorized suits against Speyer & Co. and J. and W. Seligman & Co., the Frisco's New York bankers. In his application for leave to file, Lonsdale said that, after a thorough investigation his attorneys had advised him that, in their opinion, there had been a breach of fiduciary obligations by the prospective defendants.

The Frisco lost about $11,000,000 in purchases of stocks of other railroads through transactions which were handled by Speyer & Co. at Brown's request, with Seligman & Co. participating in one of two deals. The transactions were stock of the Rock Island and Gulf, Mobile and Northern railroads.

CHICAGO LIVING COSTS UP 3.7 PCT. IN FOUR MONTHS

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—Living costs in Chicago increased 3.7 per cent during the four months between Nov. 15 and March 15, Secretary Perkins reported today. This is based on the cost of goods bought by wage earners and lower salaried workers, as calculated by the bureau of labor statistics.

The increased costs of 1.7 per cent in New York City were attributed largely to the increased prices of food, which rose 4.2 per cent on the average, but the price of clothing went up 1.4 per cent, and of furniture and furnishings, 1.5 per cent.

Cragin to Pay Another 5 Per Cent of Deposits

Edward J. Barrett, state auditor, yesterday authorized payment of a 5 per cent, or $23,177, to the depositors of the Cragin State Bank of Chicago. This is the second payment since the bank closed, bringing the total to 15 per cent.

Milwaukee Ry. Offers Control for Interest Cut

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—The management of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad has agreed to surrender control of the line to the bondholders in return for a reduction in its interest burden, according to a communication sent today by the company to insurance companies and savings banks. This capitulation by the company followed the intercession of Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Under the offer, the new common stock to be issued would be placed in an investment trust controled by the present boldholders. The new preferred stock to be issued would have voting power, but, under the plan, it would be distributed widely, so that its influence would not be equal to that of the common stock voting trust. The trustees would administer a sinking fund and be empowered to conserve the company's funds in the interest of the bondholders.

Company Makes Proposals.

The company's proposals, as modified at the insistence of Jones and the twenty interested insurance companies and saving banks, are substantially as follows:

The $138,000,000 of general mortgage bonds, now bearing interest at 3½ to 4¾ per cent, would have one-third of their interest placed on a contingent basis for a period of years. The insurance companies want this to be five years but Jones wants it to be ten.

The $106,395,000 of 5 per cent series A mortgage bonds would become 5 per cent income bonds. The holders of the general mortgage and series A bonds, which, except for underlying bonds, would be the only ones to survive the reorganization, would control the company as long as interest was in arrears.

The present $182,873,000 of convertible adjustment 5 per cent bonds would be converted into new 5 per cent voting $25 par preferred stock participating equally in dividends with common stock after common dividends reached 5 per cent in any one year.

Preferred Stock Plan.

Each present $100 5 per cent, voting noncumulative preferred share would receive one new $25 par preferred share. One new $25 par common share would be exchanged for every three present shares of nopar stock.

Whether $8,056,000 of Chicago, Terre Haute and Southeastern Railway first and refunding 5 per cent bonds would be left undisturbed or placed on an income basis is still a matter under discussion. The Chicago, Milwaukee and Gary first mortgage 5 per cent bonds would be changed into income bonds.

There is also a difference of opinion as to how the proposed sinking fund would be used. The question at issue is whether the fund would be administered on fixed rules or whether the voting trustees be given some latitude in its supervision.

Lamont, Morgan Partner, Making Trip to Europe

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—Thomas W. Lamont, a partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., sailed for Europe tonight. He said he did not expect to transact any business while abroad. He plans to spend about two weeks in England and about the same time on the continent, partly in Paris and partly in or near St. Moritz, Switzerland. He will return about Aug. 1.

ROOSEVELT HAS SECRET PARLEY ON BANK BILL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 14.—Important and radical changes in the administration banking bill were believed to be under consideration following a mysterious White House conference called by President Roosevelt today.

The President summoned Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Solicitor General Stanley Reed, and Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the treasury, to the White House shortly before noon. All of them were tight lipped when the meeting broke up.

President Roosevelt declared flatly that he would not tell reporters, whom he met at his semi-weekly press conference, what the discussion was about. He did, however, state flatly that the conference did not concern taxes or money, as was rumored tonight.

Hint Tighter Reserve Control.

Banking control by the New Deal, as embodied in title II. of the pending administration banking bill, is believed to have been the subject of the conference. Important changes, tightening the government's hold on the federal reserve system, are understood to be under study.

A sweeping revision of the pending bill is reported to be contemplated. The first hint that the administration was not entirely satisfied with its own bill came some weeks ago when Secretary Morgenthau stated before a senate banking committee that he favored government ownership of the federal reserve banks. President Roosevelt promptly indorsed his stand.

Since this pronouncement by the President and his secretary of the treasury, work has been going on in the treasury overhauling the banking bill. Aside from the legal questions which are being worked on by the treasury lawyers, there is the political question of whether the administration should attempt a revision of its own bill half way through the legislative process.

Bill Held Up in Committee.

The banking bill is now stymied in the subcommittee of the senate banking and currency committee, which is headed by Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], a bitter opponent of the extension of New Deal banking control. Since Glass seems to be determined to stall the present bill to death, the administration may decide to give up hope for it and write in a new and more drastic plan conforming to the Morgenthau line of thought.

Glass' delay on the banking bill is slowly forcing its dismemberment. The provision stating that the temporary deposit insurance fund is to become permanent will be lifted out of the bill and rushed through as a separate resolution to prevent the original "permanent" plan from going into effect automatically on July 1.

Rules for Transition Issued.

Meanwhile, the federal reserve board tonight prescribed regulations for the transition from the temporary deposit insurance plan to the permanent scheme originally contemplated in the event that there should develop any hitch in the new program. The regulations were technical and consisted chiefly of definitions of classes of deposits.

The omnibus banking bill carries provisions for a deposit insurance plan more acceptable to the bankers than the law which would go into effect July 1. The principal difference between the two is that the new bill would remove what bankers have interpreted as an unlimited liability to assessment, impose a lower membership premium, and eliminate a requirement that all state nonmember banks participating in deposit insurance become federal reserve members by July 1, 1937.

REPORTS RUSH TO MEET INCOME TAX PAYMENTS

Springfield, Ill., June 14.—(AP)—With tomorrow the deadline on the second quarterly payment of income taxes, receipts from the eighth district were pouring in, V. Y. Dallman, collector of internal revenue, said today.

Dallman said about $300,000 was received yesterday and more than that amount is expected today. The payments have been from 37 cents to $100,000, the collector said, with about 2,000 more payments due by noon tomorrow. Dallman's district comprises 76 counties.

Borg-Warner Buys Calumet Steel; Names New Officers

Purchase of all capital stock of the Calumet Steel company of Chicago Heights by the Borg-Warner corporation was announced yesterday by C. S. Davis, president of the latter corporation. Borg-Warner will operate Calumet Steel as one of its subsidiaries.

Calumet Steel will continue to manufacture steel bars, shapes, and other products from railroad rails and car axles. Major products of the company include reinforcing steel for concrete construction, merchant bars, bed and bed spring steels, farm implement machinery and equipment steels, steel fence posts, structural steel tubing, furniture steel, wheelbarrow handles, and farm gates.

Assets Once Near $1,000,000.

Davis said the assets of the Calumet company formerly were valued in the neighborhood of $1,000,000, although the purchase price was nowhere near that figure. The Calumet company's plant has been located in Chicago Heights since 1907, when the concern was organized. General offices are at 20 North Wacker drive.

Roy C. Ingersoll has been elected president of the Calumet company. He is a director of the Borg-Warner corporation and president of the Ingersoll Steel and Disc company, a subsidiary of Borg-Warner. F. G. Carrel, formerly secretary of Calumet, was elected vice president and Mathew Keck was made secretary-treasurer.

Carrel Active in Company.

Carrel has been an officer and active in the management of Calumet for twenty-one years. He was organizer of the Rail Steel Bar association.

The new board of the Calumet company includes R. C. Ingersoll, Carrel, S. L. Ingersoll, Frank Matthiessen, and Davis. It is contemplated that the board will shortly be enlarged.

"SIGNALING" RAIL WEEK

Honor Gorman at Rail Week Celebration

Trafic leaders in Chicago yesterday celebrated "Railroad Week" with a luncheon at the Palmer house at which James E. Gorman, trustee of the Rock Island railroad and 71 year old dean of the nation's rail presidents, was guest of honor, and Harry G. Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives, was the principal speaker.

More than 600 members and guests of the Traffic Club of Chicago, the Junior Traffic Club of Chicago, and the Women's Traffic club, who were present, arose to pay tribute to Mr. Gorman. In responding to the tribute Mr. Gorman recalled his early railroad days and his association with several Chicago roads.

Recalls Long Career.

"I have been working for railroads ever since I was seventeen years old," Mr. Gorman said, "and I still believe that railroading is the finest work a man can choose. Looking through the audience I see folks from the Rock Island, the Burlington, the North Western, the Illinois Central and the Santa Fe. I have worked on all these roads, although my longest terms of service have been with the Santa Fe and the Rock Island. Every day I spent with these roads was a happy one and as I near the end of my time I can look back with no regrets."

Railroad week is to be climaxed today with a parade of uniformed rail employés and 25 American Legion drum and bugle corps. The parade will start at 3 p. m. and the line of march will be south from Wacker drive in State street to Jackson, west on Jackson to La Salle and north on La Salle street to Wacker drive, where the parade will disband.

Mayor to Review Parade.

Mayor Kelly, Mr. Taylor, presidents and officials of the railroads and other prominent persons are to be in the reviewing stand in front of the city hall in La Salle street. Railroads participating in the parade will include the North Western, Milwaukee, Illinois Central, Burlington, Santa Fe, Rock Island, Wabash, Alton, Chicago and Eastern Illinois, and the Great Western. There will be a delegation of 500 Pullman porters. Between 20,000 and 25,000 are expected to march.

In his talk before the trafic men, Mr. Taylor said the railroads had been asounted by the public's enthusiastic reception of Railroad week.

"When I was approached with a suggestion for a railroad week I was somewhat skeptical," Taylor said. Taylor said the success of the week may augur well for the future of the railroads and for other industry. The celebration, he asserted, is significant of the latent American spirit that has carried the nation out of difficulties in the past.

The speaker recalled the part the western roads have played in contributing to the prosperity of the country. Last year, he said, they had 360,000 employés with a total pay roll of $600,000,000.

Railroads Recover Courage.

"There was a time during the depression," Taylor continued, "when the railroads were dispirited, but I am glad to say they have recovered from that state of mind. They have demonstrated their unconquerable determination to come back—which is one of the reasons for the success of Railroad week.

"It took courage for the roads to dig down into their pockets for $19,000,000 to pay for the air conditioning of their cars. Some of them said they didn't know where they would get the money, but they got it. Our progress has been due more to the initiative of private enterprise than to any other factor."

At the conclusion of the meeting, the Traffic club of Chicago adopted a resolution condemning legislation now before congress which will add greatly to the financial burdens of the roads. This approval followed similar action taken recently by the Associated Traffic Clubs of America.

POSTAL FILES PETITION ASKING REORGANIZATION

Seeks Relief from Big Debt Burden.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—The Postal Telegraph and Cable company, holding and management company for the various Mackay properties, today began reorganization proceedings under section 77-B of the bankruptcy act in federal court here. The concern is one of the largest and best known which has yet sought to obtain relief from its burdensome debts under the amended bankruptcy law.

The immediate factor which precipitated the action was the July 1 interest payment faced by the company. The company has been borrowing money for some time from its parent concern, International Telephone and Telegraph company, to meet interest requirements.

Assets Total $120,000,000.

The book value of the company's assets is more than $120,000,000. The present company was organized in 1928 as a holding unit for the Mackay properties which were then brought under the operation and control of International Telephone. The Postal Telegraph and Cable system comprises a network of telegraph lines throughout the United States and 37,000 nautical miles of submarine telegraph cables from this country to Europe and the far east. Through its subsidiary, Mackay Radio, the firm also controls an extensive radio communications business.

Officers of the company would not comment on the action today. It was indicated, however, that a statement would be issued later.

Reports Loss Since 1930.

Postal Telegraph has been operating at a loss since 1930. In that year a small profit was earned after provision for bond interest. Last year the company operated at a loss of $1,590,000. In 1933 the deficit reached $1,867,000, while operations of 1932 were $2,354,000 into the red.

The funded debt of the company approximates $50,500,000 on which annual interest charges amount to about $2,500,000. In addition the company has outstanding more than $30,000,000 of preferred stock.

BUDD COMPANY PLANS TO OFFER STOCK, WARANTS

Filing of a registration statement yesterday with the Securities and Exchange commission disclosed the fact that the E. G. Budd Manufacturing company is planning to offer stock about July 16. The Budd company, which has its plant in Philadelphia, is one of the largest manufacturers of automobile accessories in the country and in recent years has been an important figure in the building of streamlined trains.

The statement disclosed that the company proposes to issue 699,715 shares of no par non-cumulative stock and 994,912 warants to purchase 663,275 shares of common. Funds derived from the sale may be used either to pay outstanding indebtedness or for working capital.

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Canada, Ltd., called all 7 per cent preferred shares for payment June 17 at $110 plus accrued dividends of $1.50 a share. Outstanding stock at the close of 1934 amounted to a little over $7,000,000.

FREIGHT TRAFIC SETS NEW PEAK SINCE OCTOBER

Coal Loadings Climb on Strike Threat.

Washington, D. C., June 14.—[Special.]—Railway freight trafic last week reached the highest level since last October, according to the report of the Association of American Railroads, issued today. The total of 630,836 cars for the week was 65,494 cars above the preceding week of this year and 14,068 cars above a year ago.

The sharp rise followed the Memorial day holiday in the preceding week, but was attributed principally to a jump in coal loadings due to the impending advance in anthracite prices and strike threats at the bituminous mines.

Total loadings for the week were also 61,679 cars above the 569,157 cars reported in the corresponding week of 1933. Since the beginning of this year freight trafic has totaled 13,337,082 cars, compared with 13,548,417 a year ago and 11,502,184 in the 1933 period.

Loadings by Groups Compared.

Grain and grain products totaled 24,515 cars, an increase of 1,281 above the preceding week, but reductions of 6,313 below 1934 and 11,492 below 1933. In the western district loadings were 15,253 cars, a decrease of 4,544 below the same week in 1934.

Live stock amounted to 10,911 cars, a decrease of 192 below the preceding week, 4,218 below 1934, and 4,913 below 1933. In the western districts loadings were 7,364 cars, a decrease of 3,754 below 1934.

FRANC ADVANCES SLIGHTLY; POUND EASES ¼ CENT

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—Foreign currencies were fairly steady today, with French francs gaining slightly against the dollar. Pressure on the franc was eased while the Bank of France freely offered gold.

The franc closed at 6.59½ cents, up ¼ point, placing the value of the dollar against the franc at $1.0058, compared with $1.0062 yesterday. Based on the old parity of the franc, the dollar was worth 59.41 cents compared with 59.43 cents yesterday.

Dutch guilders gained 2 points to close at 67.70 cents. Swiss francs remained at 32.62 cents. Pound sterling dipped ¼ cent at $4.94¼.

The London price of bar gold was reduced 2 pence to 140 shillings 8 pence a fine ounce, equivalent to $34.79. At this price an amount valued at $329,000 was traded.

The federal reserve bank reported receipt of $29,091,100 of gold from France, $1,415,300 from Canada, and $41,900 from Nicaragua.

Halts Reappointing Fahey to Home Loan Bank Board

Washington, D. C., June 14.—(AP)—Senator Russell [Dem., Ga.] today objected to immediate confirmation of John H. Fahey of Massachusetts for reappointment to a six year term on the federal home loan bank board. He asked that consideration be deferred for the time being. Asked off the floor if he intended to fight the nomination, the Georgian said there had been "too much autocracy and czarism" in the home loan agency and he wanted several days to look into the matter. He added several other senators were interested.

UTILITY OMITS DIVIDEND DUE TO FEDERAL THREAT

American Power Fears Holding Company Bill.

New York, June 14.—[Special.]—The first unfavorable dividend action as a result of the impending legislation to abolish "unnecessary" utility holding companies was taken today by the American Power and Light company, subsidiary of the Electric Bond and Share company, when its directors decided to defer action on preferred stock dividends.

After the meeting the directors issued the following statement to shareholders:

"In view of the increasing government threat to the continued existence of your company and to the business of its subsidiaries, and notwithstanding the company's favorable cash and earnings position, the directors at their meeting today decided to take no action on preferred stock dividends at this time."

Has Paid Part of Dividends.

The company has been paying 37½ cents a share on the $6 preferred and 31¼ cents a share on the $5 preferred issue since late in 1932. By omitting the dividends due at this time arrearages on the issue amount to $11.37½ a share and on the $5 preferred to $10.31¼ a share.

With Electric Bond and Share company owning 51,840 shares of American Power's $5 preferred stock, passage of payment on the issue cuts Bond and Share's return from its investment by about $16,000 this quarter. Besides its holding of about 5 per cent of the total $5 preferred stock Bond and Share owes 937,209 shares of common stock of American Power, or 31.1 per cent of the total outstanding.

Both preferred issues sold off sharply after the announcement. The $6 issue sold around 19½, against a closing price of 23¾ yesterday. At 17½ the $5 preferred issue was off about 3 points from its previous close. Later in the day both issues regained a fraction of their losses.

Declares 25 Cents Extra.

The Augusta and Savannah railroad today declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a share and the regular semi-annual of $1.50 a share, both payable July 1.

Carolina Power and Light declared accumulation dividends of $1.75 a share on the $7 preferred and $1.50 a share on the $6 preferred, both payable July 1.

Columbia Investing voted a liquidation dividend of 50 cents a share on the common, payable June 20.

Universal Chain Theaters paid the third liquidating dividend of $2.50 a share on the 8 per cent preferred as of May 15.

BUSINESS URGED TO USE TRADE BOARD'S CODES

lational Chamber Points to 'Advisory' Statute.

Washington, D. C., June 14.—(AP)—American business tonight was urged to turn to the federal trade commission for codes of fair practice by Harper Sibley, president of the chamber of commerce of the United States.

Indicating a new course of business action to follow the abandonment of most of NRA, Sibley advised that the Supreme court decision be used to point the way which business cooperators may travel.

The chamber president spoke after a day's meeting of the chamber's board of directors, which, tomorrow, will release a statement outlining a program for organized business for the coming year.

Gratified by Industry's Action.

The board adopted a resolution recording its "gratification at the whole hearted way in which business enterprises generally have proceeded voluntarily and in reliance upon their own efforts to maintain orderly and just conditions in their relations with their employés, with one another, and with the public."

If Sibley's advice is generally followed there exists the possibility of a widespread development of fair business practice agreements, which would cover much of what was in the NRA codes except labor provisions.

Sibley recalled a statute, enacted last year, "almost without public notice." This statute, he said, "for the first time gives authority to the federal courts to hand down declaratory judgments, probably the nearest approach to be had to effective 'opinions in advance' respecting anti-trust laws which many business men so long have asked.

Wording of Statute.

"This federal statute reads:

"In cases of actual controversy the courts of the United States shall have power upon petition . . . or other appropriate pleadings to declare rights and other legal relations of any interested party petitioning for such declaration . . . and such declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree and be reviewable as such."

Sibley mentioned especially a Supreme court decision which he said gave "full authority to trade associations to interchange information which would prevent a glut of markets, an end sought under NRA, although attempted through arbitrary restriction of production."

Trade associations have long sought an interchange of price and other information, but the status of such exchanges has always been legally controversial.

ILLINOIS SUES TO REGAIN FUNDS IN CLOSED BANK

Peoria, Ill., June 14.—[Special.]—Proceedings to recover $37,654 of state funds that a former state director of conservation unlawfully deposited with the National Bank of Pontiac, now in receivership, were started in United States District court today by Edward J. Barrett, auditor of public accounts.

Contending that the bank unlawfully accepted the money from R. F. Bradford between 1930 and 1933, the state auditor asked the court to order George Wilson, receiver of the bank, to restore the money out of all present assets of the bank. The money, representing fees, fines, and penalties under game laws, should have been deposited with the state treasurer as specifically directed by the game laws under which it was collected, Barrett contended.

Knowing that Bradford was not complying with the law, Barrett charged, the bank accepted the money and purported to place it in a "pretended account" under the name of Bradford and commingled with the rest of its assets, until there was no trace of it after the bank went into receivership in 1933.

Peabody Coal Shows Loss; Had Profit in Prior Year

The Peabody Coal company and subsidiaries yesterday reported consolidated net loss of $260,092 for the year ended April 30, compared with a net profit of $534,922 in the preceding fiscal year. There was a special charge off during 1934 or $625,342 for losses on property abandoned or revalued and the balance of deferred mine mechanization expense written off. Current assets on April 30 totaled $6,455,753, including cash of $1,809,837 and government securities of $1,505,814, against current liabilities of $2,739,586. This compares with current assets of $5,867,530, including cash of $2,301,204 and government securities of $45,000, against current liabilities of $2,386,051 at the end of the preceding year.

Officers Will Arrive Today for Radio-Keith Meeting

MEAT DECLINE CHECKS BUYING OF LIVE STOCK

Lower wholesale meat prices held live stock buying in check yesterday. Beef at the various distributing points sold weak to 50 cents lower; veal was weak to $1 lower, and lamb and pork sold steady to $1 lower, with the clearance for all classes the poorest in weeks.

Top fresh pork loins in the Chicago area fell to $23 per hundred pounds, the lowest in a month. This price showed a drop of $3 in two weeks. Evidence that the consumers' strike situation in New York is much improved, failed to stimulate buying of live stock here.

Fresh receipts of cattle were augmented by several carloads of good to choice grades of steers carried by salesmen since early in the week, but these were locked up again. The trade is carrying a nominal quotation of $13.50 for top steers, the kinds that sold at $16.25 on May 1, but nothing sold above $11 on yesterday's session.

The bulk of actual sales at $8.50 to $10 consisted chiefly of 700 to 1,000 pound steers of the kinds that have escaped with little decline this week.

Another sharp decline hit the lamb market, carrying prices $1 to $1.50 under last week's close. Top new crop natives fell to $8.75.

Not enough light new crop hogs were available yesterday to fill the limited buying orders, resulting in a 10 cents upturn for selected grades weighing under 225 pounds during the first rounds, but after this action subsided the rank and file of offerings moved slowly on a mostly steady basis. Top sales advanced 10 cents to $12.25, tax included, while the average rose only 5 cents to $11.65.
